Col. Cheves, of Kentucky, has just delivered two very able lectures on "Temperance," and organized a lodge of Good Templars here. Both addresses were forcible, logical and conclusive, while by a sally of wit he occasionally fixed some great truth in minds too firmly, we hope, to be eradicated. His remarks on our weekly prayer meeting, in reference to the efficacy of prayer combined with the efficacy of work, were very grateful to Christian hearts, and we could but think, as he uttered them, if all temperance speakers sent out by the Lecture Bureau "know" as well as he "what they're talking about," prohibition must succeed and America soon become a nation of sober, able men instead of a nation of dram sellers and dram drinkers.

We are anticipating great pleasure and profit from the approaching District Conference, to meet at this place in March, when many ministers, laymen and Bishop Galloway are expected.

Many negroes have gone; yet people are preparing for spring work as though Sambo still remained in all his pristine glory among us. Some even argue that the country will be better off for "the exodus." Time will prove how this will be. This is an "old town;" yet may we not hope it has reached that happy stage in existence when the fervor of youth is but tempered by the experience of years, and that a happy and prosperous "green old age" awaits it?

How true are Rev. Dr. Hunnicutt's views of the personal influence of teachers! No wonder St. Paul places them next to prophets and before miracle workers, etc. (1 Cor. xii, 28.) Eternity will show the grand and noble work for humanity that good teachers have done, are doing and will yet do in the world, for only eternity can reveal it.

SUMMIT, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Summit charge has "cleared the decks." The work consists of three appointments, with only about two hundred members, and yet the collections ordered by the Conference for this work amounts to $155. We have raised by cash and subscriptions between $160 and $170. Every church has met its assessment with a surplus. There has been a forward movement in other particulars. Three family altars have been reared in homes where heretofore they were unknown, and the prospects are very favorable for "more to follow." On entering a house, not long ago, where a family altar had recently been erected, a little child, who could barely speak distinctly enough to be understood, clambered upon my knee, and said, "Bro. Lewis, we have prayers all the time now." How the little fellows enjoy religion in the home circle!

In addition to all this, long-neglected religious duties are being resumed, and with the return of spring there seems to be a returning of spiritual vigor.

B. F. LEWIS.

SPARTA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I feel devoutly thankful that it has been my lot to find so many warm-hearted friends on this (Sparta) work. I, therefore, ask this space to express my gratitude to God and them for the kindness of my brethren which they have shown towards me. As I have gone around this work the Lord has been with us and has blessed all our efforts to do his services. The good people have bought a parsonage here, and we are at home for this Conference year. May God bless the people of this charge with a great revival of religion this year!

PHILIP BURKETT, P. C.

RINGGOLD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: As I have the names of several subscribers to send, allow me to inform the brethren that we arrived at Ringgold safe, and the lines have fallen in pleasant places.

Brethren, the harvest is great here, and we are praying for and expecting, by the grace of God, to reap it for the Master. He has promised to be with us; and, glory be to his name! we realize that he is with us—yea, the fire is already started. Pray for us; our needs are great.

Yours in Christ,

HARRY W. MAY.

The Pastor in His Study.

It is a temptation to which a young minister is very liable, to study only for his next preaching service. He may read more or less, in a desultory way, but his hours of genuine study are all given to the preparation of his sermons. This is a very improvident method. A man who labors in this way fills his mind during six days, and empties it on the seventh. He lives from hand to mouth, gathering every week materials only for the week's sermon or sermons, and with but slight accumulations of knowledge. The mind receives little nourishment, and makes little growth. Even the sermons improve far less than such incessant labor upon them might be thought to promise. The result is likely to be the production of discourses which are commended as good, in various degrees of excellence, but are not very effective, and a ministry liable to an early decay of power and influence. Hence the wonder sometimes expressed, that "so superior a preacher" is not more in demand.

Every pastor is called upon, for the highest interests of his ministry, to grow, not only in grace, but in knowledge. To this end he must study, and study systematically. Over and above the investigations required by his sermons, there should be, in regular progress, some study upon a line determined and pursued with perseverance. There should be biblical study, not merely of texts and contexts, but of books; theological study, not merely of "points" for the next sermon or two, but of topics; historical study—biblical history, ecclesiastical and missionary history, including biographies of the great and good, and general, especially ancient, history—verifying the truth that all history is the record of God's providence.

As for the time required to pursue the studies indicated, it is coming to be a truism that we have all the time there is, and that it is for each man to decide for himself how he will spend it. A veteran theological teacher recommends to his students, when they are settled in the pastorate, to spend the first hour in the study each day in studying the general subject proposed. This is on the principle that the immediate pressure of sermon preparation, if yielded to at first, will crowd everything else to the wall. Secure one hour each day for the something else, and the sermon will still make room for itself. And yet more, if the something else is a well-chosen study, the time left for the sermon will be worth more, in proportion as the mind is better trained and better furnished for sermon work.

We are aware that, in the urgency of practical life, ministers as well as others are liable to the impression that their work must all be done under pressure, sacrificing everything else to immediate effect. But the better trained and furnished mind will bear more pressure and will accomplish larger results. It is economy of time to secure the hour for the larger study before concentrating the mind upon the week's special task. It may require special strength and tenacity of purpose to form and adhere to such a plan; but, if formed, and adhered to long enough to make it a habit and a matter of course, it will, by that time, have proved its value by a satisfactory experience of labor and achievement.—Watchman.

SING HALLELUJAHS.—Dr. John Hall believes in rehearsing beforehand our celestial songs of praise. This is his exhortation, especially to aged saints:

Have a rocking chair in some large room at the top of the house, all cozy, quiet and clean, and in some of the old familiar tunes of the village church of your childhood, sing by the hour, with an open mouth and a loud voice—not on a penny-whistle pitch—the psalms and hymns and spiritual songs of Wesley and Watts, of David or Moses.

Sing away, and rock away, and don't be afraid if your neighbors do think you are a Methodist; for, if you are a live one, the angels won't be ashamed of you; but while you are singing, think what the words mean, and let your heart go out in that meaning; think, too, of the many who used to sing these same songs with you, but who can sing them no more now, for their lips are still in death, and their sweet voices are hushed in the churchyard grave, to be heard no more until you join together in singing the hallelujahs of the skies.

Evangelism.

Since the number of successful evangelists is small, and the demands upon them are so numerous, it is not possible to meet the needs of the church in this way. Thousands of communities can not secure the services of Moody or Pentecost or Mills, or any other of the noted evangelists of our day. Shall they, therefore, fold their hands demurely and wait their turn? The Word of the Lord says "No." It provides for just such an emergency when it says to every commissioned preacher of the Word, "Do the work of an evangelist." What is the distinctive work of an evangelist? The bearing of good tidings of salvation through Christ to the lost. This is not merely to the lost souls that attend the house of God regularly, but rather to those outside the regular lines of church influence. Within the sound of the church bell, in every community, there are hundreds of souls that never respond to its call. They need the gospel of Christ. They will not come and get it—the evangelist must go and get them. His chief work is to reach them outside of regular church influence. In most of our churches the pastor confines himself to the flock committed to him, the sheep in the fold, but he knows very little about the "other sheep" as yet unbrought. To do the work of an evangelist he must seek to save this element. He has been fishing near the shore of his own congregation, and has caught little. It is always hard to catch fish in streams nearly fished out. The few that are left are proof against the ordinary tactics of the angler. The evangelist "launches out into the deep." He works a new stream. To do the work of an evangelist requires something more than this. It requires special methods. The law of adaptation must be followed. There must be adaptation in the character and time of the services. The prayers, the singing, the preaching, must all be fitted to produce the one result, viz: acceptance of the gospel message. "This one thing I do" must dominate the meeting. Evangelistic work is successful in proportion as it is followed up. The inquiry meeting is the backbone of evangelistic effort. The personal dealing with souls under conviction is the secret of large ingatherings. The preaching in the demonstration of the Spirit, and with power, expects results. The meetings must be held with sufficient frequency to hold attention to the one supreme object—the conversion of souls. If these meetings tax the strength of the pastor, let him call in his brethren if they are not likewise engaged; if they are, let him keep on in the strength of the Lord. "Death from too much evangelistic work" is very rare. Evangelistic work demands much prayer for the Spirit and much work in the Spirit. It demands united prayer and effort on the part of God's children. Without this combined effort the work of the greatest evangelist is in vain. Who of God's children will help their pastor "to do the work of an evangelist" in the community in which they live? What pastor will obey the injunction of Paul "about to be offered" to his beloved Timothy, "Do the work of an evangelist"?—Intelligencer.

Sowing Wild Oats.

What Dr. Crosby says in The Church Union is worth printing in letters of gold:

"A phrase has long been in common use which has wrought great evil. It is that of 'sowing wild oats.' It implies that youth must have a time of wickedness, the defying of authority and the abuse of opportunity, after which all will come right. Never was there a more diabolical lie. That which you sow you shall reap; if you sow wild oats, you shall reap wild oats. Not one instance can be found in all humanity where the evils indulged in in youth did not mar and scar the soul through life.

"There's a penetrability and permanency in the virus of indulgence that defies every remedy for removal while we are in the flesh. The indulgence in sin is directly contrary to the aspiration for manliness which is so conspicuous in youth, and which we desire to make enduring; and hence, in order to meet this difficulty, we are apt in our youth to modify our notion of manliness, to eliminate from its definition many of its most important elements, and so to reduce it that it will allow the otherwise prohibited indulgences. We hold on, for example, to the doctrine that manliness forbids lying—it would be a disgrace to us to be found stating what was not so—but we permit the look or the silence that is the same as a lie. We hold on to the doctrine that it is unmanly to harm the honor of woman, but we permit the low jest and the vile story to be circulated in our company. We hold on to the doctrine that every man's person is sacred, but we count it manly to strike the blow of revenge, or to varnish over the vengeance by a challenge to mortal combat; and so we narrow more and more our definition of manliness, until at length we get it so narrow that it will not be in our way when a temptation to sin calls us."

SYNONYMS FOR SATAN.—A remarkable special study has been made recently of Milton's "Paradise Lost," by Mr. Charles Jacobus, of New Brunswick, N. J. From the first six books of that great work he has collected the many and various titles given to the Prince of Darkness, illustrating thus, not only the copious and felicitous vocabulary of the poet, but also the many-sided character for evil of the arch-enemy, which admits the application to him of so many "hard names" with entire truthfulness. The list appears in the National Journal of Education, and is as follows, in the order of occurrence in the books:

"The apostate angel, chief of many throned powers, arch-fiend, lost archangel, great sultan, mighty chief, dread commander, the archangel, superior fiend, their matchless chief, their mighty paramount, antagonist of heaven, adversary of God and man, the undaunted fiend, the traitor angel, the monarch, mighty leading angel, the fiend, the spirit malign, the devil, the false dissembler, the fraudulent impostor foul, the spirit impure, the tempter, the first that practiced falsehood, artificer of fraud, the arch-felon, the first grand thief, the grisly king, revolted spirit, the prince of hell, courageous thief, sly hypocrite, the false archangel, alienate from God, spirit accursed, the envier of his (God's) state, the proud aspirer, the apostate, the arch-foe, author of evil, adversary."

No doubt interesting additions could be made to this catalogue by pushing the search through the remaining books. Who will read them anew for this purpose?

To those subject to the vexations of business life, dyspepsia and a feeling of debility, irritability and despondency, we say, take Simmons Liver Regulator. The Regulator is free from any injurious mineral substance; not disagreeable; can be taken at any time without interfering with business or pleasure. It is gentle, safe, and a good digestor. It is unequalled in the cure of piles, constipation, bad breath, sick headache and bilious complaints.

Sing in fine weather! Any bird can do that. Praising God when all goes well is commonplace work. Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Foreboadings, Nervousness, Fevers, Dizziness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this end as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the miraculous changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver refuses to act its part. It is the driving wheel in the machinery of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

For KIDNEY DISEASES

PROVIDED BY NATURE

IN THAT GREAT REMEDY,

KIDNEY-WORT

When the Kidneys become clogged or torpid, disease quickly gains foothold, because these organs are nature's sluiceway through which all poisonous humors are washed out of the system. MANY DISEASES affecting other organs are also caused by these humors being forced into the blood, causing terrible suffering. LIVER COMPLAINT, PILES, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, etc., may all be brought about in this way.

If you are sick, or feel tired out or low-spirited, and need a tonic, cathartic, or blood purifier, nothing will do you so much good as KIDNEY-WORT.

Briefs.

John Wesley was a remarkable man in one peculiar respect. If ever a man had a good reason for writing a long obituary, it was on the occasion of the death of his remarkable brother, Charles. And yet, according to his biographer, Rev. John Telford, this is the obituary he sent forth to the world:

Mr. Charles Wesley, who, after spending fourscore years with much sorrow and pain, quietly retired into Abraham's bosom. He had no disease; but, after a gradual decay of some months,

"The weary wheels of life stood still at last."

His least praise was his talent for poetry, although Dr. Watts did not scruple to say that that single poem, "Wrestling Jacob," was worth all the verses he himself had written.

Brad-street's Weekly has this to say in regard to commercial gambling:

It is time that something was done to check the growing evil of gambling, pure and simple, in produce, cotton, petroleum and railway share quotations. A beginning has been made, but the movement has not gone far enough. The marvelous growth in wealth and power of such institutions, as the New York Produce and Stock and Cotton Exchanges and the Chicago Board of Trade has naturally developed a train of what once were minor evils. These excrescences have multiplied rapidly, and so dangerously near do they come to being popular among certain classes that the mercantile community owe it to themselves to apply the knife at once.

Some facts culled from the report of the Board of Church Extension of the Northern brethren may be encouraging to our own people working on the same line:

Since the Board began its work, in the year 1865, it has helped to build 5,805 churches—more than half of the entire increase of Methodism since this work began. It has collected and disbursed nearly $3,000,000. It has built up a permanent loan fund of $550,000. Out of this fund it has loaned $954,792—aiding by loans 1,763 churches worth $6,918,950, with sittings for 507,515 persons; and if we average the 5,805 churches aided by both grants and loans as having a seating capacity of 300 for each church, the Board of Church Extension has helped to furnish a place to hear the gospel of Jesus Christ to 1,741,500 persons.

This shows what can be done. Now let everyone help on the work of church extension.

The Methodist Times (London) estimates that to place Methodism in London on a numerical equality with Methodism in the provinces, 450 new chapels, each to accommodate a thousand persons, should be at once erected, involving an expenditure of between four and five millions sterling.

Something like this inequality of numbers between country and city Methodism obtains here. The population of our city equals, at least, one-fourth the population of the State. The Methodists of the city are about one-seventh of the Methodists of the State, not counting eight parishes which are included in the Mississippi Conference. Excluding these eight parishes, the Methodists of South Louisiana only equal about one-fourth those of the whole State; and yet the population of that Southern section is about one-half the population of the State. There are many parishes in Southern Louisiana where there is no preaching or church work done by any Protestant denomination.

Church Membership.

Our Lord has told us that one of the essentials of true discipleship is a public attestation of our approbation and acceptance of him. We take it that this open profession of Christ is the meaning of our church membership as regards the world. "Ye are my witnesses." Secrecy is entirely foreign to the nature and intent of testimony. A secret witness can hardly be considered a faithful witness. The church is that organization, effected by the Lord and inhabited by the Holy Spirit, through whose ordinances and means of grace the followers of Christ work for the glory of the Master in the salvation of souls. If this is a true statement of the purpose of a church in the world, it is plain that every person seeking to serve God in the most efficient way must make an open profession of him by joining that organization which he has established for the carrying out his purposes among men.

Church membership is also the best testimony we can give of our approval of the instruments and agencies Christ is using by his Spirit to accomplish the salvation of souls. When we join the church, we say that what Christ has done and is now doing through the church has our approbation, and that we desire to become co-workers with him in this great work. It is a recommendation of the effectiveness of his methods. It is a scenic representation to outside people of the invitation, "Come thou with us and we will do thee good." The effectiveness of this recommendation to others, however, by an open church membership, is largely influenced by the degree of heartiness which characterizes our entrance into the church and our prosecution of church work. If we are dragged into the church like a galley-slave to his oar, no sensible man sees anything in that to recommend the church to him, and our church work under that condition will be anything else than hearty. If we come into the church with the feeling that we are entering a hospital, whose wards are filled with the diseased, and whose atmosphere is saturated with the miasm of death, there is little in that profession to attract others, and our church work will be as sickly as our church. But if we get the true idea, and with open eyes and beating hearts and strong hands and restless feet and the desire to do something good flaming up into the master passion of the soul, we come into the church as God's great workshop, whose different departments are full of earnest men and busy women, planning and scheming and devising and executing for the purpose of reconstructing the mighty ruins of humanity into a temple that shall be a fit residence for the Lord of glory; then we display a heartiness which attracts everybody, and church work, stimulated by the emulation of hearty co-workers, becomes the chief joy of the soul. In that case, all we have to do is to cry to the Spirit of wisdom to interpret to our consciences the doctrines and precepts and facts of the divine Word. When we take these facts and precepts and doctrines as interpreted to us by the Spirit, and translate them to others in the universally understood language of earnest deeds, we have made the profession that most honors the Master and prove our claim to the only church membership that is worth anything.

The Richmond Christian Advocate has a scathing article on the hypocrisy of the world: this hypocrisy being demonstrated by the inequality with which it administers justice, by its opposition to all efforts directed against vice, by its aversion to Christianity which is man's only hope for social progress. All these show the world to be the greatest hypocrite in human history. "Love not the world."

Public Prayer.

BY J. B. A. AHRENS, D. D.

It would seem that intimate converse with God, true prayer, belongs to the closet. Thither, too, our Lord directs us. The heart shrinks from publicity when its lamentable confessions, its longings and desires are expressed in prayer to God. Nevertheless, public prayer has scriptural authorization. The prayer which Christ taught his disciples is a public prayer, directing them to say, "Our Father"—the plural being maintained throughout. The Psalmist desired to praise the Lord in the "great congregation;" and reverently avows, "Thou hast been our dwelling-place in all generations." The prophets prayed publicly; and in the Jewish ritual public prayer constituted an important part.

Public prayer is respresentative prayer. The conductor of a religious meeting properly precedes his prayer with remarking, "Let us pray." Calling upon another to pray, the party called upon is requested to lead in prayer. Leading presupposes following. The one praying becomes the spokesman of the entire assembly.

Without gainsaying, public prayer is very difficult. Many pious Christians succeed poorly in public prayer. Disgusting platitudes, nauseating commonplace and stereotyped iterations alternate. On the one hand, we have often an abundance of vague and even meaningless generalities; on the other hand, an exuberance of egotistic specialties. Successful public prayer requires, that we, for the time being, think, feel, hear, hope, yearn and pray, weep and entreat representatively. With more preciseness and rapidity than with photographic apparatus the situation, circumstances, sentiments, wants, desires of those assembled are portrayed to the mind. The imagination enables the spiritual representation. Our identity is, so to speak, temporarily absorbed by that of others; the souls of others are blended with ours. We lament or exult for others, in behalf of others. Being in thoroughly sympathetic accord with others, our prayer becomes the prayer of those praying with us. True public prayer succeeds in enlisting in prayer all attendants, even as the performer on a piano employs all the keys in reciting one of the musical masterpieces. The congregation is, as it were, the stringed instrument. The one leading in true public prayer touches all the strings in due order, bringing about celestial melody.

One of the greatest evils besetting public prayer is its degeneracy into a pious harangue, intended for the delectation or edification of the hearers, with God in the background for purposes of occasional reference and rounding of otherwise rugged sentences. Have often been horrified when in so-called public prayer God is not directly addressed, but is made mention of in the third person. This is really sacrilegious. Who has not heard the brother praying, after you had preached, endeavoring to explain your text more fully? Who has not been filled with sadness when a brother availed himself of the opportunity which public prayer afforded to punish his enemies by hitting right and left? Who was not mortified when the pretended public prayer was flowing over with toadyism and sycophantic palaver?

In conclusion, a few practical hints. 1. Speak audibly when leading in prayer. Keep your head erect. Why should you hide it behind the pulpit or bench? Burying our face in our hands when publicly praying is an abomination. 2. Employ chaste, classic language. The street slang would offend, the technical terms of scientists would bewilder many. 3. Be short. Discard the erudite, ornate exordium. Interres. Praise, pray, stop. Grandiloquent perorations are a nuisance. The peroration to the Lord's Prayer is not of Divine origin. 4. Pray—yes, pray; by all means pray when you publicly pray.

Bishop Galloway's Article Endorsed.

BY "GILDERDY."

Bishop Galloway is right in "A Suggestion" as to "Our Church Colleges" in your issue of February 10. We have lost much along this line by scattering our forces. We have dissipated our school interest—dissipated our money and our patronage. This waste should be stopped at once. A wiser policy ought to prevail. A college for three or four Conferences is enough; one for each Conference, too many. Perhaps one university is enough for the whole Southern Methodist Church. The colleges ought to be the feeders of the university; and good high schools, the feeders of the colleges. Our schools should grade upward in this way. We can not support a college in every town nor a high school in every village. Local interests and connectional enterprise are in antagonism. If Methodism is anything, it is connectional. The location of our houses of worship, the plans of our circuits and districts—all look to the general good. Every man can not have a church at his own door, nor can each Conference have a college worthy of the name. We have wasted our strength and our money by diffusion.

We ought to concentrate upon some school, centrally located, and bend all our energies and send our patronage that way for many years until we build up a school of far-reaching power. Colleges grow; they are not made and handed down complete. A charter from the Legislature will not make a college. The adoption and approval of an Annual Conference will not make one. Legislatures are, as a general rule, only too ready to charter almost anything that asks for a charter. Most Annual Conferences are all too ready to take anything under their wing that asks for protection. Some of them spread over this, that and the other local interest until they most kill themselves spreading. The compliment implied in asking protection must be rewarded by granting whatever is asked for. This thing has come to be a reproach in many places. So many little things endorsed and approved by an Annual Conference have failed, or had not begun, that the approval of a Conference has come to be a sure sign of failure. Our Conferences ought to be more saving of smiles—too many have been wasted on nothing.

I have thought it might be well to take the grist mills and saw mills under the patronage of the Conference. They could offer to grind and saw for the preachers at half price or at reduced rates. As a rule, in many places this would be inducement enough to secure the endowment of the Conference and some free advertising for a few years. The patronage of a Conference ought to mean something, ought to be worth something; but many of our Conferences have patronized nothing but foregone failures.

For one, I am heartily in favor of putting my foot down on this whole thing so far as my own Conference is concerned. With, perhaps, two exceptions, this Conference has endorsed dead schools only or else it has killed all it endorsed. We have wasted a world of good wind and have done nothing. Let's halt.

In the North India Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, last year there were 1,700 baptisms, 22,000 in the Sunday-schools, and 10,000 nominal Christians connected with the mission.

Grammatical and Critical.

Two verses in the sixth chapter of Luke present a very singular instance of grammatical deficiency. They are as follows:

"And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases; and they that were vexed with unclean spirits; and they were healed." (Vs. 17, 18.)

The question, grammatical, is, How to parse the words "company" and "multitude." The question, logical, is, What is said about the company and the multitude? Nothing in our English version would forbid us to govern these words by one of the prepositions "with" and "in" found in the preceding clauses; but the Greek forbids this, both the nouns being in the nominative case in the Greek. I was disappointed at finding the sentence as incomplete in the Greek as in the English, and still more disappointed in referring to the New Version to find that those learned men, though changing the translation of the passage somewhat, give us no relief on this point.

Three of the best ancient MSS.—the Alexandrian, the Vatican and the Sinaitic—authorize the eighteenth verse to be translated, "And they that were vexed with unclean spirits were healed:" so that no help can be derived from the verse in determining the relations of the words under consideration. The seventeenth verse must then supply or suggest the means of solving its own difficulties. We may conjecture the word "stood" as intended to be supplied by the mind of the reader, though the word "stood" in the preceding clause is the translation of a singular verb in the Greek, which refers to Jesus only. The meaning would then be, "The multitude and company stood in the plain." Or, we may suppose "hoi" to be omitted from the Greek, and "which" from the English: the meaning would then be, "The company and the multitude came to hear him."

Perhaps the editor of this Advocate, or the Book Editor at Nashville, or some other scholar, can give us a better solution of this question. W. L. C. H.

A Good Move.—A meeting of the pastors of the Methodist Churches in this city and one representative layman from each church was held in the Advocate office, March 4, for the purpose of organizing the special mission work in destitute portions of the city. An organization was effected, and the zeal of those present gives promise of much enlargement of Methodism in our midst. The problem of saving the world is becoming more and more the problem of saving the cities. We are satisfied that our holy Christianity is equal to any demand that is made upon it. All that our Lord requires of us is loyalty to him in all respects and devotion to his cause in all circumstances.

Henry Ward Beecher.—This distinguished preacher and lecturer died Tuesday morning last, at half-past nine o'clock, from paralysis received last Saturday. Mr. Beecher has been a prominent man in this country for more than a generation. As a preacher and lecturer, has had very few equals, and has made a fame as wide as the language which he used so beautifully. But "one event happeneth to all," and Henry Ward Beecher, too, has passed away. He lived out his three-score years and ten.

The liquor dealers now say "they are trying to improve and elevate" their business. Their plan for making drunkards and broken-hearted women and ragged, starving children seems to us can hardly be improved, and as for elevation with them, it is invariably downwards.

Notes.

Frequently of late we have noticed dispatches in regard to Mormon missionaries operating in the South. Two hundred converts to this diabolism left Chattanooga last week for Utah. They are said to have been from every Southern State. Ought that sort of missionary work to be permitted?

The White Cross Army, a movement begun by the Bishop of Durham in 1883, is spreading extensively through England and the United States. It is an organized effort to promote personal purity. The pledge is, "to treat all women with respect, to try to put down all indecent language, to maintain the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women, and to spread these principles." The movement, we are glad to state, is growing among our young men in this city.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate gives some fine points on "Effective Preaching." We commend them to all our preachers. Simplicity of language! If you want your ideas to be seen, set them in a clear atmosphere. Moral courage! If you want God's help, show yourself as worthy of it. Persistency! These make up effective preaching.

A writer in the Catholic World, for March, thinks "the chief hope of success for the church among our brethren in black is to educate young colored men for the priesthood for labor among their own people." After Columbus showed the doubting courtiers how to make an egg stand on its end, the thing was plain to nearly everybody!

Zion's Herald, in reference to the Chattanooga question, which is so stirring the Methodist Episcopal Church, said last week: "The church does not force social relations, but she forbids exclusive religious or educational institutions." Forbidding exclusiveness in religion and education, and yet not forcing social relations—well, it seems to us that somebody is in that precise condition of which it is said, "He will catch at a straw."

The St. Louis Christian Advocate has an admirable article on the much-asked question, "How to reach the masses?" First, a Christly ministry; second, a Christly church; third, "chapels, chapels, chapels;" fourth, every man to the work. Men, women and children to the front. Every church member in alliance with God, filled with his Spirit and armed with his power." Then the masses will be reached and saved.

A saloon keeper in Philadelphia, who had not been to church in twenty-four years, gave as a reason, that he thought saloon keeping and religion incompatible. This is a sharp thrust at those members of the church who are saloon keepers by the barrel, and yet are regular attendants upon the house of the Lord. Their consciences must be hard indeed not to recognize the incompatibility and the inconsistency of their position.

An exchange proposes that a new society be inaugurated. It is to be known to the world as the S. A. P. N. N.—the Society for the Abatement of the Pulpit Notice Nuisance. When a useful pastor is objected to as not being good at reading notices, it is time for something to be done. We favor the S. A. P. N. N.

Thomas W. Knox, in an article on "Standing Room Only," in the Forum, for March, discussing the rapid increase of population all over the world, seems to come to the conclusion, that if all the armies in the world were disbanded and uninterrupted peace should prevail, it would not be a great while before there would be a universal famine. He grounds this idea upon the teaching of those social philosophers who hold that "population, unchecked, increases in geometrical ratio, while food can only be made to increase in arithmetical ratio." Wars and pestilences and famines and floods and earthquakes and other disasters by which human lives are destroyed are not, then, unmixed evils! Abs, for human speculations!

Sam Jones had to go to Boston before our Wesleyan brethren across the water could hear of him. Suddenly they have waked up to the fact of his real existence. The Methodist Times, of London, of February 17, begins a column of notes on him with this tremendous sentence: "It is probable that the most extraordinary and significant fact in the Christian world just now is the evangelistic work of Sam Jones." After speaking in very commendatory words of Sam Jones' opinion regarding repentance, the Times closes its article thus: "As soon as a powerful minority of Englishmen are of Sam Jones' opinion, Ireland will be reconciled, pauperism will cease, the military estimates will give no occasion for discussion and gentlemen who have shares in breweries will be anxious to sell them." If Sam Jones don't make a visit to England now, he will lose a wonderful opportunity!

A Little Trip.

We had the pleasure of a two days' visit to Brookhaven, Miss., during the past week. A trip to the country and country towns always revives in us the old home-sickness, and we feel that one square mile of country is worth a dozen cities. Being the guest of President Fitzhugh, of Whitworth, gave the opportunity of going through and examining the college in all its departments of work. The grounds and buildings are most commodious, and "beautiful for situation." The appliances for work in the different departments are many and varied. Indeed, the whole equipment is of the best kind, and good work is being done by the president and his corps of able teachers. The coming commencement promises to be a brilliant affair. In looking about the premises, we discovered only one thing that was needed. There is a vacant lot between the school building and Margaret Hall that needs to be occupied by a magnificent center building. Let the brother who desires to do an untold good to the future women of the land and, through them, to the coming generations, see to it that that space is filled with the right kind of a building before he goes hence. There is a great risk in wills. What the Louisiana law calls "donation inter vivos" is the thing for these times. Then the donor has the satisfaction of seeing his money in the work of well-doing.

We had the pleasure of preaching to large and interesting congregations in the Methodist Church and forming new acquaintances whose kind words were quite encouraging. An hour with Bishop Galloway and family was not the least of the pleasures afforded by the trip. We returned home, feeling more than ever assured of the truth, "God made the country, but man made the city."

Note from Dr. Adams.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to ask all who were ever students at Centenary College, whether graduates or not, to give me information relative to themselves, their whereabouts, occupation, condition, etc. The friends of such as are dead will do their friends and myself a kindness to give me the desired items. My purpose is to publish a catalogue of Centenary, with register as nearly complete as possible.

The ministerial students have organized a Centenary College Association. It will be a brace to both that department of the college and to the Conferences.

The Ministerial Educational Aid Society of the Mississippi Conference is taking on new lease of life. Let the brethren continue their work, and a new era will dawn on Centenary.

The Young Men's Christian Association is an arm of the service which has already accomplished good, materially and morally. They have a nice hall fitted up in the college.

The literary societies and one secret are fitting up their halls. A lack of funds is all that prevents your correspondent from like enterprise.

Health of college, splendid. Esprit de corps, all right. With a sporadic exception here and there, all are progressing finely.

Brother Hunnicutt strikes the key-note on the college question. He writes: "Yes, you may kick, but not die yet with my consent. The thirty dollars enclosed are at your disposal. As the equivalent of a five-hundred-dollar endowment note at six per cent., I hope that coming years may see it often repeated and largely increased."

Now, that is the sort of articles that if you print, Mr. Editor, will soon settle the question. O for a score of presiding elders of that size and specific gravity!

Commodore William T. Truxton, United States Navy (retired), died at Norfolk, Va., February 25.

Carlisle, Fairchild and Mitchell are all spoken of as probable successors of Mr. Manning.

Mr. Moody has succeeded in raising $250,000 for his training-school for Christian workers in Chicago.

Rev. T. A. Stone, of the North Carolina Conference, died February 12. He was a young minister "full of promise and usefulness to the church."

Dr. Jefferson Hascall, the author of the song, "My Latest Sun Is Sinking Fast," died last month. His funeral was attended by Bishops Walden and Foster.

Dr. J. B. McFerrin, of Nashville, is in such a weak state of health that his many friends feel great uneasiness about him.

Ex-President Mark Hopkins is eighty-five years old, and is still the professor of theology in Williams College, and is performing his daily college duties with faculties unimpaired.

Dr. Horatius Bonar, the hymn-writer and preacher, is about to retire from the active service of the ministry.

Sam Small delivered his lecture, "From Bar-Room to Pulpit," in Cooper Institute, New York City, March 7, for the "benefit of two needy Methodist Churches."

The new Senator from Florida, Gen. J. J. Finley, is seventy-five years old.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, the colporteur of the North Mississippi Conference and special agent of this ADVOCATE, is doing a good work in his line, as appears by his report published in this week's paper.

Some of the papers complain that Sam Jones received $10,000 for his month's work in Boston; but none of them complain that Booth received $20,000 for two weeks' acting in Chicago.

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, of North Mississippi Conference, who on account of ill health was at the last session of that body placed upon the supernumerary list, is living at Hernando among a kind and generous people whose Christian thoughtfulness does not permit him to lack.

Charles L. Tiffany, the head of the firm of Tiffany & Co., New York, is seventy-five years old, but still takes an active part in the management of the business, being seldom out of his office during business hours.

The Zenana Medical College of England, in the six years of its history, has sent out to mission fields seventy ladies as practitioners.

Capt. Greely, the Arctic explorer, has been appointed Chief of the Signal Service with the rank of brigadier general.

It would be a good thing for all our pastors to see to it that all the pews in their churches be supplied with Bibles for the use of the worshipers. Bibles are very cheap; and to accustom the congregation to follow the reading of the Scriptures would be an advance upon the listless hearer. We once heard a preacher say that he was converted while looking at the word "Jesus" in the New Testament. Give the Holy Spirit the Word to work with, and the possibilities broaden into wonderful achievement.

Colportage Work in the North Mississippi Conference.

At the close of the first quarter of our Conference year, I beg leave to submit the following report: Miles traveled, 450; pastoral charges visited, 14; amount collected for church papers, (old and new subscriptions,) $148 50; for other religious papers, $11; value of books sold, $298 40. Kosciusko, $58 60; Durant, $28 85; Lexington, $7 10; Pickens, $23 60; Vaiden, $10 70; Winona, $10 30; Grenada, $40 45; Courtland, $10 80; Sardis, $12 60; Como, $5 05; Senatobia, $17 15; Coldwater, $10 60; Hernando, $8 40; Love's Station, $18; Water Valley, $8 70; miscellaneous, $28 10.

By the co-operation of the brethren and friends, and the blessing of God, I hope to make a better showing next quarter.

Appointments of Mrs. Mary Read Goodale in Alabama.

A note from Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, national organizer of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, informs us that she will soon start on a tour of work through Alabama. She expects to visit, in the interest of her organization, the following places: Mobile, Evergreen, Montgomery, Troy, Lively, Opelika, Tuskegee, Verbena, Clanton, Calera, Talladega, Tuscaloosa, Eutaw, Livingston, Uniontown, Greensboro, Birmingham, Attalla, Gadsden, Collinsville, Huntsville, Decatur, Athens, Hartselle, Tuscumbia, Florence and Scottsboro. Mrs. Goodale is a native of Louisiana; daughter of Mrs. M. W. Read, of Baton Rouge, who for a long series of years has been widely known among the educators of the South. Her husband is Hon. Wilmot H. Goodale, a lawyer of prominence at our State capital. Mrs. Goodale is an earnest Christian worker in the cause of temperance, and we are glad that she proposes to assist the workers in Alabama in their pending struggle to free themselves from the liquor traffic and influence. We commend her most heartily to our friends over there.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

A MEDICINE, NOT A DRINK.

High Authority.

Hop Bitters is not, in any sense, an alcoholic beverage or liquor, and could not be sold, for use, except to persons desirous of obtaining medicinal bitters.

GREEN B. RAUM,
U. S. Com'r Internal Rev.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 24, 1881.

Dear Sir—Why don't you get a certificate from Withington, W. H. W., of Baltimore, showing how he cured himself of drunkenness, by the help of Hop Bitters? His is a wonderful case. He is well known in Rochester, N. Y., by all the drinking people there. He is known in this city, Cincinnati, New Orleans, New York; in fact all over the country, as he has spent thousands of dollars for rum. I honestly believe his card would be worth thousands of dollars to you in this city and Baltimore alone, and make thousands of sober men by inducing the use of your bitters. J. A. W.

Prejudice Kills.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of several of the best physicians, who gave her disease various names but no relief, and now she is restored to us in good health by Hop Bitters, that we had poohed at two years before using it. We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account of prejudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters."—The Parents' Good Templars.

Milton, Del., Feb. 10, 1886.

Having used Hop Bitters, the noted remedy for debility, nervousness, indigestion, etc., I have no hesitation in saying that it is indeed an excellent medicine and recommend it to anyone as a truly tonic bitters.

Respectfully,
REV. MRS. A. H. ELLGOOD.

Scipio, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1881.

I am the pastor of the Baptist Church here and an educated physician. I am not in practice, but am my sole family physician, and advise in chronic cases. Over a year ago I recommended your Hop Bitters to my invalid wife, who has been under medical treatment of Albany's best physicians several years. She has been greatly benefited and still uses the medicine. I believe she will become thoroughly cured of her various complicated diseases by their use. We both recommend them to our friends, many of whom have also been cured of their various ailments by them.

REV. E. R. WARREN.

Cured of Drinking.

"A young friend of mine was cured of an insatiable thirst for liquor that had so prostrated his system that he was unable to do any business. He was entirely cured by the use of Hop Bitters. It allayed all that burning thirst; took away the appetite for liquor; made his nerves steady; and he has remained a steady and sober man for more than two years, and has no desire to return to his cups, and I know of a number of others that have been cured of drinking by it."—From a leading R. B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and D. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and misers. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of D. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

CAMARIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

"WHAT CONTRARY MARY SAW."

BY GEORGE COOPER.

Old Mother Hubbard came home one day,
To give her poodle a bone:
While Little Miss Muffet, just over the way,
Sat down by her dog all alone.

Poor Cinderella was going to wed
The piper's son Tom, down the street;
The dish ran away with the cow in bed
Of the spoon—a remarkable feat!

Little Boy Blue was exploring a pie
That looked very luscious and deep;
While artful Jack Horner did coolly lie
Under a hay-stack asleep.

Little Bo-Peep had found her sheep
All browsing on bread and honey;
Tearful Tom Tucker had ceased to weep,
And counted up heaps of money.

Old King Cole and his fiddlers all
In a bowl had gone to sea;
And Jack on the Giant had made a call
And was pleasantly asked to tea.

This was a dream that came to pass;
I'll tell you the reason why:
'Twas said little Mary, so very contrary,
Had eaten too much blackbird pie!

—Independent.

To Our Little Cousins.

Our little cousins must learn to cultivate patience in waiting for the printing of their letters, just as our older correspondents have learned in regard to their communications. We have so many letters on hand now that it will be a long time before some of them can appear in the paper. So be patient, "little chicks," and let your pens rest until the printer can catch up with you.—ED.

MR. EDITOR: The vision of Jacob's ladder is found in Genesis xxviii, 12. Miss Hattie, Isaac had no whole brother. Pa says that Isaac's mother, Sarah, would not recognize Abraham as her husband after he went to make an offering of Isaac. What say you little folks about it? Miss Ida Ellington, Mathew says that Mary Magdalene and the other Mary was the ones that Jesus appeared to first when risen from the grave. Mark says Mary Magdalene. From the reading of the seventeen chapter and first verse it appears that Mary, the mother of James and Salome, were there. Luke says Mary Magdalene and Joanna and Mary, the mother of James, and other women that were with them went to the grave on the first day of the week, very early in the morning, but failed to say that they saw Jesus. John mentions only Mary Magdalene. Were the four writers of the gospel disciples of Christ? Now, Mr. Editor, pa has had me at work on this for some time. I have tried to condense. I hope I may be admitted.

Your little friend,

WHEAT A. HOOVER.

MR. EDITOR: It has been some time since I wrote to the ADVOCATE, so I thought I would write again. Our preacher for this year is Rev. J. N. Tucker, and we all like him very much. I will try to answer Annie L. Wilson's puzzle, and if I am correct in my answer and the ADVOCATE is awarded to me, I will tell you in a private note what to do with it. The man had four hog-killing days. As she did not say how he was to kill them, I suppose he either shot, cut their throats or knocked them in the head; so he killed one at a time until he killed as many as he wanted to kill each day. In that way he killed an odd number each time until he had as many as he wished to kill each day. I hope my answer is right, as I have worked the puzzle by figures, and could not make sense any other way. With many good wishes for the ADVOCATE, I am,

Your little friend,

MARTHA E. WELSH.

HALLO, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I have been thinking for some time I would write to your good paper, and have concluded to write and answer Annie Wilson's puzzle. I do not think that the man succeeded in killing twenty-five hogs at four killings; killing an odd number of hogs at each time. He only wanted to do so. I will say to Annie that we enjoyed working over her puzzle, and occasionally thinking we had worked it out by number; but when we would begin to explain how we had obtained the result, we would find that we were mistaken about having it. I went to a preaching at Hebron last Sunday evening. Bro. Featherstun preached one of the best sermons on temperance that I ever heard. We are going to organize a temperance club there next Saturday. With best wishes, I am,

Your friend,

ORA ROBINSON.

BRANDON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters from around here, I thought I would write one. I am going to school. Miss M. A. Hicks is my teacher. I like her very much. I study arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, philosophy and spelling. My father is a steward in Union Church, and takes your valuable paper. I like to read the young folks' column very much. Bro. Morse is our pastor. We all like him very much, and we think it a treat to have his family with us. Being this is my first attempt to the dear ADVOCATE, I will not write too long. If I see this in print, I will write again. I will ask a question: How many anchors were cast out when St. Paul was shipwrecked? I will close. Your friend,

RHODA C. BUSH.

MELVIN, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years old. As I have never written to any paper, I thought I would write to the good old ADVOCATE. Papa takes it, and I like the little folks' letters so well. I think it is so kind in you to give them a space in your paper. I am not going to school now. I have to stay at home to help mamma. She has been sick over a year. Mr. Raynor is our preacher this year. He will preach for us next Sunday. I will close by answering Kate L. Risher's question: Moses was found in the bullrushes, and was 120 years old when he died. I will ask a question: Who sowed the city with salt? I remain,

Your little friend,

CAMMIE M. HORNTON.

HEIDELBERG, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As you published my first letter I wrote to the dear old ADVOCATE, I thought I would write again. I am fourteen years old. I have four brothers and one sister living, and one brother dead. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Bro. J. W. McLaurin is our pastor, and Mr. S. P. Lewis is my teacher. Now, I will answer several questions. Mira Cook, Shem is the oldest of Noah's sons, and Japheth is the youngest. Jennie Beall, Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign, and he reigned thirty-one years. Hattie Dean, Abraham and Jacob were the brothers of Isaac. I will close for this time.

From your friend,

ROSA N. M'EWEN.

MCCOMB CITY, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old, and have one sister and two little brothers younger than myself; and we are devoted to each other. We have a dear good papa and mamma. I am going to school to Miss Corinne Lindsey, and I love her very much. She teaches at Whitington Chapel. My studies are reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, history, geography and composition; and we are all learning fast. We have a nice Sabbath-school, and I do love to go and recite good lessons. As this is my first letter to you, I will be brief, but at some future time will tell you more about this country.

Farm and Home.

GARDEN HINTS.—An experience of more than a quarter of a century in garden management has taught me some things which I should have found it profitable to have known as a beginner, and in the hope of helping others I will refer to some points of importance.

All quick maturing crops require much richer soil and better cultivation than those that are longer in maturing. Late peas, like Champion of England, or Marrowfat, will yield a profitable crop on moderately rich land without manure, but the kinds that mature early in May must be furnished an abundance of plant food in such a form as to be at once available. The same is true of most, if not all, crops; the shorter the time in which they mature, the better chance they should have.

In all crops that come up thick and require to be thinned, every day's neglect after the plants are large enough to be thinned, reduces the yield of the crop. Beets, carrots, radishes, lettuce, parsnip, and all such crops, should be thinned as soon as you can get hold of them with thumb and finger. In planting early potatoes some days may be gained by cutting the seed and spreading it in a warm room until it callouses and the buds begin to start, and to avoid danger of freezing the seed should be crowded down into the bottom of the furrow by stepping on it, and covered with two inches of partly rotted manure before the earth is put on. Planted in this way the mercury may fall ten degrees for a single night without injuring them.—W. F. B., in Vick's Magazine, for March.

GOOD HOUSES FOR FARM HELP.—While so much complaint is made about tenant-house rookeries in cities, it may be well to look after the dwellings for farm laborers, and see if there is not also room for reform in that direction. It has been justly observed that if a farmer is able to hire help to any considerable extent, he is able to furnish the family of such help comfortable houses to live in—attractive homes which will attach them to the farm, and thus secure him reliable help at all seasons of the year. With such places for them to live in, a much better class of help can be secured than can be picked up by chance, or than is likely to drift out into the country and occupy the forsaken old rookeries for an abode.

EGGS IN WINTER AND EARLY SPRING.—The profits of the poultry yard depend largely on whether eggs are sold in June and July at six cents per dozen, or in February and March at fifteen to twenty-five. But the eggs do not come at the latter and more desirable time without forethought and care and labor. It is the early pullets which bring good returns; and now is the time to begin preparation for a good hatch. The earlier the little chicks are out of the shell the better layers they will make next winter, other things being equal.

SPECIAL FARMING.—The production of one crop, making this the main dependence, as, for instance, wheat, or cotton, or sugar, may do well in the hands of some one who is specially qualified for such work; but with most persons mixed farming will be found safest, particularly if modified to suit circumstances and locality.

He that is afraid of solemn things has probably solemn reason to be afraid of them.—Spurgeon.

McCAFLEY—Another child of God has been taken to her father's house, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. SISTER MARTHA BODDIE McCAFLEY was born in Warren county, N. C., January 20, 1816. While she was yet a young girl she obeyed her Lord's command—"Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness"—and found the promise fulfilled—"They that seek me early shall find me." She was the daughter of a Methodist minister, the Rev. Hill Jones; so as a "lamb" she was fed with godly counsel and the sincere milk of the Word. In her sixteenth year she came with her family to Madison county, Miss. She was married to Mr. Hamilton McCauley by the Rev. Dr. Minter, of precious memory. She was left a widow in 1841, and remained a widow indeed forty-six years.

She was a thorough Methodist, loving our doctrines, forms and ministry. In all relations she was what a Christian should be: transparent, sincere, benevolent and faithful. True in friendship, tender and sympathetic to the poor and suffering, ever ready to lend a helping hand. She did not make much show or ado about her religion, but did better: she lived it, and adorned by innocency of life the doctrine of God our Savior—in all things a wholesome example to the flock of God. She had many losses, afflictions and sorrows, but out of all the Lord brought her by his love. Her health had long been poor, since the sudden death of a beloved daughter, eighteen years ago. On December 30, 1886, she had a violent fall, the shock of which rent her great and intense suffering. She bore her sufferings with the meekness of Christian humility. She was resigned, ready, and desired to be released from a tortured body in which she could no more have ease or be useful. Nature in her clung strongly to the loved ones, who mourn her loss: but they sorrow not as those who have no hope, but rather rejoice in hope of the blessed reunion above. She died at the home of her son-in-law, W. R. Stuart, and daughter, at Ocean Springs, Miss., February 16, 1887. We expect to see and meet her among the glorified.

J. B. WALKER.

BUFKIN—GEORGE MACON BUFKIN, son of H. F. and E. A. Bufkin, was born April 30, 1862, and died October 7, 1886, in Coplah county, Miss.

Macon died the most triumphant death that was ever witnessed by this writer. For several days before his death he worked most effectually for the Master, exhorting every one that came into the room to live nearer to God. A short time before he died the power of the Holy Ghost came down upon him and all that were present to such an extent that all felt that the gates of heaven were open, and the ordinary gloom of the death chamber was all banished and did not return. And when he quietly fell on sleep still a halo of glory lingered about, and on the day that his remains were deposited in the grave a large number of relatives and friends assembled, and all felt that our loss was his gain. Oh! what a meeting did Macon and Jay have, and what a gathering that will be after awhile when father, mother, sisters and brothers meet around the great white throne! Remember his words and triumph, and meet him in heaven.

C. W. C.

ADAMS—JULIET MAY LINDA, child of Rev. and Mrs. T. W. Adams, of the Mississippi Conference, was born at Benton, Yazoo county, Miss., March 7, 1886, and died December 17, following.

At the will of the Master a great happiness is surrendered, a beautiful babe is given back to God and safely housed in the "mansions" above. Many hearts tenderly sympathize with the bereaved parents; and Jesus says, "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me."

JOHN A. ELLIS.

FEAZLE—MAX FEAZLE, a lawyer of Ruston, a member of the House of Representatives, from Lincoln parish, a good and useful citizen, a quiet, devoted, sincere Christian, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Ruston, died as quietly and restfully on Sunday, February 13, 1887, as he had previously lived. He died of consumption. He suffered long and painfully, but without a murmur or complaint.

HIS PASTOR.

TAYLOR—EVA B., daughter of Thomas S. and L. Taylor, was born in Pike county, Miss., October 3, 1868, and died in Freestone county, Texas, February 21, 1887. A few months before she died she united herself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and observed its customs and adorned its doctrines until the day of her death.

The circumstances of her last illness and death were peculiarly affecting to her bereaved family. She had been accidentally exposed to the measles, and went away from home to be sick in order to keep the family from being exposed. Consequently the last offices of love had to be performed by others. But she was with those who loved her. She died at the home of her cousin—the writer of this; and I stood by her until the last fleeting breath and feeble heart-strokes proclaimed that the struggle was over, the last battle fought, the last great victory won. A few seconds before she died she looked at me calmly and peacefully, and called my name distinctly, while a glad smile lighted up her countenance. The waters were turbid and chill, but the music of the heavenly choirs was joyous even in death. The silver cord is loosed, the golden bowl is broken, the pitcher is broken at the fountain; but the spirit has returned to God who gave it. The family circle is broken; there is a vacant seat. Fond hearts have bled while the tender tendrils of love have been snapped by the rude hand of death; but the consolations of our holy religion assures us that it is but the beginning of that transplanting which, through the sure mercies of God, shall continue until we who grieve for her shall all be with our darling Eva.

D. W. DIES.

BUFKIN—JOHN JAY, son of H. F. and E. A. Bufkin, was born September 28, 1858, and died, of typhoid fever, September 13, 1886, at his home in Copiah county, Miss.

He leaves a wife and four children and a number of friends, who bid him adieu, with the positive assurance of meeting him in heaven. He had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for several years, but had made no profession of religion until during his last illness. He was impressed that he would not get well. He, therefore, spent his time in meditation, talking and praying. We rejoice to say that the result was that he found peace and was perfectly resigned. Up to the very last hours of his life, in delirium, nothing restored him to consciousness but the voice of prayer or the songs of Zion. He sang as long as he had voice, and after his voice failed, he would move his lips when others sang. Scarcely two weeks passed before his little Willie joined him in the skies. Seventeen years since a death had occurred in the family of H. F. Bufkin! How comforting the thought that day is at rest and we will soon meet him at home, if faithful! God, keep us by thy power unto everlasting life.

C. W. C.

PLATT—DANIEL ALEXANDER PLATT was born in Marion District, S. C., April 21, 1838, and departed this life, near Montgomery La., February 10, 1887, in the forty-ninth year of his age.

Bro. Platt was truly spiritual. He was one of the few men of this country who prayed regularly around his family altar, and was always ready to lead in prayer in the congregation. Such a man is a great loss to this community. He was for many years a faithful member of the Methodist Church. His life was one of suffering, but his afflictions were borne with patience. He told his pastor that he had consecrated all to God and felt no condemnation, but was filled with peace. He triumphed over the last enemy, and passed gloriously to his reward on high. A wife and seven children are left to mourn his loss. The kind friends of Montgomery showed their appreciation of Bro. Platt by contributing money and merchandise to satisfy their present wants. May God bless this kind people for their liberality to His poor!

J. F. WYNN.

FULLILOVE—DAVID DUBERT FULLILOVE died at his residence, at Bay St. Louis, Thursday morning, February 17, 1887. He was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., October 23, 1817; married Miss Susan Taylor, of Autauga, Ala., August 10, 1841; came soon after to Noxuba county, Miss., and to this place, his last earthly home, in 1887.

He had long been a member of the church; was much esteemed and loved, and died in peace, leaving a good wife and a large and respected family of children, who revere his name, follow his good example, and seek to meet him in heaven.

His pastor, B. JONES.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health can not exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid, the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels. W. J. MCELROY, MACON, Ga.

Trotter, to be Recorder of Deeds in the District of Columbia, in place of Joseph C. Matthews, who was twice rejected.——The Arbitration bill passed by the Senate and ready for the President's signature.

MARCH 1.

The Prince of Wales has returned to London. He is well and hearty.——Earthquake tremors continue to be felt in the Italian Riviera, but no additional damage has been done.——The Ameer of Afghanistan is raising a forced loan to the amount of ten per cent. of the value of the property of his subjects.——The Hungarian Diet unanimously voted for a special military credit.——The British Parliament has been asked to grant another quarter of a million pounds for the expenses of the navy.——In the French Chamber of Deputies to-day, Premier Goblet proposed a credit of 1,000,000 francs for the relief of the earthquake sufferers.——The Senate confirmed the nomination of Daniel Magone to be collector of customs at the port of New York.——The President has approved the act of Congress, for holding terms of United States Courts at Vicksburg, Miss.

MARCH 2.

Slight earthquake shocks felt in Italy at Reggiodi, Calabrou. Two slight shocks occurred at Diano Marinie. Further disasters are feared on account of the excessive heat and the fact that the sea has not returned to its ordinary level.——Seven other garrisons in Bulgaria have followed the example of the Sillstria garrison in revolting.——The total snow-fall at Minneapolis, Minn., since and inclusive of the first snow of November 16, is 68½ inches. The winter has been exceptionally cold—7½ degrees colder than the average of winters for twenty-two years past.——Public Printer Benedict has been approved by the Senate. Vote was 37 to 19.——The President has signed the Mormon Bill.

MARCH 3.

The new German Reichstag opened to-day. The Emperor's speech was read from the throne.——Sir William Vernon Harcourt, in a letter to the London Times, says the troubles in Ireland are from the attempt of the government to enforce the payment of rents which their own land commission has declared the people are unable to pay.——All the French officials in the Khedive's service have been dismissed.——The House passed the Senate Bill to repeal the Tenure of Office Act. The House refused to pass the Blair Bill and the American Steamship Subsidy.

MARCH 4.

Two officers and sixteen privates engaged in the revolt at Sillstria have been captured and shot.——As a precautionary measure in view of trouble in Bulgaria, Servia has sent troops to the frontier.——Last night in the country surrounding the city of Limerick a large number of houses, occupied by tenants and also hay, and out-buildings were burned. The fires were caused by armed incendiaries, who escaped.——Austria continues warlike preparations.——President Grevy will send congratulations to Emperor William on the anniversary of his birth.——Congress adjourned to-day.——The Senate confirmed the nomination of Capt. Greely to be Brigadier General, and James M. Periodicals.

MARCH PERIODICALS.

—Popular Science Monthly appears this month as edited by W. J. Youmans, his co-editor, E. L. Youmans, having died January 18. This number contains interesting articles on different branches of science, and is published by D. Appleton & Co., 5 Bond street, New York.

—The Forum has among other things The Future of Christianity, by Prof. Mivart; The Effectiveness of Prohibition, by Neal Dow; The Tyranny of Fashion, by Eliza Lynn Linton. This periodical seems to be gaining favor with each number. Forum Publishing Company, 97 Fifth Avenue, New York.

—The Eclectic Magazine is one of the best of this popular periodical, containing the most readable of the late foreign monthlies. E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York.

—Littell's Living Age, February 19 and 26. These numbers are all that can be desired by any reasonable reader. Littell & Co., Boston.

—Scribner's Magazine is number three of this new monthly. There is a continuation of ex-Minister Washburn's Siege and Commune of Paris, and of the Story of a New York House. The Stability of the Earth, by N. S. Shaler, is a fine paper, profusely illustrated. There are other articles of value. The frontispiece is a striking portrait of M. Thiers. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $3 per annum.

—The Century leads off with a story by George Cable, entitled Grand Pointe. Dr. Tillett, of Vanderbilt, has an interesting article on The White Man of the New South. The other articles are on various subjects of interest. E. M. Stanton's portrait adorns this number. The Century Company, Union Squre, New York.

How to Gain Flesh and Strength.

Use after each meal Scott's Emulsion with Hypophosphites. It is as palatable as milk, and easily digested. The rapidity with which delicate people improve with its use is wonderful. Use it and try your weight. As a remedy for Consumption, Throat affections and Bronchitis, it is unequaled. Please read: "I used Scott's Emulsion in a child eight months old with good results. He gained four pounds in a very short time."—THO. PRIM, M. D., Alabama.

LIFE AND LABORS OF WILLIAM H. WATKINS, D. D.

LIFE AND LABORS OF WILLIAM H. WATKINS, D. D., late a member of the Mississippi Conference, and at one time president of Centenary College. Edited by Rev. T. L. Mellen. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.25.

"Bro. Mellen has done a good piece of editing in this volume. The biographical sketches by four different writers give us a good view of the character and work of Dr. Watkins, and the sermons and miscellany show as equally well the workings of his mind and the breadth and depth of his thought. * * * It is an interesting history of a great and good man."—Dr. C. W. Carter, in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

"The thousands of friends of the late Rev. William Hamilton Watkins, D. D., will be pleased to learn that a memorial volume of this talented and conscientious divine has been prepared and published by his friend, Rev. Thomas L. Mellen."—Natchez (Miss.) Democrat.

"Dr. Watkins was one of the most prominent, scholarly and eloquent men in the Southern Methodist Church. He was a native of Mississippi, and had been a travelling preacher in the Mississippi Conference ever since he was twenty years old. He died early in the year 1881, aged sixty-five years. This book is a beautiful tribute to the memory of a good man."—New Orleans (La.) Picayune.

"The tribute by the editor of the book is modestly placed after all the others. It is more extended, deals more with dates and facts, and furnishes an analysis of the character of his departed friend, remarkable for its critical impartiality, the delicacy of its discrimination and its enthusiastic praise. As a conscientious advocate of truth, he writes right on, even though what he pens might detract from the perfect character of his subject. * * * But over and above the faithful fault-finding, the steadfast truth-telling, there is such a favorable narrative of honorable achievement, such a glowing portraiture of noble traits, as to justify the author in reaching this high estimate of the subject of his memoir, viz: 'One of the grandest characters that has ever been developed in Southern Methodism.' The sermons * * * are characterized by clearness of statement, by beauty and emphasis rising sometimes into true eloquence, and by appeals to reason rather than to the feelings."—Rev. Dr. C. G. Andrews, in NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

"This volume we regard as a real treasure. We have read it with a growing admiration of our departed brother. * * * As a thinker of great logical force and clear perceptions, high metaphysical grasp and concentrating power, he far surpassed the standard ordinary hearers would be likely to fix for his gauge. * * * We commend the book to the members of our itineracy. We trust it will be presented by our laymen as a token of solicitude for the well-doing and success of young ministers, and read and studied by the thousands who had the rare happiness of having known the author and heard him in his palmy days of health and power in the pulpit."—Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall, in NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

"This book will do to read twice or even three times."—Dr. McAnnally, in St. Louis Advocate.

A Diary or Pocket Companion

for everybody; a useful Note and Account Book containing a Centennial Calendar and also valuable hints for the health and comfort of all. Don't fail to get it. Send a 2-cent stamp to J. H. Zeilin & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

The above cut is a true photograph of a plant of CHILDS' NEW DOUBLE PERPETUAL FLOWERING WEEPING FUCHSIA, "STORM KING," introduced by us and is the finest novelty and grandest flowering plant of the age. It is always in bloom, often as many as 200 buds and blossoms on a plant at once. The branches droop most gracefully, and the blossoms are frequently as large as teacups. The buds for two weeks before they expand are balls of glowing scarlet crimson. When expanded, the enormous double flowers are almost pure white, capped by a calyx of glowing scarlet; and when a plant is loaded with buds and blossoms it presents a sight which for true grandeur and beauty no flower can surpass. They are of the easiest culture and will grow and bloom freely with ordinary care in any window or garden. Price of strong plants which will soon bloom, by mail, post-paid, each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00. We pack safely from frost and warrant them to arrive in good order. Form Clubs for this grand Fuchsia and get them at dozen rates. Remember, we are the introducers and the only ones in the world who can supply the true Storm King in quantity. Beware of others who are selling inferior varieties as Storm King.

CHILDS' NEW GIANT EXCELSIOR PANSIES are the largest and finest in the world. (See large chromo in Catalogue.) They produce the gigantic flowers from May to December, in great profusion. Mixed seed of 50 colors, which are of marvelous beauty, 25 cts. per paper. We will also send 6 large flowering bulbs of CHILDS' EXCELSIOR DWARF PEARL TUBEROSES for 50 cts. They are hardy Lilies, including Auratum, $1.00. 12 choice mixed GLADIOLUS, 50 cts. 4 TEA ROSES, red, white, pink and yellow, 50 cts. 5 grand CHRYSANTHEMUMS 50 cts. Any of the above articles will be sent by mail, post-paid, and guaranteed to arrive in good condition. They are exactly represented, and will more than please those who plant them. Many years of liberal and honest dealings have secured to us our enormous mail business in Seeds, Bulbs and Plants, which is the largest in the world. Orders can be sent at once. Preserve this as it may not appear again in this paper.

SEEDS, BULBS AND PLANTS. We have a large and choice stock and grand variety of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, Bulbs and Plants. We have the best and rare headquarters for Pansies, Balsams, Verbenas, Gladiolus, Tuberoses, Amaryllis, Lilies, Roses, Geraniums, Fuchsias, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, Moonflowers, Passionflowers, Slirubs, Vines and small fruits. Canadian and English buyers supplied free of duty and postage, as we have a branch office in both countries.

Our CATALOGUE for 1887, is probably the most elegant ever issued. It contains two large chromos and 8 colored plates of new flowers, and hundreds of beautiful engravings. It will be mailed free to any who order Storm King, Pansy, or anything here offered. We are also willing to mail it free to all who will send us an order after receiving it. Otherwise those who apply for it should send at least 10 or 12 cents in stamps, which is only a part of its cost to us.

Remittance can be made by money order or postal note (on Queens), bills, drafts or stamps. For every dollar's worth ordered from this advertisement, the buyer will receive an elegant seed or bulb novelty free.

LEAD THEM HOME.

Lord, we can trust thee for our holy dead:
They, underneath the shadow of thy tomb,
Have entered into peace: with bended head,
We thank thee for their rest, and for our lightened gloom.

But Lord, our living, who, on stormy seas
Of sin and sorrow, still are tempest tossed!
Our dead have reached their haven, but for thee—
Teach us to trust thee, Lord, for these, our loved and lost!

For these we make our passion-prayer by night;
For these we cry to thee through the long day.
We see them not, O keep them in thy sight!
From them and us be thou not far away.

And if not home to us, yet lead them home
To where thou standeth at the heavenly gate;
That so from thee they shall not farther roam;
And grant us patient hearts thy gathering time to wait.

—Sunday Magazine.

To the Friends of Prohibition in Mississippi.

I have the pleasure of again congratulating you upon the healthful growth of prohibition in the State. The past has been a year of rapid progress—of real triumph. I have only words of encouragement to offer on the result of recent achievements. The Local Option Law enacted by the last Legislature has exceeded in efficiency the largest expectations of its friends and disappointed the evil prophecies of unrelenting enemies. Under its operation we have not only firmly held every inch of territory covered by special prohibitory statutes, but have rescued from the grasp of the open saloon twelve additional counties, including the large and influential counties of Hinds, Lauderdale and Yazoo. Other large sections have driven out the saloon by petition, until we can claim two-thirds or more of the State, as standing solidly in the prohibition column.

In addition, we are assured that the agitation has improved the drinking habits of society. Old topers have ceased their debaucheries and moderate drinkers become total abstainers. The saloons that remain do not thrive as formerly—the business is no longer so lucrative and remunerative. And it is becoming disreputable for gentlemen to frequent such places. Some interesting statistics might be given on this point that would gladden the heart and cheer the faith of every prohibitionist in Mississippi and elsewhere.

It is also occasion for gratulation that the Supreme Court of the State has affirmed the constitutionality of our law in the clearest and strongest language. This, of itself, will become an educating factor in the conflict and has already sent dismay into the enemy's ranks. It simplifies the issue and unifies the friends of moral reform.

But what of the duties of the present and future? Be assured, we have only begun the struggle. We must beware of idle satisfaction with past success. The peril of victory is complacency. One triumph should only stimulate courage and zeal to achieve a greater. In view, therefore, of the work before us, I offer the following suggestions:

1. Keep your organizations intact. In counties where prohibition has carried, you need to keep up the agitation to secure the rigid, impartial enforcement of the law. Laws do not administer themselves. The sentiment that enacts a statute must compel its wise, fearless administration. Do not allow the law to become a dead letter. Unpunished violators are vicious educators of public sentiment. Keep up the agitation, so that no jury can be found to acquit flagrant offenders.

2. We should adhere consistently to our declaration of nonpartisan purposes and principles. Our last State Convention reaffirmed the doctrine announced at every former meeting in these words: "We further declare it to be our conviction that the cause of prohibition should not be entangled with party politics. Without disturbing the party affiliations of any citizen, we ask his support of this great reform, which should be enthroned above the contests for mere place and power." To that declaration and line of policy we are pledged, and the success of our cause thus far has demonstrated its wisdom. If with our growing strength, the movement should be deflected into partisan channels, we will forfeit the crowning victory which seems assured. When a successful moral reform is subsidized by political ambitions, it suffers defeat in the house of supposed, but misguided friends. Let us reassert with plainness and emphasis that this is in no sense a partisan movement. We have nothing to do with party politics.

3. Let prohibition literature be industriously circulated. We must sow down the State with leaflets and pamphlets, packed with facts and arguments, that will multiply our friends and enable every prohibitionist to give an unanswerable reason for the hope that is in him. If we can only get the people to read, the saloon will be banished from the borders of our great commonwealth.

4. In the counties where no election has been held, make ample preparations and bring on the contest during the summer. Organize for victory, and utilize every available agency. We have sufficient untused influence in every county to assure success, if mobilized and placed under skillful leadership.

5. We must labor with and for the colored people. They will aid our cause in ever-increasing numbers. It is neither good religion nor worldly policy to become impatient because so many of them have been deluded into the support of whisky. With better education and a healthier public sentiment, they will discover their true friends and forsake their worst enemy. In church and school they must be instructed and exhorted.

6. Honoring their labors in the past, we should continue to cordially co-operate with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the State. Their conservatism and zeal in Mississippi are worthy of all commendation and universal emulation. Discarding other issues, they are laboring for total abstinence and non-partisan prohibition. May their numbers increase until every mother, wife or sister shall take for her inspiring motto, "God, home and native land."

7. We must keep in mind also our State Convention to be held at a time yet to be fixed. It ought to be large and representative of the best brain and heart of the people. In due time the Executive Committee will determine the date and issue a formal call. With gratitude for the past and the brightest hopes for the future, I would most earnestly and fraternally urge every friend of prohibition in Mississippi to gird on his strength anew and magnify this hour of opportunity and responsibility.

Chair'n State Prohibition Ex. Com.

Letter from China.

I am glad to be able to report that our work in Suchow has started off with increased interest and hopefulness since the organization of the Annual Conference. We have gotten the native church regularly organized, and everybody seems disposed to take hold and do their best for the work. We shall try to make Suchow station self-supporting this year, at least to the extent of paying the native preacher who, with me, was appointed to the charge of this church, and all the incidental expenses. The native members, numbering about fifty, have been regularly assessed a certain amount, and have agreed to pay monthly a sum amounting to $8 05. The native pastor's salary is $8 per month. The foreign members—the missionaries—have agreed to pay monthly a sum amounting to $41 50. This, with the native contributions, will make a total for the year, if it is all paid, of nearly $600. This will pay the junior preacher's salary and all the incidental expenses of the church, together with our assessment for missions—$75—and leave a considerable sum over to be handed to our Conference Board of Missions to use in opening new work next year. Of the sum contributed by the foreign members, Miss Lou E. Philips pays $10 a month for herself, and $17 a month for the girls in her school—a worthy example of devotion and self-sacrifice.

Two members were received into the church at our last quarterly meeting, and two others gave in their names as candidates for membership. These were all pupils from Miss Philips' school. I earnestly hope to see many added to the church during this year.

Doubtless, to many, the work in China seems to move very slowly and the results to be incommensurate with the amount of time and money expended. But, while the results in this field, so far as they can be tabulated, do appear to be somewhat meagre, yet when we view the work in China as a whole, we can not fail to be encouraged with the progress that has been made. The editor of the Chinese Recorder has carefully compiled and published the statistics of mission work in China for the past year. From this we gather the following facts: There are now operating in China thirty-seven societies employing a force of 431 male missionaries, 369 wives of missionaries, 189 single lady missionaries, or a total of 889 foreign missionaries, together with 124 ordained native preachers and 1,154 unordained native helpers. There are 28,119 adult communicants, and 9,864 pupils in the schools. The native church contributed last year $12,875 to the work of the church. Some of these statistics are taken from last year's reports. Probably if the latest figures could be had we should find a total of fully 30,000 communicants belonging to the Protestant Church in China. These figures, taken in connection with the history of the work in the past, are exceedingly encouraging.

I quote the following from a writer in the Chinese Recorder, for December, 1886: "The success of Protestant missions to China has been such that it should occasion profound gratitude to God and encourage their supporters to still greater exertion. Such were the restrictions in the early part of the century upon Christian work in China, that Protestant missionaries who always go openly and with an open Bible in their hands can hardly be said to have commenced their labors before the treaties of 1842. In 1853 they had 351 converts; in 1863, 1874; in 1868, 5,734; in 1872, nearly 8,000; in 1877, 13,035; in 1881, 19,660; in 1884, 26,287"—and now at the end of 1886, nearly 30,000. Thus we see that in twelve years that the communicants have more than trebled their numbers. Does this look like failure? I think not. Let the church take hold of this work in faith, and, despite the momentary difficulties, glorious success will follow as sure as God has spoken.

The mission property destroyed by mobs in Chungking and in the province of Kwangse was paid for by the Chinese government several weeks ago. This is much more than we had a right to expect, after the cruel treatment of the Chinese in the Christian land of America.

China is progressing. The telegraph is being extended to all the principal points of the empire, and though there are political difficulties in the way of the immediate opening of railways, there is abundant indication that they will soon be built throughout the land.

"Objections to Church Suppers."

MR. EDITOR: In the last issue of the ADVOCATE your correspondent, "S.," presents some well-founded objections to "church suppers" as a means of getting money for the cause of God. I only wish he had written to greater length on this subject, and to say, Amen! to what he did write. It does seem to me more on this line ought to be said through our church papers. I, therefore, ask the privilege of offering something additional on the subject in the columns of the ADVOCATE.

The position is taken that all methods, such as "festivals," "entertainments," "lotteries," "rattles," etc., being out of harmony with the seriousness and sacredness of God's cause, are, to say the very least, of doubtful propriety in raising contribution thereto. These methods are also out of harmony with the nature of the obligation to support the cause of religion. That there is such an obligation all intelligent Christian people readily admit. That it is of the nature of a debt is also admitted. The Scriptures place it on that ground. Now, does an honest man think of waiting to be "entertained," "feasted," hired to pay his debts? And yet that is the very principle upon which all the methods in question, of getting money for the cause of God, must always rest. These methods are open to the objection, that they are liable to lead to excess in the way of amusements, if, indeed, they are not of that character themselves. I have heard of "hops" closing the exercises of the "entertainment" gotten up in the interest of the church! As for rattles and lotteries, they are but gambling under other names, and not to be tolerated for a moment by Christian people.

Another objection is that they tend to lower the sense of obligation to support the church, and tend to make the scriptural plan of direct appeal a comparative failure. The people come at last to look to such occasions as the way, the easy way of raising revenue for the church.

Other things might be mentioned, as, for example, the immense labor imposed on a few individuals, the danger to the health of some, etc.

Besides all this, every good cause ought to rest upon its own merits. This is true of missions, church extension, parsonage building, support of the ministry, and like things. When the church reaches the point of strong faith and intense interest in these things for their own sakes—which she ought to have, and must have in order to fulfill her mission—the world will not be slow to appreciate the fact, and the difficulty of raising the needed funds will disappear.

What is the scriptural plan? (See Exodus xxxv, 4-29.) This offering for the tabernacle was "commanded;" it was to be a "willing offering unto the Lord" by all the "men and women of Israel whose heart was stirred;" "and they came, everyone whose heart stirred him up, and everyone whom his spirit made willing, and they brought the Lord's offering to the work of the tabernacle of the congregation, and for all his service, and for the holy garments." They didn't get up a "supper"!

Paul says (I Cor. xvi, 1-3): "Now, concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let everyone of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come," etc. (See also II Cor. viii, 1-15.)

These and other places in the Bible show that the Christian plan for the support of God's cause is one of willing and systematic contributions. But enough.

Hints and Helps to the Study of God's Word—No. 2.

INSTRUCTION FROM EXAMPLES OF SCRIPTURE.

1. In comparing examples, they must be parallel.

"Had Zimri peace who slew his master?" (II Kings ix, 31.)

This was the language of Jezebel to Jehu, who was going into Israel against Joram, her son. She inferred that Jehu's work would be like Zimri's—a failure. But the cases were not parallel. Zimri's conduct was against the Divine law. Jehu had Divine authority. This changes the whole nature of the case. Instance—Abraham offering up Isaac, Joshua destroying the Canaanites. Without Divine authority, these cases would have involved the actors in cruelty and criminality of great turpitude.

2. On some points of duty, the light was not so clear and strong in the patriarchal and Mosaical dispensations as it is with us. This gives greater distinction and brighter luster to the piety of some of the Old Testament saints. It accounts, also, in some measure, for the failure in others, while failure on our part, in such cases, would involve us in much greater criminality—our advantages being much greater. So our piety or impiety takes its character from the light, knowledge and opportunities we possess and use, or abuse. (See Matthew viii, 10; xv, 28.) The guilt of Judas was greater than that of Pilate. "Therefore, he that delivered me to thee hath the greater sin." He can not properly infer that it is safe to defer repentance until a deathbed, because the thief on the cross was saved. Capernaum was more guilty than Sodom, and all who possess great religious privileges and opportunities, such as we have, are most solemnly warned by the fearful doom of that city. (Matthew xi, 23.)

3. It is important, in studying the Scriptures, to search for the principles which are the springs of actions, and to apply these to our own hearts and circumstances. Instance—In Genesis xxi, 9, it is stated that "Ishmael mocked Isaac." The principle of action, in this case, is indicated by Paul. (Galatians iv, 29.) It was persecution "of him that was born after the Spirit," by him that was "born after the flesh," contempt of God's promises, mocking of true religion. Elijah mocked the priests of Baal. But this was an expression of holy and indignant reproof for the folly and wickedness of their idolatry.

Elisha commanded fire to consume men. This did not spring from a vengeful spirit; but designed to teach a wicked ruler, and an idolatrous nation, that the true and living God must be sought, in all our troubles and afflictions, as the only source of help and deliverance. (I Kings xviii, 27.) On the contrary, the zeal of John and James was without knowledge—was the spirit of persecution, and brought upon them a withering rebuke from their Master. (Luke ix, 54.)

4. Again: The silence in not condemning any particular actions should not be construed into an approval nor palliation of such actions. Instance—The massacre of the people of "Jabesh Gilead." (Judges xxi, 10.) David's deceit to Ahimelech (I Samuel xxi, 1-10); for elsewhere the Bible condemns the very principles from which such actions spring, and illustrates their sinfulness by recording the fearful consequences which spring from them. These remarks will apply to polygamy.

Close the Bible, hush all the theologies into silence, leave us alone with ourselves, and still we are impressed that we, naturally and necessarily, have to do with some one who is constitutionally, officially and perpetually our superior. We are also convinced that there has occurred some disturbance of our relations to this other Being; and that we are no longer in our former harmony with him. Now, listening to the message which comes to us in the Bible, claiming to be the revelation of his will concerning us, we discover who he is; find out what is the trouble between us; and learn there is a method for adjusting our differences, and for re-establishing our original relations.

(Northern Christian Advocate.)

This "law of the Spirit" is an assurance to every believer that his highest possible spiritual development is provided for in the plan of God. The incarnation is the manifestation of the infinite love of the Father whose only begotten Son is described as being "full of grace and truth"—that is, of love communicating itself to man through his truth. When that Divine love is received by faith and a new life of trustful love is thereby begotten in a human heart its activity does not cease, but through the working of the Holy Spirit seeks to stimulate that new life into healthy and complete development. The grace made visible in the incarnation and operative in the first quickening effects of the Spirit's invisible activity now becomes the grace of further enlightenment, of helpfulness, of guidance and of strength-giving.

(Central Methodist.)

Humility is not opposed to the deepest gratitude, but is in direct opposition to pride and all self-exaltation. The year's reports of the increase in our Southern Methodism should awake gratitude, but they must not make us proud. Christianity is still in a great minority. We have nothing of which to boast. We are progressing, it is true, but not as we should. "He that exalteth himself shall be abased," applies to the church as fully as to the individual. This writer can remember when the Methodists were a despised sect. Numerous, wealthy, aggressive, and successful, it becomes us to be filled with gratitude and clothed with humility. Then added to these virtues we should have the Holy Ghost to inspire our devotions; to give efficiency to our preaching, and to be ever present in all our services, and we shall be simply irresistible.

(Advance.)

The often repeated fact that certain of the saints of the early times "walked with God" implies as well that God "walked with them." This is to say, God suited his mode of manifesting himself to them, and of dealing with them, to their peculiar condition. The "signs" and "wonders" which were then made use of were such as were exactly adapted, then, to them. The experiences of Noah, of Abraham, of Moses, of Elijah, of Jonah, were instances of "walking with God." And these are easily believable, not because God is able to do such things (for since the primal miracle of creation, it is idle to haggle over miracles as impossible), but because there are clearly seen moral reasons for what was done, in order that men, who were themselves to be in some pre-eminent way leaders of men, might themselves first learn to "walk with God."

(Presbyterian.)

There is a difference between a lighthouse and a parlor lamp. Through brilliant lenses the great lighthouse pours its splendid floods of light far out to sea where the ships go; but not one tiny gleam of radiance does it cast on the bit of sand around its own base. It is as dark close about the foot of the tall column as if there was no lamp shining within a hundred miles. It is a sad thing if any Christian parents think of themselves as lighthouses, pouring abundance of spiritual blessing on a whole community, brightening other homes and filling institutions with gladness and benefit, while close to them, in their own homes, scarcely a gleam of their brilliance falls. A parlor lamp is a better figure for Christian parents than a lighthouse. It fills the space just around itself with soft beams. Then if the windows are left open some of its light also streams out and falls upon the street, making the path plainer to passers by.

"IF IT BE POSSIBLE."

BY "DIXIE."

Let this cup pass, my Father! I am sinking
In the deep waters which surround my soul;
And bitter grows the draught which I am drinking,
And higher rise the waves that round me roll.

Forsake me not in this, my need extremest;
Let not thy strengthening hand elude my grasp;
I know thy love, even when thou harshest seemest,
Father, most merciful! let this cup pass.

Life hath not laid her hand upon me lightly—
I have known sorrow, disappointment, pain;
Have seen hope clouded when it burned most brightly,
And false love fade, and falser friendship wane.

But now fresh chains around my heart are linking,
And to my lips is pressed a fuller cup;
And from the draught my shuddering soul is shrinking,
Father! I can not, can not drink it up.

What have I said? Will not thy grace sustain me?
Is thine arm shortened that it can not save?
Powerless indeed if thou, my God, disdain me,
I can do all things with the help I crave.

Haste thee to help me that, on thee depending,
I may have strength to say, "Thy will be done."
If this cup may not pass, thine angel sending,
Aid me, as thou of old didst aid thy Son.

And thou, my Savior! once our weakness sharing,
Tempted in all things, yet untouched by sin,
Hear my wild cry, leave not my soul despairing,
Help me the cross to bear, the crown to win.

First Days of My Itinerant Life.

Mr. Editor: While others of my brethren are telling of "storms," "poundings," "surprises," and the like, I thought it might be an opportune moment for giving the novel-like experience of the first hours of my itinerancy. It is well to see both sides of a thing.

Licensed on July 31, 1886, I am now in charge of my first work. Accustomed to the smiles of fortune, even her apparent frowns for a few days seemed a great burden to me, coming, as they did, on the threshold of a new life of untried realities. Getting aboard the train at Batesville on December 23, 1886, I started for the field of battle; but misfortune soon laid her heavy hand on me and claimed both me and mine for her own. The conductor of my train refused to stop to take aboard my family at Love's Station, whither they had gone to await my arrival on the way to my charge; thus forcing me to wait in Memphis for them on next train, and also to miss connection with the morning train on Valley road. I had written one of the stewards of my church at Faisonia we would be at Shaw's on the early train, and he had promised to meet us there; so I dispatched him at once of our misfortune, and that we would be down on next train, thinking, of course, the good brother would either be at the train or have some one meet us there. Our children, grown tired of waiting in Memphis, became extremely fretful on the ride to Shaw's, where we landed about eleven o'clock P. M., a cold, dark and cloudy night. By the kindness of the conductor and a gentleman, stranger to us, we succeeded in getting our three children—all then asleep—and our baggage and many bundles off the train. The engine puffed off in haste, leaving us standing in the dark with no good brother to meet us either in person or by proxy to take us to his home or tell us where it was best to stop for the night. Stepping into the depot, we found there an operator, who did not so much as ask us to be seated. Completely bewildered with the situation and such treatment, it was with difficulty we adjusted our feelings to the circumstances. But I soon saw that something must be done, for, as it was, we "had not where to lay our heads" for the night. I spoke to the operator, whose back was still to us while he fingered with his machine, and asked for the hotel, upon which he answered rather indifferently, "There is none." I then asked for a boarding-house, and had the same reply—"There is none." I also asked if there lived a Methodist preacher or family in town, and was answered in the negative. Then I began begging for some place where my family could rest for the night; but the reply of the crabbed little fellow was, "If there is such a place in town, I know nothing of it; the boarding-houses are all closed." So here we were, some two hundred miles from home, away from friends and loved ones, with not one eye to pity nor an arm to bless. I understood now more fully the Master's words, "The Son of man hath not where to lay his head." I found my way through the dark as best I could from the depot to the nearest light I could see in the town, and soon found myself in a saloon where were some roughs playing billiards; but even these "sons of the wicked one" could not give the desired information. Finally, meeting by accident with a negro boy, I hired him to hunt us up a stopping-place. He went off, and, after some half hour of "much ado about nothing," returned stating the mayor said "he could give us a room with one bed, if that would do." As this was the best, of course it would do; so we repaired at once to the proffered room; and soon found ourselves in a little box room about 10x12 feet, one small bed and no fire-place or stove; one chair, water stand, but no water, open floor, with the wind whistling in from the north through the cracks and the rain pouring down upon the roof like it would split the boards. However, we soon piled into, or rather, all over, the little bed, and snoozed a little; for how could we sleep five double in one small bed! Wife suggested, if this was a fair sample of the itinerant's life, she could heartily wish herself back home, where she would stay for all time to come. I tried to console her with some good reflections; but the ideas seemed "far fetched" and didn't work well. Indeed, it was hard to be cheerful amid the evil forebodings of such an hour. Time wore heavily on my hands as I mused on what the future might be, until even my thoughts became a burden to me. But the hours passed wearily and the morning came. The night of storm and gloom was followed by a bright and cloudless day, promising better things for the future. We had a nice breakfast, and our hostess refused all compensation for her kindness in caring for us. She had really done the best she could under the circumstances, and we return our sincere thanks for the accommodations given us that memorable night.

About ten o'clock in the morning our good brother came in town with some cotton; and we found he had not received our telegram, and was not expecting us. Of course this made all things satisfactory on the score of good feelings; but really "the most unkindest stroke of all" was yet to come. Putting some chairs in the wagon, we all got in and pulled some five miles through mud and water to the good brother's house, where we were domiciled in a splendid mansion for the night. We now felt better; but, alas! the spell was soon broken, for we learned from his own lips, by intimations which could not be misunderstood, that the "young preacher" was not wanted on the Faisonia circuit. We forgot now the trials of the previous night to brood over our new-born cares. This blow would seem enough to drive us from the field; but, no! the Bishop had sent us here, and we had come to stay. Nothing but death could separate us from the people we must serve. The next morning the good brother loaded his wagon with us again, and, without asking that we spend the day, sent us in post haste to the parsonage. We had not a morsel there to eat, and nothing but mattresses on which to sleep, with but little covering, as our bedding hadn't come. We came along without a murmur. On reaching here, we deposited our family, and went in haste to the store of Bro. G. W. Faison for bedding and provissions, for it was near evening, and we had no dinner, so must prepare for the night and supper as well. While at the store Bro. G. W. Faison, learning our condition, soon brought in Sister Faison, a most estimable and motherly lady, who insisted on our coming to her house and making it our home until our bedding should come, which we did without much insisting. We spent twelve days with them most pleasantly, during which time they entertained us right royally, and seemed never to tire in their efforts to make us feel comfortable and enjoy ourselves. We can never repay the great kindness shown us: for they found us "hungry, and gave us meat; thirsty, and they gave us drink; strangers, and they took us in." The Lord has a blessing in reserve for those who thus entertain his servants, which he will give them at that day.

The "winter of our discontent" is now ended, and the day-spring of brotherly love and charity dawns upon us. As we move to and fro among this good people every vestige of prejudice seems removed, and the mists of discontent have cleared away. We have a good parsonage, well furnished; and the sisters have been lavishing upon us the good things of this life, in the way of presents, ever since we first entered our new home. Even the good brother has relented and made full amends for past sins, and promises to work zealously with us in the cause of salvation. May the Lord bless him in this exercise of charity to both forget and forgive, and help each one of us to say with St. Paul, "This one thing I do; forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press forward toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." That we may have a prosperous year, and witness the conversion of many souls, is the sincere wish of this "unprofitable servant." "All is well that ends well." Yours fraternally,

F. P. SPENCER.

ADVOCATE.

Mr. Editor: This is a day of stir and some progress. Your richly fraughted paper of this week to hand and read. Every article is well worth the time commensurate to its length. It seems that our heavily loaded Advocates, with good things, are amply up with the spirit of the times. They are displaying the injunction of the Holy Bible—"Go on to perfection." This is encouraging to those who pay for them, gratifying to those who note their contents, and stimulating to others to subscribe. Our own organ appears to be excelling in attractiveness of dress and freshness of matter. It spreads before us early in the latter part of the week a repast that is delicious, healthy and invigorating.

You now—the desire of the Conferences—give your entire time at its helm. You are starting off admirably, and it is only the effeminate and cowardly who will wisper the virulent sentence, "If he will just hold out." We ought to support you—more correctly, ourselves—laymen and preachers. Each church, in your special auditorium, during the next ten days, can send the paper a new subscriber, which would run up the list nearly four hundred. Then keep on getting renewals and losing no old ones.

A family is truly benefited by the weekly visits of a live Christian Advocate, the pastor's annoyances are lessened and the blessed cause of Jesus is increased. Many persons of means would confer a favor, help greatly their own work and get a blessing by sending a Christian Advocate to their neighbor. We must pay out more money for, circulate more extensively and study more closely, our own literature.

COURT.

The circuit court of Montgomery county adjourned Thursday, February 24. We had a four days' term of quiet and almost leisure of judicial ministration. The judge stated that he could have gone through with the business before him in two days, but had to wait on the grand jury—a body of seventeen men who did faithful work—and only found five true bills. A term of the circuit court has usually lasted from eight to twelve days in the town of Winona. What an economy of time! What a reduction of expenses! What a diminution of crime! What a saving of punishment! What an alleviation of suffering! Prohibition prevails in the county of Montgomery.

Dora Rankin.

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Jackson, La., the death of our beloved young missionary was the subject of regretful comment, and it was resolved that we should express, through the ADVOCATE, our sense of the loss we have sustained. To us it seems a mysterious dispensation that has removed from the field of labor so heroic and devoted a worker just when years of patient preparation had fitted her for successful effort, and there seemed fair prospect of reaping. But if the story of her life, in its beautiful consecration, and of her death, so full of peace and triumph, shall stir up other gifted women to follow in her footsteps, then will she, being dead, yet speak for Christ.

To the bereaved family of our young sister we offer our heartfelt sympathy, praying that the consolations of God may abound to them.

From the Work.

YAZOO CITY, MISS.

Mr. Editor: Our first Quarterly Conference has just passed, and we think we have the work pretty cleverly in hand. Finances are well up. As the church has been gaining financial strength not only by the increase of numbers, but by the development of the grace of liberality, the stewards have correspondingly increased the pastor's salary. They resolved to pay the same quarterly in advance, and are industriously educating the membership up to this standard.

Bro. Ellis, in the presiding eldership, is as one "to the manner born." His sermon, on Sunday, on "The duty of the church to the ministry," was "good to the use of edifying," and would be profitable, if preached, in many of our congregations.

We have here one of the most commodious parsonages of which I have any knowledge. A noble band of Wesleyan Sisterhood have it in charge, who know how to keep it cheery and home-like to the pastor's family. We reached here during the "big snow" that confronted so many of our preachers just after the last annual revolution of our itinerant wheel. We were welcomed by warm greetings, glowing fires, a richly laden table, a well-supplied larder in excellent taste and variety, and full enough to last half the winter. When we were left alone, wife (in her poetic manner) said: "This good people know just how to put warmth into the icy heart of winter. Their fingers have swept softly o'er the delicate and sensitive chords of itinerant hearts before, and they understand the touch that brings the music of gladness and grateful love."

Some congregations exhaust all of their liberality and lavish all their soul-warmth on the pastor's family in their first reception. Therefore, I do not rush into the columns of the ADVOCATE, with a great sound of trumpets until I see how they hold out. I find they keep it up here as if it were a matter of course, or, rather, the performance of an accustomed religious duty and pleasure. They seem to understand the fact that preachers' families require and are entitled to just as many comforts as other people, and that, as their pastor ministers to them and theirs in spiritual things, they are called to minister to him and his in temporal things. We think this honorable mention of Yazoo City, in this connection, not out of place, for all people do not seem to recognize these obligations. But more anon, with your permission.

R. S. WOODWARD.

FLOYD, LA.

Mr. Editor: Being moved by the appointing power, at the last session of the Louisiana Conference, to this (Floyd) circuit, we started to our new field of labor on Thursday after the close of the Conference. On reaching Delhi we learned through Bro. Randle that our dear Bro. Patterson's family was quite sick, and it would be impossible for him to vacate the parsonage for several days. This gave us the opportunity to visit a few old friends in and about Delhi. Rev. B. F. White, seeing the difficulties that I was laboring under, came to see me and kindly offered me the residence of Sister White, if I would move into it, which I did gladly. You see, Mr. Editor, there is one Methodist preacher that has got to the "White House."

The good people sent conveyance to Delhi and moved us, free of charge, through a ruin that would remind you of one of the ruins that helped to float the ark. We have made one round on the work, and see that eleven years have made many changes here: many new faces to become acquainted with; many have moved away; many gone to their reward. Some few old faces that time has made his mark on, they are still in the service of the Master. They remember you and ask kindly after you. The old road is about the same as when you passed over it, about thirteen years ago. Some little changes around bad places—all of which made me think of the way to heaven, and the changes that had been made in the way. St. Augustine had a bad place in the way he marked out to heaven; only the elect could get by it. Calvin tried to bridge it; but none except the elect could find the bridge. John Wesley went a little higher up and found where the Lord Jesus, through the atonement, had made a highway that all could find and pass by repenting of their sins, and through faith in the Son of God. The Holy Spirit lighting up the mind of the prophet, seven hundred and fifteen years before the incarnation, he viewed a highway, saying, "The ransomed of the Lord shall return and come back to Zion, with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads," etc.

We are taking our missionary collection and forwarding to Dr. Kelley. Hoping the Lord will abundantly bless his people this year, and the church, I shall pray. Pray for us, Doctor.

C. T. MUNHOLLAND.

UTICA, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I have experienced a great many storms in my ministerial travels—storms of thunder and lightning, of hail and cyclone; but last night at the parsonage in Utica, Miss., the sky was clear, the moon shone bright, while the air was serene and calm. At about seven o'clock our attention was arrested by the premonitions of an approaching storm; first by a few scattering packages dropping in upon us, and in a few minutes the very elements were darkened with human beings. Old and young, male and female, Methodists, Baptists and Christians were pouring in upon us with parcels weighing from one to thirteen and a half pounds. Such a storm we never experienced before. What a huge pile of everything we needed, from a lucifer match to the hind-quarters of a hog!

But, Mr. Editor, the social feature of the occasion was truly refreshing. Such a union and communion of friends we rarely ever witness or enjoy. This people not only know how to devise liberal things, but know how to execute the same. I hereby acknowledge my gratitude to each donor, and appreciation of every gift, praying the Divine blessings upon the people of Utica. We are moving up along the line of temperance and church work in the bounds of this charge, and the outlook is encouraging at present. We hope in the near future to be able to report further progress.

F. M. WILLIAMS.

WINCHESTER CIRCUIT.

Mr. Editor: As reports from the work are coming in, we step forth with a report from Winchester circuit, composed of nine appointments, which, of course, necessitates some preaching in the week. We have a very kind people; some broad-minded and liberal-hearted ones. The spiritual condition is very good; we have quite a number who pray in public. We have prayer meetings and class meetings. Two of our Sunday-schools did not go into winter-quarters. The congregations at church are large and attentive. The number of church papers taken is small. In going from house to house I set the claims of the ADVOCATE before them, and hope in the near future to send you more subscribers. This circuit is considerably on the increase over last year. All of the assessments are larger than any former year, and the people seem to be encouraged.

We have had one heavy storm, though not very destructive. Its contents were corn, meat, flour, rice, molasses, and many other valuable presents. It was highly appreciated by the writer and his wife. The good Methodists and Presbyterians were among the contributors. May the good Lord bless and prosper them in temporal and spiritual blessings!

J. M. MORSE.

PRAIRIE CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: The new pastor of Prairie charge, North Mississippi Conference, was kindly received, and has been so generously cared for that he has no apprehensions as to his own welfare for the remainder of the year. The former pastor, Bro. H. L. Vaughn, and the active workers for the church were improving two of the houses of worship at the close of last year, and he will be pleased to learn that Prairie Church is now recovered, and Paine's Chapel ceiled, painted inside and furnished with a new stove—works begun during his pastorate.

Our punctual and systematic presiding elder, Rev. Amos Kendall, was in his seat at our first Quarterly Conference, and the business was well done. The answer to the "eighth question" gives promise of financial prosperity. The improvement in the print of our excellent Conference paper, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and the publisher's greatly improved plan for circulating it, will produce good results. We have great reason to thank God and work diligently.

BENJ. S. RAYNER, P. C.

VAIDEN, MISS.

Mr. Editor: Allow me space to say Vaiden is not behind the many other places we read of in expressions of kindness and appreciation of their pastor. On the night of the third this parsonage was stormed and pounded, and we didn't do it ourselves either. Storms are frequent with us. You see, nine in family can have a storm when they want it. But this was one we could not get up. We have been trying some time; but it only blew enough, by close economy, to get a living. Ah! how it does help to get a little lift now and then! This storm lasted about an hour, and closed with singing and prayer, leaving us about fifty dollars better off in the way of things too numerous to mention, and more gratitude than we could express. May God, who sent those good people to us with temporal things, help us carry the message of salvation to them! And I believe he will do it.

W. S. LAGRONE.

HOMER, LA.

Mr. Editor: A word from Homer may not be amiss. Our church here is in the most healthy condition; it has been for a long time. Bro. T. B. White, our pastor, seems untiring in his ministerial and pastoral work. He seems to be executive, eminently pious and chock full of work. His sermons are close and searching, his pastoral visits are much enjoyed by us and, I think, beneficial to us. He is a good Sunday-school man, and seems much interested for the success of all the aids to the church. Results: The membership is working better, congregations at church and prayer meetings are better and more attentive, the Sunday-school is increasing in numbers and interest, and the prospect for an abundant harvest of souls is good, I think.

F. C. GREENWOOD.

M'NUTT, MISS.

Mr. Editor: After spending four years with some of the best of God's people at Smithville and Fulton, Bishop Duncan told me to come down in the valley and preach to this new charge—Sunny Side and McNutt—in the Grenada district, Mississippi Conference. I assure you I was surprised at the religion and zeal I found here. A beautiful new church at Sunny Side, a large brick church and parsonage combined at McNutt, and a log rolling where they all belonged to the church, and all Methodists but one, and no whisky, tells that these people in the swamp can love God and hate the devil. I will try to do more for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE in the future than I have done in the past.

W. S. SHIPMAN.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I took my collection here yesterday for all the Conference claims—amount wanted $86, and got $152. One man gave $40. Now for a revival.

Yours, T. W. LEWIS.

Men Needed.

The armies of the living God need brave, bold words—words of love, but keen as drawn swords. It is for the leaders to utter them in trenchant kindness. Soldiers fight well when led well. Hannibal once said he would rather have an army of stags governed by lions than an army of lions governed by stags. Away with pusillanimity! The path of duty has no place for fear. "Woe to thee, O land, where thy king is a child." "The Lord is a man of war," and "Great Heart" is his general. Courage, ye timid souls! To the front, and in God's strength bear the fiercest blows. "We can't," said ten cowardly spies. "We can," cried two brave hearts. The counsel of the brave prevailed; Israel took the land. "Impossible, is the adjective of fools," said Napoleon Bonaparte to one who betrayed lack of courage. It certainly is when the eternal God bids men to do a thing. Use brave words, then carry brave souls. Of John Knox it was said: "He never feared the face of clay." Why need we? We have his God. Of Luther it was recorded that "his words were half battles." Engirded with truth, encompassed with Omnipotent arms, the true reformer should be as Jeremiah, "a brazen wall, a defensed city, an iron pillar." It is God who says, "Be not dismayed." Therefore, be strong and show thyself a man.

And if thou hast truth to utter,
Speak it and leave the rest to God.

—Baptist Weekly.

Is There Any Hope?

NEW AND IMPORTANT OPINIONS OF PULMONARY EXPERTS!

CAN THE UNIVERSAL CONSUMPTION BE SUCCESSFULLY TREATED?

Dr. Borgeon, a leading French doctor, has a new treatment for consumption!

He gives an enema of carbonic acid and sulphuretted hydrogen gases, the latter gas carrying the former into every part of the throat and lungs.

This treatment, too, is directed at effects—the cause remains undisturbed.

What this cause is has been stated by perhaps the highest pulmonary authority in the world, i. e., the Brompton Hospital for Consumptives, in London, Eng.

This malady every year carries off from one-seventh to one-fifth of the entire population of England!

Dr. Payne, M. D., M. R. C. P., London, is authority for this statement.

The same or a greater proportion of deaths obtains in America.

Dr. Payne also says that one-half the total number of deaths from all other causes have seeds of this disease in the system which only require some irritant to develop!

Dr. Hermann Brehmer, an eminent German authority, says that consumption is caused by deficient nutrition of the lungs, by poor blood.

These authorities can not be disputed. The medical world recognizes them. The uric acid is the irritant in the blood that causes the development of the seeds which Dr. Brehmer says lie dormant in the blood.

Every particle of blood which passes through the lungs and heart, also goes through the kidneys, and if they are in the least deranged they can not rid the blood of its killing poison. The thousand little hair-like sewer tubes of the kidneys very easily get blocked up and diseased; and when they do, they corrupt instead of purifying the blood. Kidney disease may exist, and yet no pain occur in that organ, because it is deficient in nerves of sensation.

Dip your finger in acid every day and it soon festers and is destroyed. Send acid poisoned blood through the lungs every second, and they soon give way.

The Brompton Hospital investigation showed that 52 per cent. of the victims of consumption were afflicted with deranged kidneys, which permitted the uric acid poison to remain in the blood and irritate the lungs. This uric acid is always fighting every vital organ, and if there be any inherent weakness in the lungs it inevitably causes pneumonia, cough and consumption.

The real cause of pulmonary troubles being so authoritatively shown to be faulty even though unsuspected action of the kidneys, explains why, in order to master the dreaded consumption, one must rid the blood of the uric acid irritant which inflames and burns up the lung substance. For this purpose there is nothing equal to the great specific, Warner's safe cure. This remedy has now the favor of medical men all over the world purely on its merits. We have no doubt that if the kidneys are kept in natural action, consumption and a great many other diseases, caused by uric acid, will not only be cured but will be prevented.

When the kidney is healthy, no albumen appears in the water, but albumen is found in the water of more than half of those who die of consumption!

This, then, is the condition of things that always precedes consumption: First, weakened kidneys; second, retained uric acid, poisoning the blood; third, the development of the disease in the lungs by the irritant acids passing through them. Then there is a little cough in the morning; soon thick, yellow matter is spit up, followed by loss of flesh and strength, with dreadful night sweats: and when the patient goes to his school physician for help he is put on cod liver oil which his stomach, weakened also by uric acid in the blood, can not digest. Because there is no pain present in the kidneys, the patient does not think they are affected, but the kidney acid is doing its work every minute, every hour, day and night, and by-and-by the disease of the lungs has advanced until pus is developed, then come hemorrhages, and at last the glassy stare which denotes that the end is near!

A post-mortem examination of such cases shows that the terrible uric acid has completely destroyed the substance of the lung.

It is imposible to cure lung disease when the blood is poisoned with uric acid.

Reading.

There are many persons who are possessed with a strange and unaccountable conviction, that to read a book are to write a book are processes which require little, if any, previous training or preparation. The one error is sufficiently obvious to all who pay any attention to the great mass of cheap literature which is pouring from our printing-presses; the other is less easy of detection. "The first lesson in reading is that which teaches us to distinguish between literature and merely printed matter," is the admirable maxim laid down by Mr. Lowell, and this is one of the essential points in which the personal influence of an experienced friend is of inestimable value. As the latent beauties of some great masterpiece of art unfold themselves to our eye under the guidance of a Kugler or a Ruskin, and we are thus enabled to detect their presence or their absence in the works of other hands and other schools, so in the masterpieces of literature the realization of the points, wherein the chief merits of each lie, places us in a position to form a standard—to possess a talisman, which shall enable us unerringly to detect the true from the false. Mrs. Knowles said of Dr. Johnson: "He knows how to read better than anyone; he gets at the substance of a book directly; he tears the heart out of it." This faculty, which was exhibited in a marvelous degree also in Southey and Macaulay, is as rare as it is enviable; but there are not a few who erroneously suppose themselves to be possessed of it. The hurried, careless method of reading is one of the chief dangers a student should guard against. In studying a work of biography, for example—but above all in studying the classics—the first requisite, and one which is, as we have said, sadly overlooked in public school teaching, is the acquisition of a simple, general outline of the period to which the work relates. In the fashionable phrase of the day, the books so read are frequently not in correspondence with their environment. To him whose views of Roman history are but a shapeless mist, if not an absolute void, Virgil and Horace are sealed books; nor can anyone who is ignorant of Scotland and her traditions penetrate beyond the busk of "Waverley" or "Old Mortality." To the young beginner a few judicious words of explanation at the commencement of a book may serve to awaken that interest without which reading is useless, and to make darkness light; and, similarly, a few words of discussion, when the book is completed, will have the effect of consolidating the floating ideas to which the perusal has given rise. The habit of casting aside a book as soon as the last page is read, without pondering over its contents and recalling the argument and refreshing the memory where it has failed, or allowing the "frenzied current of the eye to be stopped for many moments of calm reflection or thought," is apt to render worthless all the previous effort.—English Quarterly.

IMPERFECT digestion and assimilation produce disordered conditions of the system which grow and are confirmed by neglect. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier, by its tonic properties, cures indigestion and gives tone to the stomach. $1.00 per bottle.

Four Ways of Reading.

When one is really anxious to know how and what to read, he perhaps consults the book written by Prof. Porter, of Yale College, called "Books and Reading," or two volumes on "The Best Reading" in Putnam's "Handy Book Series," or the little book prepared by Prof. C. F. Richardson, of Dartmouth College, on "The Choice of Books."

The yearly issue of new books by the press of the great European States and of our own country is more than a hundred a day. Those already published, who can compute? I have been asked to give some practical hints about reading, and I want first to tell you of four persons who stand for four types of readers.

A very bright lady friend, who might have been anything she chose to be as a scholar in art and literature, said to me the other day, after putting down a novel of the most ephemeral kind: "How I wish I had not got into this bad habit of reading nothing but novels and the newspapers! Why, now I can't fix my mind on anything solid!" She did not fully realize the truth of what she said; did not see that her character had not the strength, her conversation or her knowledge the foundation, that it needed.

How one can live on whipsyllabub and Charlotte Russe and caramels in preference to roast beef, broiled chicken, or even a boiled-dish, is a mystery. The lack of nourishment is evident. The first named trifles are capital in their place for dessert after the good dinner.

Then I recall another lady who reads very many books. With a large library, a book club, a pamphlet society, and a score of newspapers, she is usually deeply immersed in literature. Where does all this knowledge go? Right through her brain, and out into nowhere! No definite gain for all those hours. Ask for a certain fact, a date, a name, an anecdote, a quotation, she is confused, and gracefully changes the subject. Reading without reflection is like eating without digestion. Nutrition and growth are arrested.

Then I remember a good family who intend to read profitably and be thorough and careful. And they select for reading aloud in the family a history like Clarendon's, five heavy volumes on a comparatively unimportant theme. Callers drop in, or father gets tired and falls asleep on the lounge, and Alice tries to teach her Scotch terrier a new trick. You see? It hasn't sufficient value and interest to hold the attention.

The fourth. A gentleman who is proprietor of one of the largest and most popular hotels in one of our largest cities must be a busy man. Yet I know such a one who is one of the best and most satisfactory talkers that I meet. I said to him one day, "Do let me ask you how it is that you find time to be informed on all the news of the day, and can talk intelligently on new books, politics, etc." He said: "When I was a poor boy, working hard all day, a kind old gentleman used to lend me his New York Daily after he had read it. One night this occurred to me: 'What can I remember of what I have read for the past three weeks? What has been going on in England, in Germany, in France? What new book has been published? What progress has been made, and in what direction?' So, putting aside my precious papers, I went all round the circle—politics, art, news, literature, etc.—till I felt I was certain of some things. I have kept up that habit ever since. What I read, I make mine, and if I can't read a book, I read a good review of it and feel that I have perhaps the best of it."

Definite knowledge is the key to success. One hour each day given to reading in the right way will make a young man or young woman well-informed and intelligent.—Kate Sanborn, in Youth's Companion.

A Good Nurse

Should not hesitate to wait upon those ill with such diseases as Small-pox, Cholera or Scarlet Fever. There is little to be feared by persons waiting on the sick if they will use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid freely. In sick-rooms it should be exposed on a plate or saucer, and the patient sponged off with the Fluid diluted. For safety, cleanliness and comfort in the sick-room the Fluid is indispensable.

Receive Christ with all your heart. As there is nothing in Christ that may be refused, so there is nothing in you from which he must be excluded.—John Flavel.

Tutt's Pills

stimulate the torpid liver, strengthen the digestive organs, regulate the bowels, and are unequaled as an anti-bilious medicine. In

Malarial Districts

their virtues are widely recognized, as they possess peculiar properties in freeing the system from that poison. This popular remedy rarely fails to effectually cure and all disorders arising from a Torpid Liver and Bad Digestion.

Dyspepsia, Constipation, Sick Headache, Biliousness

A Proclamation!

Dr. I. Guy Lewis, Fulton, Ark., says: "A year ago I had bilious fever; Tutt's Pills were so highly recommended that I used them. Never did medicine have a happier effect. After a practice of a quarter of a century, I proclaim them the best medicine ever used. I always prescribe them in my practice."

ANTI-BILIOUS

MOTHER'S FRIEND

Not only shortens the time of labor and lessens the pain, but it greatly diminishes the danger to life of both mother and child, and leaves the mother in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery, and less liable to Flooding, Convulsions, and other alarming symptoms. Its efficacy in this respect entitles it to be called THE MOTHER'S FRIEND, and to rank as one of the life-saving remedies of the nineteenth century.

We can not publish certificates concerning this remedy without wounding the delicacy of the writers. Yet we have hundreds on file.

A CONSUMPTIVE CURED.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp which cured his only child of CONSUMPTION. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that CONSUMPTION can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two 2-cent stamps to pay expenses. This herb also cures Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Notice to Delinquents.

The publisher of this paper has been carrying so many delinquent subscribers that the burden has become intolerable, and he is talking very seriously of unloading. We shall be very sorry to say "farewell" to any of our readers: but we believe it is better to do that than to keep them company and thereby endanger our own life. Will the preachers—the agents of our paper—bring this matter before their congregations, and thus try to save the paper to these subscribers? We trust they will.

EDITOR.

Briefs.

The following figures from an exchange shows that the Negroes in the South are improving in the matter of education. There are 1,000,000 pupils in the schools, 16,000 being in the high schools. There are 60 normal schools, 50 colleges and universities and 25 theological seminaries. The Negroes pay taxes on $150,000,000 worth of property. There are 3,000,000 worshipers in the churches.

The Watchman (Baptist) gives the following statistics of the Baptist Church in the United States: One thousand two hundred and forty-four associations, 19,377 ordained ministers, 30,522 churches, 2,732,376 members, 13,889 Sunday-schools, 1,118,622 officers and teachers and pupils, $42,558,794 in church property, $849,838 contributed for missions, $108,749 for education, $7,843,031 contributed for all purposes. Such figures stand for an immense power, and point to possibilities that bewilder all calculations!

Dr. Kelley is writing some thoughtful articles, on "Church Music," in the Nashville Christian Advocate. Like all the Doctor's writings, these articles evince advancement of thought on this particular line. We hope that our people, especially our preachers and choir leaders, will read them closely. As for our opinion in this matter, we are firm in the conviction that the church ought to have the best of every good thing. There is nothing better than music. Indeed, it has been a part of our religion from the first, and it is our duty to see that we have the best that we can get.

Crime is fearfully on the increase in this country, if there is any truth in these figures, which we take from an exchange: In 1850 there were 7,000 persons in the prisons of the United States. In 1880 there were 59,000. That is, one in every 3,000 persons in 1850 was in prison; and in 1880, one in 837. This proportion has gone on during the last six years. In England the ratio has gone the other way. In 1859 there was one to 7,000 in prison; but in 1884 there was only one to 18,000. The reason for this difference between England and this country is said to be in the fact that English prisons are reformatory, and ours are not. If that is the reason, our legislators ought to make a change in that direction.

The editor did not return to the office in time to tell his readers of a pleasant visit to Grenada, Miss., but will give an account of it next week.

The College Question Again: Affirmative.

BY "BARNABAS."

Bishop Galloway's "suggestion" seems likely to prove suggestive. The discussion it has provoked will go on. There will be a stirring of the dry bones, of course; but there will also be a movement of new life among those which have marrow in them. Whatever may result from the agitation of the question now, there is no doubt that a candid and temperate interchange of opinion by the parties in interest will be productive of good in the future. Bishop Galloway gives us the episcopal view, which is, as we would expect it to be, broad, comprehensive, impersonal. Dr. Adams and Bro. Bradford naturally see the subject as it affects the institutions over which they preside.

If now we can have an article from a professional lay teacher, one from the representative of that class of patrons—referred to by Bros. A. and B.—who pass by their home schools and go farther to fare worse, and yet another from the "liberal layman" whose thought is directed to the endowment of our institutions of learning, the readers of the ADVOCATE will be prepared to vote on the question of expanding or contracting our educational system (?). On several points, it may be safely said, there is general agreement: (1) That there is something wrong somewhere; (2) that something ought to be done, and (3) that, in doing it, a few of our schools must be enlarged, while the larger number suffer loss of name and position. The trouble arises when we come to locate the loss and gain. "Hoc opus, hic labor est," I would say if I had the confidence of my classics as Dr. Adams has. Post Oak University and Sleepy Hollow Female College lay as strong a claim to a raison d'etre as do Vanderbilt or the Wesleyan.

Without touching at present that delicate question, I am in favor of the general plan proposed by Bishop Galloway for the following reasons:

1. It would elevate the standard of scholarship in our various institutions. There are few teachers of experience who have not at some time suffered under the necessity of carrying a college curriculum with insufficient appliances. The college president, who at a recent Annual Conference excused himself for not preaching more because he was too busy teaching mental and moral science, geology, astronomy, chemistry, Latin, Greek and the higher mathematics, covered the remainder of his multiplex duties with a modest "etc.," lest it might be supposed that he claimed to be six men instead of one. And his was not an exceptional case. Other good men and true, and efficient teachers withal, have been forced by the demand of a college in every charge to occupy this anomalous position. It needs no argument to prove that even Southern Methodism can not furnish many men—certainly not one in every pastoral charge—capable of teaching singly all these branches, etc., as well or nearly as well as it may be done by men who devote their entire time to study and instruction in one or two of them.

It is high time that this burden were removed from the shoulders and consciences of teachers who wish to do honest work, but are constrained by competition among the numerous colleges and collegettes, under Conference "patronage," to attempt more than they can possibly do well. The thought of turning out graduates in English literature from institutions which have not half a hundred volumns in their libraries, or giving a diploma in science taught with the use of a $20 apparatus, or a $1 collection in natural history or geology, is repugnant to every conception of thorough training. The responsibility for this state of things or its approximate does not in the main rest upon the teachers, but upon the system, or lack of it, adopted by our church.

2. The plan proposed is commendable on the score of economy. Not only would the aggregate investment in schools be better placed thereby, but the cost of real education to each individual would be diminished. This would result largely from the adoption of a uniform system of instruction. Teachers in higher schools are familiar with the difficulty of classifying pupils who have gone over all the elementary text books and are yet ignorant of the elements. Parents who fondly thought their children prepared for advanced classes in college have found too often that the time devoted in the local school to the study of the higher branches was largely wasted, in that the same ground has to be gone over again in lower college grades. The disappointment and sense of loss is still greater when it happens, as is not unfrequently the case, that even elementary books, which have been laid aside years ago to give place to the ologies, must be reviewed in order that these pupils may have some proper appreciation of the course they are to pursue at a well-equipped college. Here is a waste which a correlation of our schools and colleges would prevent. Not to mention other things, there would be a saving during a period of six or eight years, in the single item of text books, of almost enough to pay tuition for an additional half term. Nor would continuance until graduation at the home institution obviate this unnecessary expense; for, granting that each of the numerous colleges existing and to exist under our present policy were fully equipped—learned faculty, apparatus and all—yet the small number of pupils pursuing a higher course would necessitate a charge for tuition wholly out of proportion to that which would be incurred at a central college adequately endowed. But the concession of equal facilities is altogether unreasonable; we boast of things wholly without our measure when we claim to offer at any Methodist school in Mississippi or Louisiana facilities equal to those enjoyed by the pupils of Wellesley or Vassar.

The plan proposed by Bishop Galloway is good because it would conserve the connectional idea without which Methodism would lose one of its most distinctive traits. The "disintegration of church life and loyalty" is not a scare-crow nor a mere figure of speech, but a probability under present conditions which calls for serious and prayerful consideration. But the system proposed would be especially valuable to us, as a church, because it would tend to improve the religious character of our schools. Good reasons might be assigned for the statement; but those who are familiar with the subject need no argument to prove that there is great deficiency in this respect. The most efficient remedy would be found in making our educational work more homogeneous, and bringing it more directly under the supervision of the Conference whose patronage it enjoys and by whose authority it exists. Such supervision need not be inquisitorial, nor interfere with proper individuality in teachers, or wholesome variety in methods of discipline or instruction.

In short, the policy outlined by the Bishop would elevate the standard of scholarship by making the effect of our scholastic training cumulative, a more uniform preparatory course fitting the pupil from our lower schools to go right on in those more advanced, instead of having, at the beginning of a college course, to pass through a tedious and discouraging process of "reconstruction." It would be more economical in that every dollar contributed to endowment would be used under wise management to best advantage, while, as just stated, a considerable loss of time and money through change of books and methods would be avoided; and, finally, by giving a mere positively religious character to denominational education; it would vindicate the wisdom of the Church in establishing pay schools while the State offers free tuition; for, unless education by the Church does tend decidedly and distinctively to develop the moral and religious character of our children, it is an obstruction to that by the State, and ought to get out of the way.

Moreover, the indiscriminate multiplication of schools and colleges (?) will bring our denominational training into contempt, and will justify, in part, the practice of some of our people who send to schools away from home where, at least, they do not know in advance that the faculty and appliances are insufficient for the work assumed. It is not a mere question of names. Calling a grammar school a college does not elevate its standard, and our people will not long be satisfied with a diploma when they ask us for education.

What I have written does not go upon the supposition that the Methodist Church, South, is in any of these matters behind her sister churches or the general policy of our country. There is an educational inflation that is quite as ruinous to the best interests of Church and State alike, as that of the currency is to secular business, and for the same reason. So much for the general plan. To carry it out is a work which will test the wisdom and loyalty of our church. There is a large personal element in the problem which will call for tender and respectful consideration. In the solution which must come, sooner or later, somebody's private interest must give way, and some institutions of learning must be degraded for the general good. I sincerely believe that the wisdom of the church will stand the test, and that "church life and loyalty" will be quickened and compacted, not "disintegrated" thereby.

How to Study the Scriptures.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

(Read at the Preachers' Meeting, New Orleans, Monday, March 7.)

No other writings have been studied so much, so long, and by so many learned men. The Scriptures have been studied for a great variety of purposes—for their ancient historical narrations, for their supposed bearings on, and allusions to various branches of science, for information concerning ancient Oriental manners and customs, for geographical statements and descriptions, for ornithology, zoology and botany. The Scriptures have been studied for their sublime poetry and their matchless specimens of eloquence. They have been studied for their practical wisdom in the daily duties of life. They have been studied devotionally and for comfort by multiplied millions of men and for decades of centuries.

Tens of thousands of volumes have been published to explain or pervert the Scriptures, and thousands more have been written to attack or defend them. The Scriptures have been translated, published, circulated and read a hundred, a thousand times more than the most famous books which uninspired geniuses have produced. There has been more translation, criticism and learned labor bestowed on the epistles of Paul alone than on all the classics of Greece and Rome put together.

How to study the Scriptures, then, is a large and most comprehensive question, and its answering must depend on the objective point to which we particularly wish to direct our investigations. As ministers of the gospel—who have promised "diligently to read, to expound the Scriptures unto the people whom we are appointed to serve"—we need to study them for nearly all possible purposes. We have to instruct so many that are ignorant, remove the difficulties of so many that are stumbled and confused, to answer the objections of so many that have doubts, correct the errors of so many that have erred from the truth, and comfort so many that are in trouble, that we need full scriptural treasuries to bring forth things, new and old, that all who hear may receive their needed portions in due season.

We can, of course, and should, perhaps, particularize and divide and sub-divide our studies, and at times study with a specific object. For example, I once read through and made a study of the book of Job, as probably the oldest of all inspired compositions, in order to find out as far as I could the state of civilization in that remote age, by the allusions of the various speakers to the arts of agriculture, architecture, metallurgy, and travel, modes of business, and allusions to civil life and government. We can study some one doctrine, read and carefully note the statements of the Scriptures in relation to it, either as positive statements, or as illustrative of some aspect or bearing of the doctrine. Take, for example, the doctrine of the divinity of Christ; of the Holy Ghost. In my study Bible I mark on the margin where mention is made in the text of some attribute, some title or some action that proves the necessary divinity of the Son, or of the Holy Spirit. "O.," as a mark on the margin, would stand for "Omnipotence;" "e.," for "eternal;" "c.," for "creation;" "a.," for "atonement;" "f.," for "faith," and the like. So we can read with the specific purpose of getting the clearest and fullest scriptural representation of man's depravity; of faith, its offices and instrumental power and achievements. We can thus study the prophecies, note the fulfillment of some, and as certain the character of those to be fulfilled. We may study the miracles of Scripture, their character, difficulties and practical uses. Or we may make a study of the parables, collect clear ideas of their meaning and the use to be made of them.

The Scriptures contain a vast body of practical wisdom adapted to the instruction, comfort and guidance of men in all the relations and exigencies of life. We may make a profitable study of the exceeding great and precious promises; to whom given, through whom, and how to be applied, and thus be furnished to encourage and comfort the fearful and sorrowful.

For our own, as well as the edification of others, we should make devotional studies of the Scriptures for the development and cultivation of all the graces and "fruits of the Spirit." The study of the metaphors of the Scriptures, which are many and most beautiful, will enrich our minds and greatly increase our power and variety of expression. Scripture biography is a wide and fruitful field, affording much instruction, and furnishing a deep insight into human nature, and furnishing many interesting, useful and instructive themes for the pulpit.

In my pulpit preparations I have always made large use of the historical statements and biographical incidents of Scripture, because I have found that concrete facts had more interest to the great mass of the people than abstract statements. There are no words like God's words, and no forms of expression more luminous or beautiful. As David said to Ahimelech, "Is there a spear, or sword here;" and the priest said, "The sword of Goliath whom thou slewest in the valley of Elath, behold it is here." And David said, "There is none like that, give it me." So we may say of the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of the Lord—"There is none like it." The great mass of our hearers are far more familiar with scriptural language and facts than they are with the classics of Greece and Rome; the allusions are better remembered and understood, and far more beautiful and eloquent than anything in Homer, Virgil, Horace or Plutarch. Then Scripture statements come clothed with an authority and power that no other statements from a mere human source can have.

It is essential and supremely important, and of immense help to the most useful study of the Scriptures, to have a most profound appreciation of the exalted character of the Bible, that—as Locke has said—"has God for its Author, truth for its matter, and salvation for its end." A wonderful book indeed, edited in heaven by God Almighty, published by the Holy Ghost, and authenticated by a thousand supernatural wonders. It is a great help in studying the Scriptures to feel that we are contemplating the thoughts of God—thoughts that were once, in all the universe, only in the mind of God; and when these thoughts came forth to be the illuminators and guides of men, the chariot of God came down, and miraculous wonder attested the divinity of their origin, and each thought was as the kindling of the light of a new and fadeless star in the spiritual firmament of man. No other study will furnish so large, so rich and useful a variety of themes for the sacred desk; for the entrance of his Word giveth light; it giveth understanding to the simple, for it is a lamp to our feet, and light unto our path, and is able to make us wise unto salvation, for the law of the Lord is perfect.

Note on the College Question.

While our readers are enjoying the symposium on the church colleges, we present them with a paragraph from Prof. Tillett's article on "The White Man in the New South," contained in the March Century. The thought shows that Prof. Tillett's mind on the subject of education is set in the same direction with some of the articles that have appeared in this ADVOCATE. Speaking, not with special reference to church colleges, but to education in general in the South, he says:

The educational institutions of the South lack organization into a system. As it is, the training or preparatory schools and the colleges and the so-called universities are all rivals of one another competing for the same students. The greatest evil is the want of good training-schools preparatory to the colleges and higher institutions of learning. * * * Very few Southern colleges have any conditions of entrance; nearly all of them have preparatory departments, and hence students who should go to a preparatory school go at once to college. The better class of colleges in the South have just as high and rigid conditions of graduation as have institutions of the same grade in the North. The trouble is in their not having and rigidly adhering to proper conditions of entrance. As a result, preparatory schools can not live in competition with the colleges attracting to themselves the untrained students, who are disposed to go at once to the highest institutions that will admit them, thinking thereby to save time, not knowing that time lost in thorough training at a good preparatory school is time saved in the end. * * * Another evil result of this unfair competition between schools that should be mutually correlated to and helpful of each other, is that it causes many institutions that are in reality only preparatory schools to call themselves colleges. They are compelled to do this in order to secure students. For these evils the colleges are most largely responsible, and from them alone can come the remedy. The evil here named is the greatest that confronts the cause of thorough and higher education in the South. A few of the better colleges, however, are already leading in the rectification of this evil by fixing and rigidly adhering to proper conditions of entrance. * * * It is a hopeful sign of the times that preparatory schools are being started all over the South.

If what Prof. Tillett says above, in regard to the educational institutions of the South generally, is true, is it not also true of the church schools? Does not the same "evil" exist among them, and is not the remedy the same. It is plain that here is a distinguished educator who is pronounced in favor of an organization of the "educational institutions of the South into a system," by which they shall be "mutually correlated to and helpful of each other." If we understand Bishop Galloway's article, this is what he thinks our church schools need. And if such a system is good for non-church schools, would it not be equally so for church schools?

Notes.

The Congregationalist, in an article in the Sunday-school column on "The Supreme Test of Faith," has some points worthy of deep pondering. "The basis of a heroic character is an ambition to realize the plan of God." Out of harmony with God and his plans there is no true heroism. "The heroic character ripens through successive acts of obedience." Each act of obedience strengthens the moral nature and gets it ready for the crucial test that is coming. "Confidence in God becomes a principle of action embracing the whole life." The law of gravitation not only governs the swinging spheres above, but the sand grains at our feet. So faith governs the little acts as well as the great ones in the life of the true hero. The life of Abraham is an illustration of these points.

In view of the fact that Washington City is rapidly becoming a city of millionaire residences, and that governments, surrounded by such an atmosphere as great wealth always creates, must in time succumb to the evil influences flowing from such a source, the Picayune, of this city, suggests that the national capital "ought to be moved away from the corruptions of its wealth." It says:

There is really no need of one single capital. The Congress could be moved to St. Louis or some other central location. There is no need that it sit where the executive offices are located. It would be a grand step toward political reform if the legislative department of the government could be so wholly divorced from the other departments that no man connected with it need even see a man of either of the others. Let the Congress be rigidly restricted to the sole duty of enacting laws; let it be set in a place by itself; and the result would be visible in such a rapid and vigorous purification of political life as would astonish the people.

James Russell Lowell closed an after-dinner address before the Union League Club, of Chicago, with words that ought to command the profoundest attention of the country:

"Now, gentlemen," said the speaker, having touched upon the political safeguards of this day of rapid growth, "is there a great city in this country which is decently governed? Whose fault is it? Every day you let things go which morally are at compound interest. You can recover your pecuniary loss; that is easy enough, for we are an energetic people; but our moral loss is every day going on at compound interest, and the most experienced accountants that are known to human history are keeping the accounts."

The Raleigh Christian Advocate treats its readers to a short, but very readable article on "Family Prayer." If you do not have such in your household, think on these points made in that article: Family prayer is a precious privilege as well as duty. It is an effective means of securing the piety of the children. It will improve and deepen the piety of the parent. It has been a custom among all the saints of old. "Go thou, and do likewise."

DR. W. M. TAYLOR, in the March New Princeton Review, on the subject, "Essentials of Eloquence," says: "Eloquence can never be a common thing. It must be as exceptional as poetic genius. It is not to be expected from every man or even from the same man at all times. Every preacher can not be an orator nor even the same preacher in every sermon." That is all very encouraging. We can now reconcile ourselves to "getting in the brush!"

Mr. Spurgeon has said, "We can never have great preachers until we have great divines." This is a first-rate argument for a thorough theological training. The Divine doctrines and the facts of redemption are the greatest things known to human intelligence, and a thorough study of them must expand the mental powers and develop the moral and spiritual qualities beyond that which anything else can do. Therefore, study the Word early and late.

There are many societies now; some people think we have too many already, but we are in favor of another. The C. C. A. W.—that is, "Christian Combination for Aggressive Work." The necessities of society demand this very thing. We have acted separately until we have lost much valuable territory. Now let the Christians combine, and let the watchword be the old, old word—"Go forward."

The origin of the word "snap," as applied to a nuns' work, is said to be about this: Sir Joshua Reynolds was taken by a friend to see a picture. He looked over it, and said, "Capital composition, correct drawing; the color, tone, chiar-oscuro, excellent; but it wants—it wants that," snapping his fingers. The meaning was it wanted everything; that it was worth nothing.

As to preaching the gospel or science this is the best thing we have seen: "The Pauline method saves sinners, makes converts, extends the kingdom, organizes victory. The Eleatic method sharpens human wit, makes debaters and admirers, diffuses light without heat, ideas without impulse, and lets the kingdom come or go as it will."

Millsaps, with the exception of $100 given by Mr. J. S. Sexton. Rev. W. B. Murrah, a professor in the school, was elected vice-president.

The mail service from Holly Springs to New Albany will be discontinued after March 15.

The postoffice at Calhoun, Madison county, has been discontinued; mail to Canton.

After March 15 the mail service from New Albany to Cornersville will be curtailed, so as to begin at Myrtle, omitting New Albany, decreasing the distance nine miles.

Gifts to Whitworth College.

MR. EDITOR: Yesterday was a red-letter day in the history of Whitworth Female College. It was the occasion of a called meeting of the Board of Trustees, and action was taken which marks an advanced movement in this prosperous institution. The capacious residence, known as the "Brown House," with adjoining lots, situated next to the two large brick buildings, was purchased from the estate of the late Dr. H. F. Johnson, for twenty years the distinguished president of the college. This purchase, together with other expenses made necessary in inaugurating the present administration, amounted to about four thousand dollars, which sum, with the exception of $100 generously contributed by Mr. J. S. Sexton, was paid by Col. W. L. Nugent and Maj. R. W. Millsaps. This liberal offering to an honored institution of the church is worthy of all commendation. The college is doing admirably and has every assurance of the largest success. We feared the institution would decline with the death of its lamented president; but "God buries his workmen and carries on his work."

Truly and fraternally,

This is the year of jubilee to the Queen of England, and also the jubilee of the telegraph. The first patent on the telegraph was taken out June 20, 1837, one week before Victoria's accession to the throne.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.—Cottage No. 75 for sale. W. B. Thomson, 61 to 70 South Rampart St., New Orleans.

A bachelor editor, who had a pretty unmarried sister, lately wrote to one similarly circumstanced, "Please exchange."

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

A good memory should always be cultivated when ordering stationery to remember to include some of Esterbrook's Steel Pens.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

EDUCATIONAL.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue prices; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in this sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRASELIN, Howard Co., Mo.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

Our Young People.

THE SONG OF THE SCHOOL BOY OF 1900.

In times of old, as we've been told,
The people were so queer,
They learn'd to spell from spelling-books,
Which took them many a year.

Old Noah Webster wrote a book,
To teach them how to spell;
Yet though they spent both time and health,
They never learned it well.

And other men as wise as he,
To make such books oft tried,
They sought to lead for other men,
Themselves without a guide.

These books had letters, twenty-six,
While sounds were forty-two,
But combinations numberless
Made up the motly crew.

These letters, too, had many sounds,
The first had seven 'tis said,
And they who could not guess them right,
The birchen rod must dread.

Then men grew up in ignorance,
Which led to horrid crime,
The law which could not educate,
Then swung them out of time.

But thank the Lord we live in times
When spelling is not taught,
When we pronunciation know,
And spell without a thought.

Then honor to those worthy men
Who toil'd for better times,
We'll sing their praise in nobler strains
And more harmonious rhymes.

MR. EDITOR: Here comes another little girl, eleven years old, seeking admittance in the young people's department. As it is so kind of you to let us in, I will tell you of our home. My papa is a farmer, and a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. I have no pets, but we have a great many little lambs that romp very prettily of evenings when we feed them. For fear of the waste-basket, I will close by answering Meddie Robinson's and Mattie J. Easterling's question: David was seventy years old. I will ask a question: Where in the Bible is "Immanuel" found? With best wishes to you and the ADVOCATE, I will say adieu.

NETTIE MANNING.
HEBRON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: We have decided to write to the little cousins, as we think the children can benefit each other by asking questions in the Bible, as it makes us search the Scriptures. We are grateful to Bishop Duncan for sending us such a good preacher as Bro. T. B. Malone. We think he will do great good on Crawford circuit. We will ask a question: Who was sold by his brothers, and to whom? We will answer Kate Risher's question: Moses was found by the river in an ark of bulrushes by Pharaoh's daughter.

Yours truly,

LABELL GURRY,
WILMER BROTHERS.
ARTESIA, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a girl ten years old. My grandmother takes your valuable paper. I love to read the letters written by the little cousins. Carrie Floyd asks the question: "In what chapter in the Bible occurs the word 'O Lord' twenty times?" I find 'O Lord' in Psalm cxix. What governor sent for Paul while a prisoner and heard him concerning the faith in Christ? Clara Brown, Methuselah was 969 years old. This is my first attempt at writing for publication, and hope to see it in print.

Respectfully,

ADA E. BARHAM.
EAST CARROLL PARISH, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl fourteen years old. I go to school. My teacher's name is Miss Annie Dutcher. My studies are grammar, spelling-book, arithmetic, history, dictionary and writing. I have but one sister, and no brother. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My papa is superintendent. We have a new pastor—Bro. White. We all like him very much. I will close by asking a question: How old was Enoch when he died? As this is my first letter, I hope to see it in print. I remain as ever,

Your little friend,

IDA BEARD.
ARIZONA, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am ten years old. I go to school to my father. I study spelling, reading, arithmetic, geography and history. We have no Sunday-school, but I have plenty of good books to read. I love to read the children's letters in the ADVOCATE. We have a nice good man for our preacher, the Rev. W. M. Young. This is his second year with us. We all love him. Will any of my cousins tell where in the Bible the golden candlesticks are mentioned, and how many there were, and who wrote about them?

Yours truly,

LORENA SMITH.
CORINTH, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I feel a great interest in the young people's department in the dear ADVOCATE, and read a good many of the letters. I am just seven years of age. Bro. W. B. Hines is our preacher. This is his second year here. We have a good Sunday-school, which I, with my two brothers, Ellis and George, attend. I ride to Sunday-school on a large sorrel horse. We live in the country, you know. Now, I will answer Laura O. King's question: Methuselah was the oldest man, and his father was Enoch. "Enoch walked with God, and he was not: for God took him;" so Enoch did not suffer death. I will ask a question: What time elapsed between Enoch's first and second walk with God? Now, Mr. Editor, this is my first letter, so please do not throw it into that mammoth waste-basket of yours, for I hear it is so large it would put to shame one of our immense cotton baskets; and I know I could hide in one of them.

PEARL M. GASKINS.
CASEYVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eleven years old. My brother takes the ADVOCATE, and I read the little cousins' letters. I have a pet dog and a pet cat. I have two sisters and brothers older than myself, and I have a little brother younger than myself. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. We have preaching the first and third Sundays in every month. Well, I will close by answering Annie L. Brentley's question: Peter was in the dark when the light went out.

Your little friend,

ARCHIMEDES.—The philosopher Archimedes, so one version of the story goes, was given a gold coin by Hiero, King of Syracuse, and told to find out some way of discovering whether or not the gold was alloyed with silver, as the king suspected. Archimedes was sorely puzzled over the matter, and had almost given up in despair, when, as he sat in his bath, an idea occurred to him. He rushed homeward, crying, "Eureka! Eureka!" (I have found it.) He got a piece of pure gold and weighed it in water, finding that it lost one-nineteenth of its weight. The coin, however, lost more than one-nineteenth of its weight, showing that it was not pure metal. The discovery of this law—that a body immersed in water loses in weight an amount equal to the weight of the same bulk of water, or in other words the weight of water displaced—is assigned to Archimedes, and the instrument which proves this law is known as "Archimedes' balance."—Our Youth.

FOR sick headache, female troubles, neuralgic pains in the head, take Dr. J. H. McLean's Little Liver and Kidney Pillets. 25 cents a vial.

The following from the New York Tribune is good: "A young man wrote to the editor asking some questions: 'I am just commencing business and have some young men in my employ. How can I manage to prevent insubordination on the one hand, and to make an affirmative success on the other hand? Are there any books that will help me? What are some of the best books for a young business man?' The following suggestions were given in the answer: 'The best single treatise is the New Testament; next to this is the book of the Proverbs of Solomon. The best business man we have ever known memorized the entire book of Proverbs at twenty-one—carrying the American Tract Society's ten-cent edition in his vest pocket, and committing a half-dozen verses daily, and when he became an employer gave a copy of the book to every employee, with a friendly inscription, commending it as an admirable business guide.'"

Little four-year-old Floy had been riding with her father and mother, and the ride had been in quite new places—in by-ways and cross-streets that they had never before discovered. On the arrival home Floy ran to her auntie, exclaiming jubilantly, "O auntie, we've been to ride in the odds-and-ends of the country."—Harper's Drawer.

Flies—What Are They Good for?

Do all of our readers give a unanimous vote of "nuisance!" on the fly question? There will be at least one dissenting voice, for it is not supposable that the Creator made anything in vain, that all of the ordinary creatures around us, if not our servants, our masters, or in some other respects, are blessings. To understand and appreciate the uses and advantages of a large class of what may be termed scavengers, cleansers, it should be known that all living and breathing creatures are constantly throwing off foul and poisonous gases, and that all decaying animal and vegetable substances are as steadily polluting the air by decomposition and decay, while these combined influences would soon render the air contaminated, so poisonous, that animal life would be impossible, aside from some purifying influences. The vegetable world does wonders in this purification, the whole woody fibre of the world being composed of the carbonic acid gas, which results from breathing, combustion, decay, etc., while a large class, like the fly, crow, hyena, buzzard, swine, etc., true to their mission in this world, are ever busy in appropriating what would otherwise prove poisonous to us, food for them! A dead carcass is found on the surface, warmed by the sun, when decay promptly commences. The scavengers seize upon it, devour it greedily as if to protect us, the smaller bugs and insects offering their aid, as rapidly as possible covering with the soil what they can not promptly dispose of, that all the gases may not escape into the air, but enter the soil, there to nourish the vegetable kingdom, while the rays of the sun and the winds scatter the escaping gases far and wide, soon to be absorbed by the leaves and grasses, reappearing in forms of beauty, and wholesome fruits, grains, etc.

The fly does his part in this great and important work of purification, seeing with his 10,000 eyes what would pass unnoticed by us, eagerly devouring his appropriate food. This he finds in the smallest atoms of animal and vegetable matter, too small to be noticed by the tidy housekeepers, which otherwise would be permitted to putrefy, contaminating the air. We may imagine that he circles about in the air with no definite object in view, but if we will carefully watch him we shall be convinced that he has an object, collecting his food, atoms of impure or decaying matter, which otherwise would enter our lungs, adding to the impurity of our blood. This filth is collected on his wings and head, for as we see him light he scrapes his wings and his head with his legs and feet, passing the gathered morsels from foot to foot, the front pair passing his dinner to his mouth. In this way he is busily engaged during considerable of the time in the bright sunlight, when he can see his dainty morsels distinctly.

Truly, in Bible language, "where the carcass is, there will the eagles," the flies, the vermin, etc., "be gathered together."

In addition to the very important lesson of cleanliness, relating more to health than to mere looks, the fly teaches us the value of sunlight, not only to cheer, but to purify the air, for he has too good sense to live in a dark room. When the parlor is darkened he seeks a decent place for his release.—Selected.

A clam-shell is more convenient for scraping kettles and frying-pans than a knife. It does the work in less time.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints. Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

MILLSAPS—The Rev. William G. Millsaps was born in Copiah county, Miss., April 4, 1831, and was buried in Hazlehurst, the shire town of his native county, March 2, 1887. He was at the time of his death a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference, and for some years had been in too feeble health to render effective itinerant service. Gifted in unusual measure, by assiduous labor he became a scholar and preacher of remarkable versatility and culture. He was blessed with a thorough education, having graduated at the Indiana Asbury University with distinction. Entering the itinerancy of our Southwest at a time when we had less than a half-dozen college-bred preachers on the roll of his Conference, much was expected of him; and the largest expectations were not disappointed. So accurate was his scholarship, so wide the range of his reading, and so vigorous his own original investigations, that his pulpit ministrations were uniformly attractive and universally popular. Though modest even to timidity, with the humblest estimate of his really great abilities, he soon ranked among the foremost in his Conference, and was in demand for the most important appointments.

He bestowed the most painstaking labor upon his sermons. He put honor upon the pulpit. No unbeaten oil was brought into the sanctuary. Many of his discourses were models of clear exegesis, original method and fresh, suggestive illustration. In the communities where he lived the longest he was most highly regarded as a masterful expounder of the Word.

But excessive mental labor overtaxed a never robust physical frame, and soon prostrated him with disease. From this he suffered, with alternating hopes and fears, until the weary wheels of life stood still. Thus in the midst of his career, when the sun was sweeping to high noon, he was compelled to relinquish active labors and spend years of suffering and waiting. Had not this enforced interruption occurred—could he have persecuted his zealous toils for the Master uncheeked to the ordinary length of days—it is not too much to say he would have been a peer of the peerless—one of the first among the sons of the mighty. For breadth of culture and versatility of talent, I have rarely seen his equal.

He loved the church. To her doctrines and polity he loyally subscribed without reservation or mental rebate. And it was the grief of years that he could not carry her banner with the vigor and courage of his young manhood.

As a friend of denominational education, he gave liberally of his means to Whitworth Female College, and rejoiced in the great prosperity of that institution.

He leaves a devoted wife, two lovely daughters and a wide circle of relatives and friends to cherish his memory.

CHAS. H. GALLOWAY.

MAYERHOFF—Henrietta Eliza, infant child of Charles J. and Henrietta E. Mayerhoff, was born August 6, 1886, and died January 10, 1887.

God loaned this tender flower to the devoted parents for only a few brief months, and yet within that short space of time how the little one had entwined herself about their hearts none can appreciate except a loving parent who has been called upon to surrender a sweet little child to the God who gave it. The hearts of those loving parents should feel true consolation, not in the belief, but in a knowledge of the fact that they have an angel in heaven, where all is bright and beautiful, and that "little Sissie," as she was endearingly called by her little brothers, will stand at the beautiful gates, waiting and watching for the dear ones to join her in the land beyond the skies. E.

WASSON—At the first Quarterly Conference, Ethel charge, Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, held February 23, 1887, the following preamble and resolutions were read and adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in his mysterious providence, to take from us our much-esteemed and well-beloved brother, N. C. Wasson, who was a member of this Quarterly Conference about thirty years. He was converted in the fall of the year 1853 at the age of fourteen years. He was soon after appointed class leader by the Rev. J. G. Carlisle; served as such until he was licensed to exhort. In the year 1870 he was licensed to preach, in which capacity he served the church as a faithful local preacher. According to the usages of the church, he was ordained deacon and elder. During the years 1883 and 1884 he traveled the Zilpha circuit, and as pastor did faithful work; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Wasson this Quarterly Conference has lost one of its most efficient and exemplary members; the church, a worthy, active steward and preacher; his community, a true friend and brother; his family, a tender husband and an affectionate father.

Resolved, That this Quarterly Conference tender their condolence and sympathy to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That this preamble and these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Quarterly Conference, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

E. A. P. LUCAS, for Com.

TARLETON—The "I. L. Association," Pattersonville, La., in assembly on March 3, 1887, adopted the following resolutions, after having appointed Mrs. N. B. Trellue and Miss R. Grout to act as committee in behalf of the association. Mrs. N. B. Trellue was requested to act as chairman and Miss Grout as secretary.

Inasmuch as an esteemed and useful member of our association has been taken away from all earthly labors and been transplanted to a higher sphere, where her worth will still bloom to profit in the garden of God, we, who yet remain, will adopt the following resolutions as an outpouring of our grief, hope and love of the one who has left us:

Resolved, That in the decease of our beloved friend and useful co-worker, Rilla McGgah, consort of Dr. T. W. Tarleton, we have sustained a great loss, and beseech him who has afflicted us to be our Comforter in this sad trial.

Resolved, That we hope again to meet her in the heavenly mansions where she is already received, having died in the faith of him who has gone before to prepare a place for those who love him.

Resolved, That we retain a loving remembrance of her who was sunshiny of presence and true of heart, and extend our sympathies to those to whom she was most near and dear; and further that our secretary be requested to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the family of the departed, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, with a request that it publish the same.

MRS. N. B. TRELLUE, for Com.

RINEHART—Sister Shady Ann Rinehart, wife of Wesley Rinehart, was born February 27, 1834, in the State of North Carolina, Edgefield district; moved to Louisiana in the year 1871, and settled in Jackson, now Lincoln parish; died October 20, 1886. She embraced religion and attached herself to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1869. In 1872 she was most powerfully blessed under the preaching of the gospel, and never afterward doubted her acceptance with God.

She was sorely afflicted for three years. Confined to her room for six months, and in bed three months, she was never heard to utter a word of complaint. Her only fear seemed to be that she would be to anxious to depart. The writer visited her often in her sickness; always found her cheerful, and a smile on her face. Sister Rinehart was a devoted wife, a loving mother, a kind neighbor, and a faithful, earnest Christian. She bore her afflictions with Christian patience, and was ready when the Master called. A large circle of relatives and friends attended the funeral services. May they all walk in her footsteps, imitate her piety, and meet her in the home of the blessed! J. L. W.

South Carolina Christian Advocate please copy.

WELLS—One by one the Wells' family are being gathered home. This is the fourth member of the family we have buried since 1880. Sister Sarah Jane Wells was born in Sumter county, Ala., March 9, 1836. In 1810 her parents moved to Louisiana and settled in Caddo parish, where the greater part of her life was spent. She professed religion in 1856, and shortly after united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she ever lived a consistent member. She was not demonstrative; but her consistent daily life was the greatest test of her deep piety. On February 28, 1887, in the town of Keachi, at half-past ten A. M., she quietly entered into the "rest that remaineth for the people of God." She is gone from us, but her memory will linger, like the rays of the setting sun, to tell us she lives to die no more. G. M. L.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Many persons habitually suffer from headache, more or less periodic, strange nervous sensations, indifference to food, and an indescribable depression of spirits which they can assign no reason for. Malaria in the system is often the real cause, and one dose of Shallenberger's Pills will work wonders. A few more doses will remove all the trouble.

The Septenate Bill passed in the Reichstag by a vote of 227 to 31.——The Czar has conferred the decoration of the White Eagle upon Count Herbert Bismarck.——More earthquake shocks in Southern Europe.——Russia intends to ask Turkey to interfere in Bulgaria.——Severe snow-storms are raging in the north of England and in Ireland and Scotland.——The negotiations between Garrett and the Richmond Terminal for the purchase of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad are declared off.

MARCH 12.

Two more leaders in the recent Bulgarian insurrection have been sentenced to death, and 125 others, participants in the revolt, sentenced to prison.——Prince Bismarck gave a dinner last night to the leaders of the various parties that voted for the Septenate.——Emperor Francis Joseph has decorated Herr Manlicher with the order of the Iron Cross, for his invention of the repeating rifle recently adopted for the use of the Austrian army.——Snow-storms prevail throughout England to-day.——It is said that the Interstate Commerce Commission will be announced next week.——A fire in the Commercial Cotton Press, this city, caused the destruction of $130,000 worth of cotton and buildings.

MARCH 13.

An unsuccessful attempt made to assassinate the Czar.——The American squadron is expected to arrive at Leghorn in a few days.——Russian admirers have sent Gen. Boulanger a valuable sword inscribed, "Vive la France et Boulanger."——The Pope will confer the Cardinal's hat upon the nuncios at Paris, Vienna and Madrid, and ex-nuncio Massoln, of Lisbon, and the Archbishop of Ferrara.——Public Printer Benedict has discharged forty-three employees of the printing office. The reason assigned for the dismissals was that a reduction of expenses was necessary.

MARCH 14.

The Sultan of Morocco has prohibited the sale or purchase of intoxicants of all kinds and abolished the State tobacco monopoly. The Moorish tobacco and snuff shops have been closed. Large quantities of leaf tobacco were publicly burned by the Sultan's order.——The Prussian government suggests that the Pope convene an European Peace Conference for the settlement of the Eastern and Egyptian questions.——A passenger train on the Boston and Providence road fell through a bridge. Thirty lives lost and over one hundred persons more or less dangerously wounded.

We call the attention of our readers to the card of Mr. Walter Dunstan, who has reopened his office for shorthand and type-writing work. Mr. Dunstan's well-established reputation as an expert stenographer needs no comment from us, his reports of Sam Jones' sermons at the Camp Grounds last summer having proved that he was as competent in that line of reporting as he is known to be in legal work; in fact, Mr. Dunstan is, what is so rare to find nowadays, a first-class all-round stenographer. Mr. Dunstan has two experienced operators on the typewriter in constant attendance at his office, and careful and prompt attention is given to all copying, no matter whether the job be large or small. Mr. D. also receives a limited number of pupils for private instruction, and anyone desirous of learning shorthand will find it to their interest to secure his services as teacher, as his long and varied experience, both as a practical reporter and teacher, renders him thoroughly capable in this respect.

Mr. W. Y. Kelly, special agent of the American Mercantile and Collecting Association of New York, has been in the city during the past week, collecting subscriptions to the Advertiser-Reporter, and explaining the workings of the association. Every publisher in the country ought to be a subscriber, and save to himself much worry and many dollars.

Periodicals.

MARCH PERIODICALS.

—The Sidereal Messenger has articles on comets, meteors, eclipses, etc.

—The New Princeton has Napoleon Bonaparte; by Henri Taine; Essentials of Eloquence, by W. M. Taylor; Study of Politics, by Woodrow Wilson; Victor Hugo, by John S. Fiske; Notes and Criticisms. Published six times a year, at $3 00. A. C. Armstrong & Son, 714 Broadway, New York City.

—The Studio, February, has several beautiful etchings by Sidney L. Smith, and some good reading. Clarence Cook is editor. Number 3 East 14th street, New York City. Price, twenty cents a number.

—Gleanings from Bee Culture, Medina, Ohio, by A. I. Root. $1 per annum.

—We have received from John Church & Co., Cincinnati, samples of very beautiful Easter music. Now is the time for our friends to supply themselves; and we can recommend the publications of this house.

—Wide Awake is handsomer and brighter than usual, if possible. Beauty beams all through it.

—Babyhood is neat and useful and beautiful, and commends itself to all. Babyhood Publishing Company, 5 Beekman street, New York.

—The Brooklyn Magazine has some readable articles and four sermons from Henry Ward Beecher. 130-132 Pearl street, New York. Price, $2 a year.

—Woman's Magazine is good and cheap. Frank E. Housh, Brattleboro, Vt. Price, $1.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

The following is Bradstreet's estimate of the late strike in New York:

The New York 'longshoremen's and New Jersey coal-handlers' strikes are now generally recognized as failures. The total number of striking employees is 93,000 since January 1. These, with 38,000 men thrown out of work from other causes within six weeks, account for 131,000 stopping work during 1887. These men have lost $3,000,000 in wages, have reduced the total value of foreign trade $3,380,000 at least within two weeks, and at New York alone have entailed $900,000 extra expense on employers and the public. Nearly all larger centers record decreased clearings. During the first half of February New York's total clearings have declined about $37,000,000.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

VOICES OF PRAISE.
A HYMN AND TUNE BOOK OF RARE MERIT FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AND RELIGIOUS MEETINGS.
Price 40 cents; $4.20 per dozen.
By Rev. CHARLES L. HUTCHINS.
The publishers, with much pleasure, announce a new edition of a very successful book, highly commended by clergymen and Sunday-school men of all denominations.
It is, as many believe, the only book of the kind that entirely, and without qualification, meets the views of educated and refined people who wish dignified, but not dull music, and true and high class, but bright poetry, for Sunday-school and Social Meeting service.
VOICES OF PRAISE has all that. Even the old English Church Tunes, which are so apt to drag, furnished with quicker notation, here advance with a youthful, joyous, elastic step, which is, indeed, their true tempo.
VOICES OF PRAISE is a large, but light and conveniently carried book, with 436 Tunes to nearly as many Hymns and Canticles. It has sold very largely. The price is low.
MAILED FOR 40 CENTS.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Story of a Postal Card.

I was afflicted with kidney and urinary Trouble—
"For twelve years!"
After trying all the doctors and patent medicines I could hear of, I used two bottles of Hop "Bitters;"
And I am perfectly cured. I keep it
"All the time!"
Respectfully, B. F. BOOTH, Salisbury, Tenn. May 4, 1883.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1885.
It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in years, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them. MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., Jan. 15, 1886.
I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I should never die in peace till I had tried Hop Bitters. When I had taken two bottles they helped me very much indeed. When I had taken two more bottles I was well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they cured me, and they used them and were cured and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made. Yours truly,
MISS JULIA G. CUSHING.

$3,000 Lost.

"A tour in Europe, that cost me $3,000, done less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; they also cured my wife of fifteen years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness and dyspepsia."—Mr. R. M., Auburn, N. Y.

Baby Saved.

We are thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its nursing mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.—The Parents, Rochester, N.Y.

☞ Unhealthy or inactive kidneys cause gravel, "Bright's disease, rheumatism and a horde of other serious and fatal diseases, which can be prevented with Hop Bitters," if taken in time.

"Luddington, Mich., Feb. 2, 1885. I have sold Hop Bitters for ten years, and there is no medicine that equals them for bilious attacks, kidney complaints and all diseases incident to this malarious climate. H. T. ALEXANDER.

"Monroe, Mich., Sept. 25th, 1885. Sirs:—I have been taking Hop Bitters for inflammation of "kidneys and bladder. It has done for me what four physicians failed to do—cured me. The effect of the Bitters seemed like magic to me.
W. L. CARTER.

GENTS:—Your Hop Bitters have been of great value to me. I was laid up with typhoid fever for over two months, and could get no relief until I tried your Hop Bitters. To those suffering from debility, or any one in feeble health, I cordially recommend them. J. C. STOETZEL.
638 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Can You Answer This?

Is there a person living who ever saw a case of ague, biliousness, nervousness or neuralgia, or any disease of the stomach, liver or kidneys that Hop Bitters will not cure?

"My Mother says Hop Bitters is the only thing that will keep her from severe attacks of paralysis and headache.—Ed, Oswego Sun.

"My little sickly, puny baby was changed into a great bouncing boy, and I was raised from a sick bed by using Hop Bitters a short time."

THE DESIRED HAVEN.

Across the bar, at set of sun,
With gentle motion, tranquil, slow,
Her harbor gained, her voyage done,
I see the stately vessel go.

A glory strikes her from afar,
Deep crimson lights her masts enfold;
Gleams, silver-pointed, every spar,
And all her sails are cloth of gold.

I see the friends along the shore,
I hear their voices, full and clear—
"Good ship! Good ship! Thy toils are o'er.
Soul, find thy rest. Cast anchor here."

Well earned the greeting; earned the rest.
Pilot Divine, whom winds obey,
To us who still the billows breast,
Like entrance grant at close of day!
—Churchman.

Politeness.

In the year 1871, while stationed in Clinton, La., I was invited one evening, with several others, to the residence of my friend and neighbor, Mr. Cross. There I met a gentleman whom I had never seen before and have seen but once since, and whose name I can not now recall, who was the embodiment of true politeness. He was condescending, kind, complaisant. He understood the art of pleasing to perfection. He did not seem to think of himself, but by every word and deed strived to contribute to the happiness of others. A courteous gentleman, he was the source of pure enjoyment to all present, and left an impression on my mind that abides there now after the lapse of more than sixteen years.

The question has often arisen in my mind since, whether we should not cultivate politeness as a Christian grace, and as a means of usefulness to others. We are commanded to "be courteous," and to "please our neighbor for his good to edification." Paul maintains that he sought to "please all men in all things, not seeking his own profit," and a greater than Paul, "even Christ, pleased not himself." And this accords with the "golden rule"—called "the royal law" by James—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." If everybody would do that, what a blissful state of society we would have on earth; and this would be but a foretaste of heaven,

"Where the saints of all ages in harmony meet,
Their Savior and brethren transported to greet."

If politeness is not essential to character, it at least gives finish and perfection thereto. A "diamond in the rough" may have its intrinsic value, but, polished, it will be far better appreciated, and more likely to pass for what it is worth. Dropping the metaphor, these amenities and everyday proprieties of life are essential to give influence and usefulness to a virtuous character. It is the pride of some otherwise good people to be blunt and gruff in their manners. It is the pride of others to be sarcastic in speech. I have known some who were conscientious, strong, cultured, but who seemed to delight in sharp, cutting remarks, calculated to severely wound the spirit of others, when a soft, gentle, pleasing word would serve their cause as well.

A heathen philosopher had the wisdom to say, "It is the property of justice not to injure men, and of politeness not to offend them." Robert Hall once said of a pious friend of the type above described, "He can not know how offensive such conduct is, or, as a religious man, he would endeavor to correct it." We instinctively shun the society of those who delight in rasping our feelings, and can not enjoy the companionship of those who seem oblivious of the comfort and happiness of other people. We devoutly pray that they may learn the golden rule.

It costs but little to be polite; but who can estimate its happy effect upon the relations of life? What an influence for good it gives a person in society! Besides, it is an element of success in the business world. A merchant prince was once asked by what means he had come to realize so ample a fortune. He replied, "By one article alone, in which you may deal, too, if you choose—civility." I think I knew a strong mercantile firm to fail for the lack of this article. They had a fine store, and it was well located. They made a beautiful display of goods, and their prices were reasonable. But they were not polite to their customers, and the trade drifted into other channels. Is not this one of the secrets of the success of Jews as merchants—their proverbial politeness to their customers? Why should the children of this world be wiser in their generation than the children of light? Why should not the children of God cultivate and develop that grace that will so enlarge the sphere of their influence, and so augment their power for good? We see in nature how God has mingled the ornamental with the necessary. Let us imitate his example in the development of our character. We see, too, how much unhappiness there is in this world. Let us strive not to increase it, but to diminish it by being ourselves a source of pure enjoyment to every circle we enter. To this end we must love our neighbor as ourselves. We must not be selfish or egotistical: We must be condescending, kind, pleasing. And all this to glorify God and to do good to our fellow-men.

From Montana.

MR. EDITOR: The winter months have come and gone, so that I am able from personal observation to tell what winter means in Montana.

Though we had some cool spells, it did not set in properly till January. We had one cold snap in November which lasted only a few days. The thermometer registered about twenty degrees below zero. We had snow occasionally in November and December; but the warm days of sunshine would follow, and soon all would melt away. About December 20 it came to stay, shortly after which time cold weather began. The last of January we had what is termed a snow-storm, giving us about two and a half to three feet of snow. During this time the sleigh bells have made music in Butte. Everything was unwheeled and put on "runners"—all draught conveyance, from the light express to the heavy freight wagon, drays, etc. It is difficult for a Southerner to understand how easily heavy loads are carried over snow as we have it here. From the time it begins to fall it is kept packed by continued travel, so that the public thoroughfares are made very firm though the snow become very deep. During the first week in February we had a second very cold spell. The mercury registered thirty-five degrees below zero. A man's nose gets pretty cool if he goes out very early in such weather.

Perhaps some of my little friends in Louisiana would like to know how boys and girls amuse themselves in our cold country. During the snow season they have fine fun in coasting. Those of them who have read about "Lazy Ned" understand something of this sport. In coasting they use the "bob-sled," "cutter" and "toboggan." They get them a beaten track from the top of one of these buttes to the bottom, sometimes a distance of half a mile. The little boys go down on the their bob-sleds in all manner of attitudes; generally, however, they lie on their stomachs, head foremost, making rudders of their feet. The speed is wonderful—often at the rate of a mile in two minutes. It is well for those pulling up hill to keep a sharp lookout lest there be a mighty collision. The girls, of course, ride in a manner more becoming their sex.

No doubt many wonder how people here cross the main range of the Rocky Mountains in midwinter. As I took such a trip with Bro. L. B. Stateler, February 16, I know just how it is done. We took stage on runners—runners being slide fixtures instead of wheels—at 8 A. M., and made the trip to Boulder, a distance of forty miles, by 8 P. M., having a delay of two hours on the way because of a snowdrift. We went through what is called a divide—a natural pass that God arranged in the creation. Immediately on the top of the mountain is what is called a park—a very level section or basin-like country about six miles wide and twelve long. The day we passed over, just as we reached the top from the western slope the thermometer registered about twenty. A good fur coat and cap prove very acceptable on such occasions. The stages keep the road nicely packed all winter, and very rarely fail to make the forty miles in ten hours.

Bro. Stateler told me, as we went over, that he had not missed a single appointment on the district for four years on account of weather and travel, though he passed over the Rocky Mountains every round.

Our fuel from the middle of September to date has cost us $30. Wood sells at $5 50 to $6 50 per cord; coal for $10 per ton. The railroad boom in Montana will greatly reduce the expense of fuel.

I have only had time to go into one mine since coming here. To be eight hundred and a thousand feet under ground to me is not a very pleasant situation. I shall be pleased at some future time to "write up" one of these mammoth enterprises for the readers of the ADVOCATE who know nothing of them.

We are moving along fairly with our church work. I suppose we may be said to be making haste slowly. Four have been added to the church—all adults. We have been successful financially. The pastor's salary is paid to date; so also the presiding elder. Our apportionment for foreign missions has all been collected, and I send to Nashville to-morrow. That for domestic missions is nearly all promised. We have had many outside expenses in our new work.

The Sunday-school is quite an interesting feature in our charge. We began in October with twelve—now we have over fifty enrolled. We are well supplied with good teachers, and our literature from Nashville. Mrs. Coney, though busied with the care of domestic affairs, has a very interesting class of eight girls who meet her promptly every Sabbath with good lessons.

We, too, Mr. Editor, aside from the salary, are "stormed" and "pounded" occasionally, like many of the good brethren in Louisiana and Mississippi. The health of my family is quite good in this high dry air.

We have had two days of melting; our streams are being swollen. I am sure you brethren in the swamp may expect a high tide when our snow all goes.

Though we have many reasons for encouragement in our young work, there are many difficulties to encounter. I have a somewhat dreaded task before me in the near future. That is to raise a debt off our new church. I scarcely dare leave our immediate city to ask aid. An opera troupe spent five days and nights in our town not long since, and is said to have carried off $9,000. I am hoping and praying to raise $800 only. I am glad to see so many answering the call to China, Japan and Brazil. May the "church in the States" not forget the cry of her sons and daughters in the West! Please forgive the length of this communication. Respectfully,

A. C. COUEY.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Sokuma has been especially active in the circulation of Christian books, and in this way strengthening the believers, awakening the impenitent, and leading inquirers to Christ, their only Savior. He also preaches at times in his own house, and in new places that have recently been opened in that section of the country. At a Buddhistic service, held in opposition to Christianity, he replied with such effect as to draw tears from the eyes of the priests themselves. During his trial he was instrumental in the conversion of ten persons who have since made a public profession of their faith.

His sentence was announced on July 24, 1886, and consisted in a penalty of about $10 and imprisonment for five months. When this was received he sent a request that he might be permitted to take the Scriptures and Christian books with him, so as to work for the Master among his fellow-convicts; but the request was not granted. When he went to the prison he entered at once upon active efforts for the conversion of others, and even exhorted the warden to forsake his sins and become a follower of Christ. As the result of his fervent prayers and devoted life, another convict belonging to the same party became convinced of sin and his need of a Savior. This man was a young doctor whose father had been of the privileged class, that were allowed to carry two swords, and was the head of a band of gamblers in the province of Awa. The practice of gambling led to other acts of wickedness, and at length the father was executed for his many crimes. An uncle was banished for similar offenses, and for two generations this doctor's ancestors had been either gamblers or vagabonds. Up to the time that he went to prison, the doctor had no idea of sin or a devil. He had once heard part of a sermon, but turned away from it in disgust. But the prayer of Sokuma touched his heart and led him to feel that there was a God who made and rules over all. Then came conviction of sins such as is almost unknown in Japan. The sins of his parents and his own terrible wickedness seemed to him a burden too great to bear, and only as he looked to Christ could he find relief.

Upon his release from prison, the doctor came to Tokio in order to confess his faith at once and receive baptism. Realizing the preciousness of Christ's love, he returned home and immediately began to work among his friends and companions. By his efforts some have already been led to abandon their idols and are now beginning the way of life. Among the number are three of the school teachers in the town where he resides. By his efforts a good audience was recently gathered to hear a foreign missionary preach the gospel, and hereafter that place is to become a field for evangelistic work.

Sokuma is still in prison; but he is contented and happy because the Lord is with him. The school where he became imbued with infidel doctrines has recently been placed in the hands of one of the missionary bodies, and will henceforth become a fountain of truth instead of being a hot-bed of error. The head of the same school is a candid and sincere inquirer, and recently expressed his conviction that the sacrifice of Christ was necessary for the redemption of man. He has denied this before, and his change of mind is likely to be attended with very important results. Such are some of the miracles of grace in Japan. The future is bright with hope, because God is with us. Our duty is simply to sow the seed in faith and with prayer. Its fruitage is sure and glorious.

Your brother in Christ,

Educate Your Daughters.

The citizens of Mississippi, and especially the Methodists, who are under the administration of the Mississippi Annual Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are to be congratulated on the character of their institutions of learning, especially the female colleges under their supervision. The high grade of scholarship maintained, and the broad, enlightened culture that now distinguish them, ought to be a source of true pride to our people and the citizens of Mississippi generally, and cause the outflow of our daughters to other States to cease altogether.

It was our good fortune at the last session of the Mississippi Annual Conference, held at Port Gibson, to become personally acquainted with the president and teachers of the Port Gibson Female College. The management of this college, presided over and conducted by the Rev. T. C. Bradford and his able faculty of teachers, was a new revelation to us. I confess to have been captured by a complete surprise as to the character and high grade of scholarship inaugurated in this splendid institution. Without any disposition to exaggerate or desire to be fulsome, I must say there was one thing about the management that impressed me most favorably, and that was the ease, the air of grace and the polished refinement that pervaded the whole institution, that spoke volumes for its president and teachers. Indeed, I consider this element, this unwritten law of the college, as far superior to any stiff or formulated rules by which to govern our daughters. The president and his teachers deserve a very high commendation for this rare element of power, impressing for good the moral character of the scholars, and necessarily leading them up to a very exalted grade of refinement, and the maintenance of a pure religious life. The teachers have been selected to fill the various departments, with special reference to their great worth and talents, thereby placing the college on the highest grade of thorough scholarship. As to the musical department, presided over by that accomplished expert and polished lady, Miss Anna Barbee, of whose rare gifts and qualifications we can speak from personal knowledge, fitting her for any institution in the land, we congratulate the president in having secured her services. Without any hesitation, therefore, we commend this female college to the patronage of our people, and wish the able president abundant success and much honor.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: I notice in our report on the observance of the Sabbath, made to the Mississippi Conference during its last session, that the word "universal" has been substituted for the word "moral." "Moral" is the word we used, and it is the word we wish would have been printed, for "universal" does not express what we wanted to express. A commandment may be a universal one, and still not be a moral one. SECRETARY.

God takes care of remnants. He is not wasteful of anything good. His mighty fan winnows the threshing-floor, but drives away not a grain of the wheat. His vine-dresser cuts away dead branches, but spares the living vine. His husbandman is directed to let even the tares alone, lest, in pulling them up, he damage the good seed also. He is hopeful where there is promise of good, and so he directs the gardener to spare even the barren tree in the hope that another year's culture will cause it to bear fruit.

(Advance.)

True sympathy always purifies. It cheers. It helps to right-seeing. It heals. It strengthens. It exalts and brings one nearer to God. It puts evil passions to sleep and awakens holy emotions. It quickens not the worst things, but the best things in a man. It has in it always a pulse of heavenly love. It never aggravates a bad symptom. It never accelerates a wicked course. It stills the troubled waters. It rests and soothes the aching heart. It makes a man hate the mean and low, and love the good and high. It takes one forward into companionships which are above the stars. It is more palatable than food; it is more refreshing than light; it is more fragrant than flowers; it is sweeter than songs.

(Southern Churchman.)

"You are on the wrong side of sixty," said a man to his neighbor. "No," was the reply, "I am on the right side." "Well, I thought you were over sixty." "So I am, but that is the right side." So? Beyond the doubts, if the sexagenarian is on the side of Christ and thus nearer the time when he will lay down the battle and burden of life and take up the results of his victory, which, while not plain as to what they are, are yet glorious beyond all the thoughts and expectations of the mind. "We see through a glass darkly, we know in part;" but when the river is crossed, whether with more or less difficulty, then the glory and greatness, the honor and dignity which God will confer upon the aged disciple of the Lord Jesus.

Some converts drift into a state of spiritual declension, because they never find their proper work. They think of conversion as all that is needed, and become indolent. Now, one great purpose of religion is to redeem the powers of body and mind from the service of sin and Satan and to consecrate them to the service of Christ. If our spiritual faculties are not exercised, they will become feeble and decline. Spiritual idleness is the precursor and sign of spiritual death. There is no possibility of growth in holiness, while indolently neglecting duties which God has enjoined. Young converts who live as if there was nothing for them to do, will surely backslide and cast away their confidence. Holy diligence in the Master's service is essential and can not be neglected without peril to the life of the soul. All true work is a means of grace.

(Texas Christian Advocate.)

Any man is dead who has nothing but gold and luxury and political power—who, sitting in the midst of earthly pleasure, has nothing but this. There is a way to live, however, so that the loss of even a kingdom will be the loss of the secondary and accidental; so that even death is but the rolling away of the stone from a sepulchre. Only give the man a soul-house that is fit to live in—pure intent, inward cleanness and sincerity, fervent love of God and communion with him, and he is master of any emergency, disquiet or privation. The changes of life shall be met with a serenity that is undisturbed. No storm shall stir the depths of his spirit. In all clouds and darkness he shall have calm, he shall have sunlight. None of these things shall move him, for he shall be able to say: "I am persuaded that neither death nor life, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height nor depth, nor any other thing that is, shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

(Raleigh Christian Advocate.)

Richard Baxter said some of his people "had a wheelbarrow religion," they "went when they were shoved." This is an apt description of the religion of some in these days. If they go to prayer meeting, somebody must go by their homes and shove them along. If they pay any quarterage, the steward must push them to it. It is harder than rolling a wheelbarrow up hill to keep them going. In every church may be found the wheelbarrow members. We pity the arms that have to push them. Sometimes a pious wife rolls out to church an indifferent husband. Then a godly mother wheelbarrows a frolicsome daughter or a careless son.

One line of Cowper's hymn reads:

"Judge not the Lord by feeble sense."

We have read of a "brother" who always read and sang it:

"Judge not the Lord by feeble saints."

While this mars the poetry, it does not wholly spoil the "sense" of the line. Wheelbarrow saints must not be taken as samples of gospel grace—they are not representatives of what religion does for fallen man.

LIFE'S MUSIC.

BY WILL S. MONROE.

I hear Ra's music everywhere I go,
In crowded street or forest-bowered hall;
Sometimes in anthems sweet, and clear and low,
Sometimes in cries of sorrow's gloom and pall.

The little child that waddled by my door
With just enough of years to creep along,
His footsteps made upon the sabled floor
A patter soft—a child's undaunted song.

The rural lass that chased as she patted
Her buckets full of produce from the kine,
The rustic lad that whistled as he halted
His horned team and yoked them 'neath the pine.

And aged sires that basked neath shady trees—
These all were playing life's great instrument—
The young the sweet, the old the shriller keys,
While Nature rendered the accompaniment.

A Chatty Letter from a Preacher's Wife.

MR. EDITOR: In a charming letter to the "Old Richmond," some weeks ago, "Gilderoy" relates, in his own inimitable way, his experience in a recent move, the warm reception which awaited himself and family, and other matters of interest. He humorously describes the emotions awakened by such tokens of appreciation: and so similar was it all to my own experience, about two months ago, on arriving at the Benton parsonage, that I wondered why it was that, for the life of me, I could not express it in the same charming language—humorous, tender, pathetic and entertaining from first to last.

How often have I realized, when reading "Gilderoy's" letters, how very near together lie the springs of laughter and of tears. I would that these literary wanderers, floating hither and thither on the great sea of religious newspaperdom, could be gathered up into one unique and entertaining volume. It would beguile many a lonely hour. But "Gilderoy" needs no eulogy from my humble pen. Hundreds read and enjoy those mirth-provoking sentences which sparkle with a wit which leaves no sting behind, and, better still, always points a moral.

The Conference year has opened up auspiciously with us at Benton, our new field of labor. Arriving after nightfall, on the coldest day (so I think) of the winter just past—January 3—we found that every preparation had been made for our comfort which was at all practicable under the circumstances. It was uncertain when we would arrive, owing to the weather; yet an elegant supper awaited us at the parsonage, to which we did ample justice, with appetites sharpened by the long, cold ride. We found many "nice things" for the inner man, and enjoyed them during the long "cold spell." Since then we have received many substantial tokens of favor; but the best of all is, that every department of church work seems to be prospering here in Benton beyond our weak faith and expectations. We have a live Sunday-school: eighty-three on the roll and in attendance; new members almost every Sabbath. Teachers and pupils have entered into the work, heart and soul, and I think scarcely anything short of a cyclone or an earthquake would keep them at home on Sunday morning. The pastor lately organized a Sunday-school Missionary Society, which has a large and constantly increasing membership. They meet twice a month, and have gone to work with great enthusiasm. It is interesting to note the various ways in which the little folks go about earning the money with which to pay their dues. We look forward to a delightful occasion on "Children's Day. We have a live prayer meeting also, which is largely attended and is growing in interest from week to week.

Our young friend and fellow-townsman, Bro. James Cowan, preached his first sermon a Sunday or two ago. A large audience listened with respectful attention to a plain, practical delivery of the gospel message. After the sermon many pressed to the altar to shake hands with the "boy preacher," and bid him God-speed. Many hopes and prayers center around this consecrated young man.

Benton High School, with Rev. J. W. Chambers at its head, is prospering; there being a large number of pupils in attendance—as many as the building can possibly accommodate. Bro. Chambers gives eminent satisfaction as an educator.

And now, Mr. Editor, lest I spin out this rambling letter to an unpardonable length, I will say, in conclusion, that I am very much in love with the "Bentonians" and all others whom I have met. Not that I am already "off with the old love, and on with the new." Far be it from me to forget or ignore the many words and deeds of love and sympathy tendered by the dear people of Sharon. They are endeared by memories of both joy and sorrow. When a few months ago, the "reaper, death, with his sickle keen," cut down in the bloom of young womanhood the "flower we most did love," then I realized that "kind hearts are more than coronets." Tried friends I "grapple to my soul with hooks of steel." But by the great law of compensation, which prevails everywhere, God graciously gives us new friends whose kind ministrations and gentle courtesies cheer our hearts from day to day. One word more: I congratulate the ADVOCATE upon her handsome new dress, and the editor upon his success in giving us a first-class newspaper. With best wishes for both, I am,

Yours truly,

MRS. J. S. PARKER.

Do Not Discourage Your Preacher.

It would be hard to understand how an intelligent layman could be induced to offer discouragement to the man sent him upon the purely benevolent mission of preaching the gospel and leading in general church work. Ideals are never realized, it is true, by ministers, as they are not by any other class of workers; but the intelligent layman knows how to make allowance for this. It is expected of him that he will appreciate the conservative influence in the purpose of the ministry, and that what is well intended will be well encouraged. The layman has every motive to encourage the minister. If he is sincere in his own profession of faith in the gospel, that faith ought to be shown in the practical backing which he gives to him who is commissioned to preach it. Moreover, purely selfish motives lie altogether in the direction of encouragement. A large part of the profit of godliness is for this life. Enterprising men of the world, with no professed religious belief, have not been slow to recognize the money value of the church in the community, and for this reason have often been found among its liberal patrons. And yet, strange as it would seem, prominent laymen are sometimes found who do not give the much needed encouragement to the minister. They are sometimes slow to recognize his presence on his arrival in his new field of labor. Maybe they take a back seat for a few Sundays, and wait to see how he takes with the congregation; or do not come at all to the service till the preacher's acceptability is no longer a question; or they shun to recognize the preacher in the community as on a footing with other worthy men. Or, it may be, they magnify the obstacles to church work, and so paint the gloominess of the situation as to fill the very atmosphere with prophecies of failure. Laymen sometimes discourage ministers by finding fault with our church machinery, by indulging a carking spirit, and refusing to aid in the general enterprises which the church requires to be fostered and which the minister, as a son in the gospel, dare not neglect.

I write these things not in the spirit of personal grievance (although I suppose I have had my full share of personal neglect), but rather because of the high appreciation I have for the representative laymen of the church in any community. They are the men who give character to the church and decide the question of its success or failure. They are the men the preacher naturally looks to for his support, not only in the matter of money, but in moral ways. The preacher can do nothing himself without such aid. They are the Aaron and Hur to hold up the hands of Moses while the battle rages against sin. They should remember that the preacher himself is only the representative of a general cause in which the laity have an equal interest. To discourage him is to oppose the cause. They do not so intend it; but this is the practical logic of their conduct. Let our laymen feel that the preacher's success is their success; that his failure is their failure. With everyone with his shoulder at the wheel, there would be no time and no disposition for forebodings of failure, and no deficits in the preacher's report when he came to read it at Conference.

"Grammatical and Critical."

MR. EDITOR: This is at least the fifth time this year that I have written to our highly prized weekly a letter from the church; but as often the articles have reached the waste-basket before they have left my office.

"W. L. C. H.," in the ADVOCATE of March 10, under the head of "Grammatical and Critical," shows the difficulties attending the translation of Luke vi, 17, 18, and then suggests that some one else might give a better solution than his. I do not offer this as a better, but as a good one. By context we see our Lord had been on the mount with his disciples, and from them chose twelve apostles. Then begins the seventeenth verse. He came down to a level place, the crowd waiting for him at the foot of the mount. Topos pedinos signifies any level place, and not necessarily the plane at the foot of the mount. (See Matthew v.) We might make ochlos, plethos, the crowd, the multitude and so many subjects of este: "He stood still, along with the crowd." * * * But it is more natural to understand some verb: "And there was with him the crowd." * * * In any case, even if, with the Alexandrian, we omit the kai before etherapeuonto, were healed (verse 18), we could not think of making these substantives nominatives to the last verb; for the crowd of disciples were not composed of sick people. Three classes of persons, therefore, surround Jesus at this time: Occasional hearers (those who had come from all parts), permanent disciples, and the apostles. The first represents the people; the second, the church; the third, the ministry in the church.

If at eighteenth verse, we read "and," before "they were healed," the idea of healing is only accessory, and is added by way of parenthesis; but the prevailing idea is that of gathering together. Demoniacs also were there, and, what is more, they were healed. If the "and" is omitted, the idea of healing alone remains, and we must translate "and the possessed even were healed." With paraliou, we must understand choras; Turou and Sidonos are complements. Verse 19 shows the miraculous work of that day. Iato depends on hoti, and has for its subject dunamis.

From the Work.

MOUNT OLIVET, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a few notes from Mt. Olivet circuit, Mississippi Conference, to show that we are moving upward in some things at least. At one of my appointments (Short Creek) we have pulled down the old house of worship and erected a new one on a much more eligible site, an acre of ground having been secured and deeded to our church for that purpose. The old house had stood and been used by us for upwards of forty years on ground which we had no deed or title to at all. The new house is also finished inside and outside. I preached in it for the first time last Sabbath. At Mt. Carmel also, another one of my appointments, the old house has been rebuilt and fitted for use as a house of worship. Some of our good people rallied nobly to do this work and rebuild these waste places. Now, may the presence of God be made manifest at these altars, and succeeding generations be gathered into the garners of the skies as some of the fruits of the well-doing of the people of to-day!

We had upwards of fifty accessions to the church on this work last year. A goodly number of them, no doubt, will be found faithful until death. What of the others? An enemy is busy sowing tares already. The church, generally, seems to be moving in two directions: some upward and heavenward, some downward and hellward. This is the truth; why disguise it? Must we not give faithful warning? "Let Zion's watchmen all awake," and "cry aloud" and "spare not." It is not yet too late for those who are moving downward to turn and move upward. The ball and dance, the horse race, cards, dice, billiards, pool, the dram are indulged in by different ones of our members according to their taste. With sorrow we have to confess that discipline can not be enforced in some churches for want of material to form committees. Some attend the balls, but do not dance, and so excuse themselves on that ground. Some frequent the saloons and gambling slums, just to look on, but "do not drink or participate." What feeble excuses! God will not go there to look for them when he comes to "make up his jewels." But all is not dark; there is a bright side, and, thanks be unto God, it is growing brighter. We have some members who have not defiled their garments. Their walk and conversation has been with God ever since the day of their espousal to him. Others are beginning to take up their crosses and to let their lights shine. They have begun to pray and lead in prayer meeting. A number of family altars have been erected, and the devil has been routed in some at least. I verily believe that the great work of the ministry in the majority of places now is to call the house of Israel to repentance. The excitement of new railroads, booms and boomers, lotteries, land speculations, city lots, town lots, and other things have drawn the hearts of the people away from God. Little towns have sprung up in almost every direction, and it is impossible almost to get a church meeting of any kind on Saturday now. The men are all "gone to town," and the women have too much to do at home, looking after home affairs.

I want to thank my good friend and brother, T. B. Holloman, for his timely articles in behalf of the young men. I have reaped some of the good effects of them already in my own experience. I believe it to be a fact that some people, not all, imagine a preacher has nothing at all to do but ride about, enjoy himself, eat big dinners and late suppers, take the dyspepsia, and then on Sunday morning preach a big sermon out of an empty head. If some of our good people would give the preacher more time to study and feed his mind, they would hear better sermons. Some are thoughtful enough in this respect; others are not.

Yours truly,

S. J. COTTON.

WAYNESBORO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard would not be unacceptable to some of the readers of the ADVOCATE; hence I write briefly of some things. And as prohibition is the great question of this age, I will notice it first.

I am very glad to state that this is a "prohibition" county, having been made such under the "old law"—i. e., by the right of "petition"—and, from the present outlook, it will doubtless remain as it is. As an evidence of this fact, and of the predominant sentiment in favor of prohibition, all the concentrated force and combined efforts of the antis can not muster up a "local option election." They have made two terrible efforts, and made signal failures. At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors, on the first Monday in February, they presented their solemn request, backed by a full quota of names; but, unfortunately for these earnest seekers of "personal rights," they were required to attest nearly three-fourths of the names on the petition, which had been written by the same hand, with, "His x mark" attached, in bold relief. By the way, don't that look like "personal rights" and smell of "freedom"? The petition was laid over until the next meeting of the Board, which was last Monday, when they were to silence forever the skeptical supervisors and the prohibitionists' attorney by attesting the veritable "His x mark," and proving that the person thus indicated had authorized the signature; and that such was actually in existence—not dead nor gone to Arkansas. Suffice it to say, they failed most signally, and the petition was consigned to its last resting-place; the antis retired from the field wiser and, I hope, better men. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." So it may be truly said of the little skirmish brought on by the "liquor men" here, for it brought that mighty prohibition prince and great and eloquent man of God, Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., of Meridian, to the front. By request of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of this place, Bro. Black delivered a lecture on "Prohibition," in the court-house, to a good audience, on the fourth instant, just three days previous to the last meeting of the Board. The lecture was pre-eminently good, profoundly interesting and impressive. Dr. Black's arguments are overwhelming and incontrovertible. His thrilling pathos moved many, even strong men, to tears. His presence and address were a benediction to us of this community, and will not be soon forgotten.

Religiously, this charge is progressive, though there is abundant room for growth and development. A revival influence is obvious among the careless and indifferent. The fire has been kindled upon the altar, and we anticipate a mighty conflagration ere long that will consume the old dead timber in this gospel field and sweep the "stubble," "thorns" and "briars" in its onward march, clearing the paths of every obstacle to the Lord's chariot, save perchance some old "wet logs," too soggy and rotten to burn. God speed the day when we shall have the "baptism of fire." Congregations, large and appreciative; prayer meetings, largely attended and greatly beneficial; Sunday-school, increasing in numbers and interest. Financially, clear as the sunlight.

The ADVOCATE is a "thing of beauty" in its new dress, and deserves to be introduced into every household; and it shall make the acquaintance of many more in this "parish."

E. F. EDGAR.

POPLARVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: By virtue of the appointment of Bishop Duncan, December 21, 1886, I am come to this broad field of usefulness, known as Poplarville circuit—a circuit consisting of six churches (organizations), viz: Purvis, Piotona, Poplarville, Nicholson, West Pearl and Oak Grove. Since my coming on the work, I have also made an appointment to preach in Slidell, making in all seven appointments, and extending over a distance of sixty-five miles on the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad. We have five church-houses on the work—one at each of the above places except Nicholson and Slidell; but only Poplarville Church has been finished and dedicated. But we expect to complete them all this year and build a new one at Nicholson. While our people have been thus mindful of the "form of godliness," they have not denied the "power." Some of our people are earnest, consecrated Christians, whose words, "God bless you and your work," are a means of courage to a young and inexperienced Methodist preacher. There are no class meetings on our circuit, and but one public prayer meeting, which was organized by my predecessor last year, which, owing to the unwillingness of the laymen to conduct it, was suspended until my arrival, when it was again resumed, and is now in its usual vigor.

Since my arrival we have organized here a young men's prayer meeting—the first, if I mistake not, of the kind ever held in this country. It is hardly necessary for me to say, Mr. Editor, that it is in a flourishing condition and increasing in interest steadily. It is not a public one, but private. Only those who will take up their cross are admitted. This is decidedly the better way, as it relieves the new beginners of much of the embarrassment usually experienced when persons are present who are not religiously inclined. We expect to see the day not far distant when every church on this work will be blest with a corps of young men who will rally to the banner of Christ, and fight bravely the battle of a Christian life to gain the conquest for King Emmanuel; then, with words of triumph, shout: "Hosannah in the highest! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!"

J. N. TUCKER, P. C.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I write this morning to inform your readers that Lake Providence is not a whit behind the foremost of those who have so kindly and generously surprised their pastors and pastors' families. Last afternoon, about five o'clock, about fifty or more of the kind ladies and children came marching into the parsonage loaded with packages of good and useful articles for the pastor and family, and in company with whom was a good brother with a wagon drawn by two mules, literally, loaded with family supplies, which when put in the pantry occupied almost all the available space. You will please bear in mind, Mr. Editor, that the pantry at Lake Providence is not a small one. This morning, on taking an inventory of the articles brought, my wife and I discovered that we had flour, hams, sugar, coffee, rice, canned fruits and meats, tea, starch, soap, grits, etc.; also dress patterns for wife and daughters, but for wife, buttons, thread, etc., and other things too numerous to mention. And in addition to all this, Mr. Editor, a nice purse of actual cash—yes, sir, cash!

Now, sir, the substantial benefit to me and my family of these acts of kindness, though great, is nothing compared with the spirit in which the amounts were given. I really think these good people felt that it was "more blessed to give than to receive." From the parlor we were invited into the dining-room to partake of a bountiful repast provided by these same generous ladies, which proved to be all that the outer man needed, and as good and nice as the most fastidious could desire. When you remember, Mr. Editor, that the present is regarded as the most difficult season to provide such liberal things, it seems to me that unbelief ought to give way and faith in God assert itself in our hearts. I feel more than ever like consecrating myself anew to the service of him who has inspired the hearts of these kind people to so generous an exhibition of kindness. May the blessings of the good Lord rest upon these people!

Our new church is in process of erection, and will, we think, be completed by the middle of May next. Your brother,

THOS. J. UPTON.

MEADVILLE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: If I am in order, you may publish this. I am here again by appointment of the Bishop (as they say) to attend the interests of the church. I know of but one reason why this is not one of the best circuits in the Conference, and that is because many of our members are not in sympathy with the various enterprises of the church. During my two years' stay on this work we have secured a very comfortable parsonage with four rooms, two chimneys, a garden, cistern, crib and other conveniences—all of which has been paid except a balance of one hundred and thirty dollars. In addition to the above, I have built a store-house not by subscription, but "with these hands." Bishop Hargrove said in one of his letters from Central Mexico that "many preachers play the gentleman so much that the cause of Christ suffered from it." I read this when I was sore from manual labor, and decided that I wanted him to give me my next appointment. We have a parsonage society organized by the mother of one our itinerants. This society is to help furnish the parsonage and take care of it while the preacher is gone to Conference, and cook good dinners, build good fires and welcome the new preacher and get up the wind for a "storm," or clubs for a "pounding." I have secured ten new subscribers for the ADVOCATE since Conference.

V. D. SKIPPER.

NATCHEZ, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I am working for the ADVOCATE more than ever. The large type is greatly appreciated. Church work is improving. Prayer meeting and Sunday-school about double; Sunday prayer meeting, young men's association, temperance association, aid, missionary society, union prayer meeting in good condition. New parsonage projected; some accessions; large congregations.

H. R. SINGLETON.

LOUISVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We are moving on finely since Conference. Have had our parsonage repaired at a cost of one hundred dollars. The good ladies are now refurnishing it. We are well pleased with "Gilderoy," our new presiding elder. We are expecting a glorious revival soon. Pray for us. May the Lord bless you and the dear old ADVOCATE!

Yours, J. A. LEECH.

MINTER CITY, MISS.

I am moving along quietly. Nothing extra. Good congregations. High water has hindered some. Most of corn planted. People moving along well. Our railroad prospect cheering. This will be the country then. Rich land produces well.

Very truly, J. L. FUTRELL.

Infinite toil would not enable you to sweep away a mist, but, by ascending a little, you may look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvements; we wrestle fiercely with a vicious habit, which could have no hold upon us if we ascended into a higher moral atmosphere.—Helps.

Worse Than Small Pox.

A GREAT DANGER WHICH MENACES AN UNSUSPICIOUS PUBLIC.

The Brompton Hospital for consumptives, in London, reports that over fifty people out of every hundred consumptives, are victims of constipated or inactive kidneys.

Consumption is one of our national diseases, and the above report goes to prove what has often been said in our columns during the last eight years, that kidney troubles are not only the cause of more than half of the cases of consumption, but of ninety out of every hundred other common diseases. They who have taken this position, made their claims after elaborate investigation, and their proof that they have discovered a specific for the terrible and stealthy kidney diseases, which have become so prevalent among us, is wise and convincing.

We have recently received from them a fresh supply of their wonderful advertising. They have challenged the medical profession and science to investigate. They have investigated, and those who are frank have admitted the truth of their statements. They claim that ninety per cent. of diseases come originally from inactive kidneys; that these inactive kidneys allow the blood to become filled with uric acid poison; that this uric acid poison in the blood carries disease through every organ.

There is enough uric acid developed in the system within twenty-four hours to kill half a dozen men.

This being a scientific fact, it requires only ordinary wisdom to see the effect inactive kidneys must have upon the system.

If this poison is not removed, it ruins every organ. If the bowels, stomach or liver become inactive, we know it at once, but other organs help them out. If the kidneys become constipated and dormant, the warning comes later on, and often when it is too late, because the effects are remote from the kidneys and those organs are not suspected to be out of order.

Organs that are weak and diseased are unable to resist the attacks of this poison, and the disease often takes the form of and is treated as a local affliction, when in reality the real cause of the trouble was inactive kidneys.

Too many medical men of the present day hold what was a fact twenty years ago, that kidney disease is incurable, according to the medicines authorized by their code. Hence, they ignore the original cause of disease itself, and give their attention to useless treating of local effects.

They dose the patient with quinine, morphine, or with salts and other physics, hoping that thus nature may cure the disease, while the kidneys continue to waste away with inflammation, ulceration and decay, and the victim eventually perished.

The same quantity of blood that passes through the heart, passes through the kidneys. If the kidneys are diseased, the blood soaks up this disease and takes it all through the system. Hence it is, that the claim is made that Warner's safe cure, the only known specific for kidney diseases, cures 90 per cent. of human ailments, because it, and it alone, is able to maintain the natural activity of the kidneys, and to neutralize and remove the uric acid, or kidney poison, as fast as it is formed.

If this acid is not removed, there is inactivity of the kidneys, and there will be produced in the system paralysis, apoplexy, dyspepsia, consumption, heart disease, head-aches, rheumatism, pneumonia, impotency, and all the nameless diseases of delicate women. If the poisonous matter is separated from the blood, as fast as it is formed these diseases, in a majority of cases, would not exist.

It only requires a particle of small-pox virus to produce that vile disease, and the poisonous matter from the kidneys, passing all through the system and becoming lodged at different weak points, is equally destructive, although more disguised.

If it were possible for us to see into the kidneys, and how quickly the blood passing through them goes to the heart and lungs and other parts of the system, carrying this deadly virus with it, all would believe without hesitation what has so often been stated in advertisements in these columns, that the kidneys are the most important organs in the body.

They may regard this article as an advertisement and refuse to believe it, but that is a matter over which we have no control. Careful investigation and science itself are proving beyond a doubt that this organ is, in fact, more important than any other in the system as a health regulator, and as such should be closely watched, for the least sign of disordered action.

Silent People as Misjudged by the Noisy.

When a number of good-humored people are setting out, bright and early in the morning, on some exhilarating expedition, it is pleasant to notice how lively and expansive they are. For the first hour they talk all at once, laughing their words rather than speaking them. But as the forenoon goes on, one after another drops gradually into comparative quiet and silence. It is not that they have ceased to enjoy the excursion and each other, but the first effervescence of the uncorked animal spirits of the morning has spent itself.

In a similar fashion, as we get on in life past the period of obstreperous youth we incline to talk less and write less, especially on the topics which we have most at heart. The younger people notice this, and think it is because we are growing lukewarm on these matters. They deplore us, among themselves, as being "lost leaders," or lost followers, of this and the other fine cause. But they do not understand. The thought is deeper and stronger in us now; perhaps, than when it was visible at the surface and made more noise. We are beginning to realize the uselessness of perpetually talking, that is all. If there is a thing to be said, we prefer to wait and say it only when and where it will hit something or someboby.

Moreover, if the youngsters will observe us a little, they may see that we say a number of things—and pretty forcibly, too—by simply taking them for granted. They might follow us around, A and B and C, and a half dozen more of us elders, and listen to our talk for a whole week without ever hearing from us a single argument or exhortation on the subject, say, of the Intellectual Rights of Women, or the Rascality of Thick-and-Thin Partisans, or the Curse of the Ignorant Vote. But they would soon notice that what we quietly take for granted in our talk would furnish a number of tolerably strong creeds or platforms. They might come to the conclusion, too, that this quiet taking of certain things for granted by sensible and vigorous men and women is not to be despised, as a working-force, in comparison with whole parlors full of vociferous chatter.—Atlantic.

Distress after Eating.

This result of indigestion will no longer be experienced if Simmons Liver Regulator is taken after each meal. It is such a good digester, and so mild and pleasant in its effect that it is used by many, after a hearty meal, to insure good digestion.—The Regulator does not nauseate or irritate the stomach, but corrects acidity, dispels foul gases, allays irritation, and assists the stomach in its digestion.

To sin we may be led by others; to virtue we must be led by ourselves.

Wealth of the United States.

According to Dr. Strong, the wealth of the United States is phenomenal. In 1880 it was valued at $43,642,000,000, more than enough to buy the Russian and Turkish Empires, the kingdoms of Sweden and Norway, Denmark and Italy, together with Australia, South Africa and all South America—lands, mines, cities, palaces, factories, ships, flocks, herds, jewels, moneys, thrones, scepters, diadems and all—the entire possessions of 177,000,000 people. According to the same authority the Christians of America are the richest Christians on the globe. Their wealth, in 1880, amounted to $8,728,400,000. From 1870 to 1880 the average increase of wealth of the Christians in the United States was $391,740,000. And yet many churches and individuals plead poverty when urged to do something for missions! Men who are adding farm to farm, and field to field, can do nothing for the world's redemption. People who live in luxury and fare sumptuously every day can not afford to give anything for this cause. They have money with which to indulge their appetites, but none for the furtherance of the gospel. There are churches that are poor and growing poorer, simply because they do not give according to their ability. There are rich men whose souls are being eaten up by the canker of covetousness. If we were filled with the Spirit of Christ, the plea of poverty would never be urged. The Christian people of America could easily give $100,000,000 a year for missions. The plea of poverty is a false plea. We are by all odds the richest nation on the globe, and are growing richer most perilously fast. The cause of missions is our only safety valve. There are 1,000,000,000 human souls waiting for the gospel; let us do our duty and we will be blessed and prospered far beyond anything we have asked or even thought.—Exchange.

BAD BOOKS.—Never, under any circumstances, read a bad book, and never spend a serious hour in reading a second-rate book. No words can overstate the mischief of bad reading. A bad book will often haunt a man his whole life long. It is often remembered when much that is better is forgotten; it intrudes itself at the most solemn moments, and contaminates the best feelings and emotions. Reading trashy, second-rate books is a grievous waste of time also. In the first place, there are a great many more first-rate books than ever you can master; and, in the second place, you can not read an inferior book without giving up an opportunity of reading a first-rate book. Books, remember, are friends; books affect character; and you can as little neglect your duty in respect of this as you can safely neglect any other moral duty that is cast upon you.—Coleridge.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes to the case of older persons.

Briefs.

The minutes of the Louisiana Conference, for last year, exhibit some gratifying facts and some humiliating ones. There was an increase in the membership of the church of 1,307. The whole number of members is 15,775. There are 80 traveling preachers and 86 local preachers. There are 224 church buildings, valued at $381,240, being an increase of 20 houses and $35,195. There are 53 parsonages valued at $45,296, being an increase of 8 parsonages and $12,886. The other church property, consisting of school-houses, colleges, camp grounds, etc., is valued at $162,827. The preachers in charge were allowed $52,070, and received $38,156. The presiding elders were allowed $6,296, and received $4,547.

The contributions for missions in the different districts for each member is as follows:

District.
New Orleans	$1 19
Louisiana (German)	52
Shreveport	34
Opelousas	33
Homer	24
Delhi	23
Alexandria	06

These figures reveal a very low missionary pulse. Our Lord, though rich, became poor for our salvation, and yet we do not seem to appreciate the fact taught us there, that the sanctified poverty of the church is the only hope of the world. We fall back upon our poverty, and think we are excused from contributing to support our missionary enterprises; but it is our poverty the Lord wants, and if it were devoted to him, there would be no lack. Paul's Corinthians had the true mission spirit. Their poverty was consecrated to God, and, as a consequence, their "liberality was rich." When it is stated that our Lord "became poor for our sakes," his poverty was consecrated to the great work of our redemption, and in that statement is a call to every poor man or woman for the same consecration.

"The City Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," has been organized upon a sound basis, and its officers have been selected from the first men in our church here. In this organization every one of our churches is represented, and the whole Methodist community is awakening to the fact that, as a church, we must do something more than we have done, or else receive the judgment meted out to those "at ease in Zion." We think the church in this city has begun the year with fine prospects for advancement, and through this new organization she will reach and affect hundreds who would not be reached without it. The objects of the city mission are these:

The extension of the Master's kingdom by persistent Christian effort.

The establishment and maintenance of mission schools.

The carrying on of out-door preaching.

The visiting of people at their homes and urging them to attend church.

The holding of special services night after night in destitute parts of the city.

The working of singing and praying bands, and

The building of chapels.

It will be seen from this that the association takes in the whole of Christian work; and we expect to see a great result before the year closes.

Grenada, Miss.

The pleasure of a visit to this thrifty little city was very much enjoyed, and the memory of it still is pleasurable. The town has a good location and spreads itself over a considerable area. The business portion is well built in handsome brick stores, with a large and imposing court-house in the center of the public square. The trade of Grenada is large for an inland town, there being bought and sold during the commercial year about 18,000 bales of cotton. There is an oil mill and a compress, both doing a good business. We noticed several houses in course of erection. The iron ore boom has not "struck" Grenada yet; but there is a solid basis for a growing town in the substantial and increasing trade of the place. There is direct communication with Memphis by the Mississippi and Tennessee railroad, and with all the balance of the world by the Illinois Central. The health of the town has been very remarkably good since the great epidemic of 1878. Our greatest surprise was to find what a magnificent college building the Methodists of North Mississippi have here! A large four-story brick building, so arranged as to afford facilities for every-day work of a large school and, at the same time, afford room in abundance for the accommodation of at least eighty boarders, is no mean property for the church to own. As the saying goes now, "It is a most magnificent plant." Bro. Newell has a fine school of 140 pupils, and as we looked in on them, assembled for morning devotions, we thought we had rarely seen a rosier and healthier set of girls. We understand this is really the only college owned by the North Mississippi Conference, and yet this fine college is crippled by debt. Why is it that 32,000 Methodists and over 100 traveling preachers do not rally immediately to the rescue of this school, free it from debt and start it on an untrammeled course of usefulness for the future women of North Mississippi? Three men in the Mississippi Conference have lately, by their generosity, cleared away an obstruction to the progress of Whitworth College, and this example should stimulate some member or members in North Mississippi to do a like service for Grenada Collegiate Institute. Don't wait to do some great thing, by means of a will, when you die; but put your money to work now under your own eye and realize the sweetest joy known to human heart—the joy of giving.

We had the pleasure of preaching twice to Dr. Sullivan's large and attentive congregation, and of visiting the Sunday-school and hearing an address on "Temperance," by Mrs. Irwine, the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Mississippi—all in one day. The hospitality which we received was modeled after the New Testament pattern; it was without stint or grudging. There was only one thing to mar the enjoyment of our visit. The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the adopted organ of these Grenada Methodists, does not circulate among them as it ought; but we are hopeful that it will grow in favor with them also, as it is doing with others. What a grand paper we could make if all the Methodist families in the three patronizing Conferences were regular and paying subscribers. Brethren, we have great plans laid for the future of our paper, and it rests with you whether they shall come to a realization.

New York and Brooklyn have one church for each 3,500 of their population. The religious, as well as the political, problem of this country is in the great cities, and it has been so through all history. The problem is not new.

"Have We Too Many Colleges?"

This question has been raised by Bishop Galloway, and has been "endorsed" by quite a number of ready writers as being wise. I confess to great surprise that one of our standard bearers should sound a retreat—especially he who has borne himself hitherto in the van of every progressive movement. Indeed, I am disposed to think that our wise Bishop is testing the temper of the church. I do not, in my heart, believe that he thinks Methodists of the South are over-educating. I think he merely meant to say that we have too much pretense and not enough of the reality. I do not believe that our good Bishop would crush even an "ex-cathedra college." If he would, then I beg to say his mind is different from mine. I have written many a line that after-wisdom has condemned; but I thank God that I have yet the first syllable to write or utter looking to the hampering of a single school that ever flung Methodist bunting to the breeze. Nor do I believe that Bishop Galloway ever intended his article to be so construed, although it must be confessed that it admits of such construction. I propose to interpret the Bishop for himself as meaning that the schools and colleges which our Conferences adopt should be such as their names, professions and adopted relations imply. Kill a cross-eyed baby? No; but send for the oculist. Strangle a bandy leg? No; but send for the best means of straightening the gelatinous crurals.

Our Bishop has written some fine articles upon the illiteracy of the South. It is appalling. Then I hold that no school that is doing anything to relieve the blackness of the picture ought to be brickbatted. The teacher may not be the best; but he is doing his best. The appliances may be inferior; but it is generally shown upon investigation that there are reasons on both sides for this inferiority. There is a vast deal of rubbish to be cleared away before we can settle the question fairly. Mere sciolistic platitudes will never do anything but scare up the vultures from the carcass.

But the question, "Have we too many colleges?" Are we living too high intellectually? Put the question in that way, and it answers itself. This is a new prohibition movement that proposes to prohibit schools and colleges! But the objector says: "Your colleges and schools are not what we want." Very well. Whose place is it to regulate this matter? "Ye are the people," and it is your sovereign right to make them what you want. Turn out your incompetents and put men at the post of duty who know how and have the will. But consider well before you kill a single school. It may be a poor one; but organic life, however lame, is better than a rotting carcass. Again the objector says: "But we can get better education abroad and outside of Methodism." I will not take up time in trying to disprove the assertion. I put it this way: I tell my wife that we can get better fare at a hotel or boarding-house than at our own table. Does she answer, "Let's go and board?" No; she is too sensible and, what is more, too independent for that. The children can not be reared so well anywhere as at home. In the next place, boarding is too selfish. Lastly, conjugal and family ties need a home to grow in.

1. I take the first point: If we have and are to continue to have strong and true friends to our institutions, we must rear them there. The roster of the great of the past hundred years is eloquent of this truth. He who educates his son outside of Methodism is rarely heard to grunt at prayer meeting. The law of association is inseparable from human character. You may indeed construct a force pump that will carry water from the Gulf of Mexico to Pike's Peak; but when you quit pumping, the water goes back to the Gulf. Here and there the ordinary law of spiritual gravitation is overcome; but in every case it is at the expense of spiritual force.

2. It is too costly. I say this deliberately in the face of those facts which our political magicians work with their enchantments. I take the University of Mississippi as an example. Tuition is free, yet rarely does a young man go there for less than $175 a year. But this tuition is paid for. By whom? The taxpayer. Who pays taxes? The Methodist as well as other people. How much per capita is this free tuition? Divide $33,000 by 250, and we have $132 as the approximate yearly tuition for a student at Oxford. The A. and M. College, at Starkville, has cost the State on an average $54,000 annually since its erection. The average number of students has been about 300. This will make Starkville's free tuition cost about $180 a year! The L. L. and C., at Columbus, has cost up to date about $40,000 per annum. The average number of students has been about 300. One hundred and thirty-three dollars per annum for free tuition! I will say that I am not an enemy to these institutions. I am patronizing one of them at this writing. Why? one asks. Because, in the first place, I can not at present do better. I get the benefit of the free tuition by being more fortunate than some other who wants it as much as I. Physically, it is impossible for all to go to these schools and, as my chances turn out to be the lucky ones, I accept them. But as for State education being cheaper than church education, facts when properly stated show largely to the contrary.

I will not enlarge upon the other points stated; but I wish to call attention to the rapid increase of population throughout the South. Do we owe these no duty? Can the Methodist Church neglect its own schools? If we do, we shall certainly build schools for others. Education is costly, I grant. So is a funeral. We must pay for one or the other. Some may cry out, "Give me liberty or give me death;" but I very decidedly prefer liberty. So with education and a funeral. Moreover, the demand is upon us for missionary work as never before. Our preachers, therefore, must have mental drill. Linguistic acumen and knowledge of laws and customs must be taught. Much must be learned even after a graduate has reached Japan; but are we going to be guilty of the surpassing folly of sending men with untrained minds to the foreign fields? Our missions look to our colleges. But if we send educated men abroad and retain the uneducated at home, what will soon be the result? In the next generation our boys will have to look to China and Japan for teachers.

Lastly, the thorough work at home demands the expenditure of more time, money and thought in bringing up our educational institutions and multiplying them. The only magic needed in this is the magic of unanimity. Look at this! Ten cents annually by every member of Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences will make tuition free to all the students of Centenary! Two and a half dollars contributed by every member will make a permanent endowment of the college! The tobacco consumed by the members in one year will endow it twice! Give me the dolls, tops, and toy wagons, fire crackers and other Christmas plaything, and I will run the college! Give me the price of your shoe blacking, and I will keep the college ship off the bars!

Our Conference Paper, and Some Other Things.

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is such a paper as we can heartily endorse and commend to the favor and patronage of our people. It shows unmistakable signs of life and progress. Its birthday number was a pleasant surprise and a gratifying success. Thirty-six years old! Years of wide circling influence for good! Eventful years in the history of Church and State; and yet "our Conference paper" still lives and grows, holding on its way with promise of increasing usefulness. The ADVOCATE has a central and important location, the great metropolis of the South; it has a good supply of able correspondents, leaving out this occasional; it has a wide territorial domain in the three patronizing Conferences; it has a new dress, good typography, and an attractive face; while its editorial conduct shows a talent for this sort of work, and a chaste and classic refinement of taste, both in its original and selected matter, not surpassed in its long line of former illustrious administrations. If, indeed, his modesty will permit, I will say that our editor has fallen gracefully into position and is fully meeting demands and expectations, "as if to the manner born," even as our "new panel" of the episcopacy have fallen into place and taken up their line of work in new and more responsible fields. They are giving great satisfaction, and so does our editor.

What a marvel is this itinerant machinery of ours! It lifts men from accustomed place and work, wherein they had experience and skill, and puts them into places to them new and untried, and yet these men work right along in their new places as if they had been in training for these very positions. And our itinerant machinery, albeit its many and frequent changes, apparently complicated wheels and movements, continues to move along with scarce a pause or jostle. If I were asked by a sister denomination for a reason accounting for the marvelous progress and success of Methodism, I would say that this success, after our scriptural doctrines, and under Divine providence, is due in a large measure to our itinerant system.

Success to our Conference paper. It is worthy and well qualified, and should have ten thousand subscribers. Brethren of North Mississippi and of the other patronizing Conferences, let us rally to our "organ," and strive to put it on a yet broader basis, and a career of still greater usefulness.

The recent deliverances of Bishop Galloway, on schools and colleges, have started a breeze which begins to raise the dust in our educational bureau. It is well; and it is to be hoped that ere this refreshing breeze dies away, the thick, dull atmosphere that hangs over this department of church work will be clearer and in a better state of sanitation. Interest has been aroused and discussion elicited. The "knights of the quill" have entered the lists: Dr. T. A. S. Adams, Bros. Hunnicutt and Bradford, and "S. M.," in the ADVOCATE. Others will doubtless follow, and good will result. As the polished Wightman once said, "From the collision of mind will come scintillations of truth."

"Bill Arp," the humorist, Maj. Smith, of Georgia, recently lectured to a good audience in Sardis. His lecture was true to character. In the matter of education, he said we are doing more for our girls since the war than for our boys—educating ten girls to one boy!

Bishop Galloway and Dr. Morton gave us a call in their rapid tour of Mississippi, canvassing for the Paine Loan Fund, in the interest of church extension. Thanks to these brethren for the good they have done in the way of seed-sowing, visiting many of the principal places in the State and supplying needed and valuable information. Some of our people will now understand the difference between the "Payne Institute," for the education of colored people, and the "Paine Loan Fund," for church extension. About $7,000 was raised in cash and subscriptions, which amount, largely increased as it can be, by a more complete canvass, will constitute in the way of church extension a monument to our late good and great Bishop Paine better and more enduring than brass or marble.

Sardis has an occasional glimpse, at least, of two presiding elders. Bro. C. N. Terry, our ex-presiding elder, finding it difficult to secure a suitable home in his new field of labor, still occupies his tasteful and comfortable residence at this place; and, at the end of a long tether, traverses his extensive ecclesiastical domain, the Grenada district. After four years of faithful service he turned over Sardis district in good trim to his successor. Bro. S. M. Thames, our new presiding elder, has entered upon his work with characteristic energy and efficiency, notwithstanding a sick wife and a home temporarily outside of his district. His quarterly meeting with us was an occasion of spiritual profit and edification; his sermons, thoughtful and impressive, and his administrations left a good impression upon our people. Steps have been taken toward the purchase of a district parsonage, to be located at this place, and already a good start has been made in the way of subscriptions and cash. We hope ere this year shall have passed to have our presiding elder domiciled with us. Every district should have a comfortable parsonage, and, as far as practicable, every circuit and station. A comfortable parsonage goes far towards a solution of the problem of ministerial support, and a better support of the ministry would tend to lay the spirit of change and transfer, by which we have lost many valuable men from North Mississippi. We need more parsonages, and will hail with gladness the day when the pioneer corps of the Woman's Department of Church Extension shall break ground within our borders.

T. C. WIER.

SARDIS, Mississippi.

And now comes the editor's wife, and says that she has a "storm" to report. It started in North Mississippi and came by express, prepaid, and struck her empty larder, and a hungry editor had such a breakfast as would have been a credit to Delmonico. And now it is in order to "storm" the editor. Let it come in the way of new subscribers from everyone who reads this.

Encouragement.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Natchez, Miss.: "I am working for the ADVOCATE more than ever. The large type is greatly appreciated."

S. C. D., San Jose, Cal.: "I received the ADVOCATE at its birth. I now receive it in its strength and mature manhood, and naught but death shall separate us more."

Mrs. E. J. F., Keachie, La.: "We are more than pleased with the ADVOCATE. It grows in excellence weekly."

Rev. W. D. Kirkland, editor of Southern Christian Advocate: "Hope you are happy in the editorial chair. You are making a fine paper."

Rev. H. Bascom Browne, Charleston, S. C.: "You have my profoundest sympathy as well as congratulations. Yours is a good journal. I like the outfit."

Rev. T. Cameron, Pickens Station, Miss.: "You are giving us a capital paper."

Dr. C. G. Andrews, Jackson, Miss.: "We all enjoy your paper very much, and congratulate you on your success."

All of which is encouraging.

The Paine Loan Fund.

As the result of a two weeks' canvass of the State, in response to resolutions by the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Dr. Morton and I succeeded in raising about seven thousand dollars of the proposed Paine Loan Fund. The other three thousand should be secured without delay, and thus constitute a fitting memorial of the great man who for sixty-five years was an honored citizen of Mississippi. We could only visit a few towns in the limited time at our command. Every pastoral charge should have an opportunity of contributing something to this most worthy cause. Will not every presiding elder and pastor in the two Conferences make special effort to carry out their resolutions? I earnestly invoke your prompt and zealous co-operation in this important matter. Subscriptions may be taken to be paid in two years, in semi-annual installments. On such easy terms the full amount ought to be raised, and that right early.

C. H. GALLOWAY.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., Mar. 18, 1887.

BENEFIT OF A LOAN FUND.—Dr. Kynett, secretary of the Church Extension Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has given some figures in reference to the working of loan funds which are encouraging, and ought to be inspiriting to every worker for the advancement of the Lord's kingdom and the stability of that advancement. One loan fund of $10,000 had aided in the erection of 55 churches, with 13,695 sittings. Another loan fund of $20,000 had aided in the erection of 82 churches, worth $327,925, with 24,300 sittings. One loan fund of $30,000 had furnished $77,000 in loans and aided in erecting 97 churches, with 28,820 sittings. These figures show how money can multiply itself when devoted to God; the same money doing good service in many places. And then a man has the satisfaction of seeing his money at work in the best of all causes.

CONSECRATED POVERTY.—We have been reading and hearing of "consecrated wealth" for a long time. So much has been said about "property devoted to God," "consecrated riches," and the like, that we have for years been looking and expecting "some great thing" to be born of this "consecration"—something that, as we once heard a brother say in his prayer, "would astonish the natives." But the "great thing" has not come to the birth, and the expectant astonishment has been converted into a query, whether all this talk about "consecrated wealth" is not the veriest palaver, and the "consecrated wealth" itself a sort of sanctified humbug! We have "consecrated" our property until we find that nearly all our schools are burdened with debt, and none of them patronized as we have a right to expect, the missionary enterprises of the church are languishing; suppers and fairs, "and such like," are resorted to to run the churches, and the "ways and means" committees are in absolute despair. The only hope that we can see to ward off bankruptcy is for us now to consecrate our poverty to God. This is what our Lord did in his incarnation. "He was rich, he became poor that ye through his poverty might be rich." This is what Paul's Corinthians did. Their "deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liability." Consecrated poverty is what God wants. "All riches are his native right." "The gold and the silver are his, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." Consecrated poverty! Let us try that awhile!

The arrangements have been made for holding the next Ecumenical Council of the Methodist Churches in this country in 1891.

Notes.

Rev. B. Carradine, in his Report on Books and Periodicals to the last session of the Louisiana Conference, has this paragraph, which we reprint from the published minutes, and ask our readers to pause and ponder:

There is a secular paper in Paris that prints seven hundred thousand copies every week and distributes them. Shall the devil and a few men for gain do this, and the church, with God and heaven as its support, not do greater things than these? Listen to Dr. Fitzgerald crying out for fifty thousand subscribers, and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE asking for seven or ten, with a million of Methodists at their back, truth on their side, and God overhead in plentitude of power, and yet content with these small figures, while one man in Paris or a dozen, working for self and money, get a million. May God bring us to greater victories than these for the religious paper!

The season for holding District Conferences is near at hand, and our experience in these Conferences as to their usefulness is somewhat mixed. After attending them and having diligently followed the routine of work, we have asked the question, What's the good? And the echo has generally been, What! They are not what they ought to be. They may be made glorious occasions for the Lord's cause by using a little forethought in the preparation of a program of exercises. Our people seem to be afraid of programs and think, if they can just get a Bishop in attendance, they will save the Conference from failure. As between a program, that puts the workers and thinkers upon their mettle to do and say something for the advance of the church, and a Bishop, sitting in a chair and asking questions and receiving replies that one-half or three-fourths of the body don't care anything about, give us the program every time and let the Bishop stay at home and rest. But if we can have the Bishop and the program, so much the better. This latter plan has been adopted by Bro. Weems for his District Conference at Brookhaven, April 7-10. This is his program:

Wednesday night—Opening sermon, Rev. J. G. Jones.

Thursday, 11 o'clock A. M.—Local Preachers' Conference, and an address by Bishop Galloway on the Work of the Local Ministry. 7:30 P. M.—Church Extension Mass Meeting; addresses by T. B. Holloman, J. W. McLaurin, J. S. Sexton.

Friday, 11 o'clock A. M.—Preaching. 7:30 P. M.—Educational Mass Meeting; addresses by T. A. S. Adams, D. D., H. W. Featherston, W. B. Murrah.

Saturday, 11 o'clock A. M.—Sunday-school Convention; addresses by J. T. Nicholson, T. L. Mellen, L. T. Fitzhugh. 7:30 P. M.—Missionary Mass Meeting; addresses by Bishop Galloway, C. W. Carter, D. D.

Sunday, 11 o'clock A. M.—Preaching. 3 P. M.—Love-feast. 7:30 P. M.—Preaching.

The Salvation Army, while doing many things that look strange, seems fruitful in expedients for raising money. Not long since, $25,000 were needed, and they went to work to raise it. How? By a "sacred concert"? Not at all. By "an ice-cream party"? Far from it. By a "little hop"? Nothing of the kind. By a "supper"? No. They simply had what they called "a week of self-denial;" and the money was raised. Oh, ye pampered Christians, if you want to raise the Lord's money, learn from these despised Salvationists!

A sentence from the article of "Barnabas," in last week's ADVOCATE, is worthy of being recalled and emphasized. "Unless education by the Church does tend decidedly and distinctively to develop the moral and religious character of our children, it is an obstruction to that by the State, and ought to get out of the way." We say, Amen! to that sentence. If education by the church means anything at all, it means a decided and distinctive development of the moral and religious character; and if the church fails at this point, she has no ground upon which to rest the reason for the existence of her schools.

The Columbus Enquirer-Sun very truly remarks:

When a man with a small salary tries to support a saloon and a family at the same time, the family will have to succumb. It has been tried, and the saloon comes out on top every time.

There is the epitomized observation of all who have ever watched the result of a poor man's support of the saloon. It is poverty to his family every time, and yet we can not yet get this evil prohibited by law. The sufferings and poverty and disgrace and shame of the families of the saloon supporters cry in vain to the law makers for redress! Oh, Lord, how long!

The publisher says he is compelled to cut off delinquent subscribers to make room for the new cash subscribers. Send them in, brethren, by the score, and try also to save those that are in jeopardy of being cut off.

Bro. Faunt LeRoy, at Baton Rouge, has received over thirty new members since Conference. He says this has been the most auspicious year thus far that he has ever had. Every interest is in good condition.

Rev. W. C. McCoy, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, was robbed, not long since, of his watch, $50 in money and his entire suit of clothes. The watch was a present from the young men of the church. The man that will rob the editor of a church paper has got down very low.

Bro. Singleton, at Natchez, Miss., raised $500 the other day to finish paying for a new organ. He has also the promise of his people that the new parsonage will be completed by July.

The brethren of the Louisiana Conference are hereby reminded that they passed a resolution at their last session to "take up our collections for foreign missions before May 1.

Bro. G. R. Ellis, of Covington, La., has been "stormed" also, and is feeling much better therefor. Now, let him and all the others get up, or rather get down, "storms" of revival, bringing sinners into the kingdom; and send us word thereof, and let us publish that best of all news—the lost are being saved.

A private note from William R. Stuart, of Ocean Springs, brings us the glad tidings of a fine revival meeting in that place. The pastor, Bro. Thompson, is assisted by Presiding Elder West, Dr. Abbey and Bro. Bowen.

It pains us extremely to record that Bro. J. L. P. Sheppard, of the Louisiana Conference, was very severely injured recently by being run over by a pair of runaway horses. The injuries are reported by Bro. Randle, the presiding elder, to be of a very serious character; and it will be several weeks before Bro. Sheppard will be able to attend to his duties. We record this, that he may have the prayers of the church.

Rev. J. W. Lee, D. D., pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga., is to deliver a lecture in Grunewald Hall, this city, Friday, April 1, eight P. M., for the benefit of the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Church. Subject—"The Philosophy of Small Men." Dr. Lee has the reputation of being a lecturer of rare power, and all who hear him will have a rare treat. Let him have a full house. Tickets, fifty cents.

A curious statement is made by a Washington correspondent of one of the papers to the effect that a Chicago citizen has filed a claim at the Treasury Department for the redemption of a $1,000 United States bond, which he says he swallowed to prevent its falling into the hands of robbers. That locates one bondholder.

A debt of gratitude is too often compromised at about fifty cents on the dollar.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden zappers and mixers. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, Howard Co., Mo.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

DYSPEPSIA

IS NOT A BLOOD DISEASE, and CANNOT be cured by the so-called blood purifiers, but is caused most commonly by an imperfect condition of the secretions; the food fails to digest properly, the mucous lining of the stomach is weakened, and chronic dyspepsia results, bringing the bad appetite, the faint, gnawing feeling, low spirits, and all the symptoms dyspeptics know so well.

A BITE.

There's a candy store just down the street,
Whose windows shine with pans and jars
Of most delightful things to eat,
In sticks and balls and bars.

And all day long its sugared joys
Gladden the streams (which never end)
Of happy little girls and boys
Who have a dime to spend.

To-day a dirty, ragged mite
Stood gazing in with hungry eyes;
He would have thought a penny quite
A treasure and a prize.

He looked forlornly at the hand
Of laughing boys just coming through
The door, with lightened pockets and
With mouths crammed full, he knew;

Then stared—this shappy little chap—
For one came closer, smiling bright,
And holding out a sticky scrap,
And offered him a bite!

I think his look of pleased surprise,
The gladly grateful smile he wore,
Was sweeter in the giver's eyes
Than a whole candy store.

—Golden Days.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eight years old. I was born on my papa's birthday. He sometimes calls me his birthday present. I go to school. My pa is the teacher. I would like to "cross-spell" with some of my little ADVOCATE cousins whose nice letters I read in your excellent paper. Papa buys me nice books to read. I have read one he bought for me last summer—"The Story of the Bible"—through, and have learned a great deal from it. I wish all my little cousins could read it. I can answer a good many of the questions in your letters, my little cousins; but I am afraid to begin, as I learn that the editor keeps a huge waste-basket to put letters in when they are too long. But I must tell Hattie L. Dean that Isaac's brother was Ishmael; but he was only a half-brother. I mean to grow up a useful woman. If this letter meets with favor, I shall write again.

Your little friend,

DAISY SMITH.

COINTH, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years old. I am not going to school at present. Our school is out, but I study at home. I am studying history, geography, arithmetic, grammar and dictionary. Papa takes the dear old ADVOCATE, and I like to read it very much, especially the young folks' column. Our preacher last year was Rev. J. G. Sibley. We all liked him very much. Our preacher this year is Rev. R. A. Breland, and I hope he will give the satisfaction that our last preacher did. I will answer S. W. Greening's question: Noah was 600 years old. It is found in Genesis vii, 6. I will close by asking the little cousins some questions: Where in the Bible is "bridegroom" found? What kind of wood was the ark made of? Who was David's father? With many good wishes to the ADVOCATE, I remain, Your true friend,

LUTIE L. HOOD.

TUSCANOLA, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. My papa takes your valuable paper, and has been taking it ever since I can recollect. I like it so much, especially the young folks' department. I go to school to Miss Ollie Chaney. I study geography, spelling, reading, grammar and two arithmetics. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday when it is not raining or the river is not up. My papa is teacher of the Bible class. I have two brothers and two sisters. My mamma is dead; but grandma and auntie live with us. I can not answer any questions this time; but, if you will excuse me for this time, I will ask one: Who once prayed to Abraham? I will close for this time. If this will pass, please do not drop it in the waste-basket. Hoping the ADVOCATE much success, I remain,

Your little friend,

ANNA WATSON.

GRANGEVILLE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I never hear my mamma read any little letters from this place, I thought I would get her to write a few lines for me, as I can not write. I am a little boy six years old. I have two brothers—Sammie and Roscoe. My papa and only sister, little Addie, were killed in the cyclone at Beauregard, and our home was destroyed. I go to school to my mamma. Our pastor for this year is Bro. Simmons. We have not had the pleasure of meeting him as yet, but know we will love him. Well, I will close for this time, hoping my little letter will not find its way to the waste-basket.

Your little friend,

JOHNNIE J. TERRELL.

MT. CARMEL, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I see in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, in a letter written by Felix H. Thompson, the question asked: "What three names and only three that begin with the letter 'F'?" In I Corinthians xvi, 17, I find Fortunatus. In Acts xxiv, 27, I find Festus and Felix. I will be ten years old in June. I have never thought of writing to you before, and I can not write well enough now to write by myself. I go to school to my grandmother. I study reading, with definitions, history, geography, arithmetic and spelling. Bro. Upton is our pastor, and we were all glad to have him with us this second year. I live with my uncle, Mr. G. G. Lynch. My mother died in New Orleans when I was six months old. I call my aunt, Mamma.

GEORGE S. RILEY.

EAST CARROLL PARISH, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Papa is now a subscriber to your valuable paper, and we all like it very much. I was very much pleased with the young folks' department. I am going to school now. My teacher's name is Mr. Jones. My eldest sister, Minnie, is assistant teacher. Answer to Laura O. King's question: Methuselah was the oldest man that ever lived; who died before his father, because his father did not die. I will ask the young folks a question: What two chapters in the Bible are alike? If you would make a little girl happy, please publish this letter from HETTIE LE NOIR.

MAGNOLIA, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old, so I thought I would write a letter to the dear old ADVOCATE. I see so many from the little girls, so I ask leave to join the band. I hope it will not find the waste-basket. I go to Sunday-school. We have a good one. Bro. McLaren is our pastor. I have two sisters and one brother. He is our little pet. I will close by asking a question: Who slew more at his death than he slew in his life?

SALLIE SEAMAN.

MCCOMB CITY, Mississippi.

HEARING THE SERMON.—A little girl used to go to church. She was only between four and five years of age—quite a little girl. But she listened to her minister; she knew that he would tell her about Christ, and she wanted to learn. Once, when she reached home from church, she said:

"Mother, I can tell you a little of the minister's sermon. He said: 'Touch not the unclean thing.'"

Wishing to know whether her little daughter understood the meaning of these words, the mother said:

"Then if the minister said so, I hope you will take care in the future not to touch things that are dirty."

The little girl smiled and answered:

"Oh, mother, I know very well what he meant. It was not that."

"What did he mean?" asked the mother.

"He meant sin," said the child; "and it is all the same as if he had told us, 'You must not tell lies, nor do what your mother forbids you to do, nor play on Sunday, nor be cross, nor do any things that are bad and wrong.' The Bible means that a sinful thing is an unclean thing, mother."

IN cases of Fever and Ague, the blood is as effectually, though not so dangerously poisoned by the effluvium of the atmosphere as it could be by the deadliest poison. Dr. J. H. McLean's Chills and Fever Cure will eradicate this poison from the system. 50 cents a bottle.

OPENING THE HEART.—I knew a little boy whose heart was touched by a sermon on the words, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock." My mother said to him, when she noticed that he was anxious, "Robert, what would you say to anyone who knocked at the door of your heart, if you wished him to come in?" He answered, "I'd say, 'Come in!'" She then said to him, "Then say to the Lord Jesus, 'Come in!'"

The next morning there was a brightness and a joy about Robert's face that made my father ask, "Robert, what makes you look so glad and joyful to-day?" He replied joyfully, "I awoke in the night, and I felt that Jesus Christ was still knocking at the door of my heart for admittance into it. I said to him, 'Lord Jesus, come in!' I think he has come into my heart. I feel happier this morning than I ever was in all my life. How ungrateful and wicked in me to keep him waiting outside so long!"—Kind Words.

Farm and Home.

FARM EDUCATION.—We never shall overestimate the great benefits of farm-life for the young of both sexes. It furnishes one of the best possible schools for the development of brain and muscle in our boys and girls. Cities are indeed sores upon the body politic. Then let us as good citizens and wise fathers so conduct our professions as to make our homes and our work attractive to our children, and profitable to ourselves and them. Certainly we have a profession, than which none can furnish a wider field for the development of body and mind. And here I wish to bear my testimony to the great benefits to be derived from a liberal expenditure for good books and papers. I had rather confine myself and family to a diet of corn and meat, with a liberal supply of good literature, than have the best of living without food for the mind. That man (whatever his business) who has not yet learned the value of the habit of reading, both to himself and his family, can hardly be said to have learned the first rudiments of happiness, and is unfit to be a father, or to have the care of a rising family. I put this strongly; for I consider the reading habit of inestimable benefit to individuals, families and communities. No class of our population have better opportunities for developing the habit than farmers. None are so poor as to be shut out from the use of good papers and books.—Thomas McFarlane.

CORN CULTURE.—Deep and thorough preparation of the soil greatly reduces necessary after-culture. The best time to destroy weeds is when they commence their growth. Early planting is advisable, but this may be overdone. It is well to consult both the almanac and the thermometer. Until soil is warm enough for the corn to germinate, no good comes from planting. Width of rows and number of kernels should vary with size of varieties. Except for extra labor in cultivation, drill planting is better than hills. Imperfect and uneven "stands" are a chief cause of small crops. It is not certain that it would not be wise to plant more thickly than is desired and then "thin out." Replanting is usually unsatisfactory. Three kernels to each hill are usually desirable. Especially early in the season, shallow covering is wise.

The object of cultivating corn is to destroy the weeds, loosen the soil, and, in dry weather, prevent evaporation, the loosened surface acting as a mulch. Cutting the roots is almost always a necessary evil. Deep and close culture while the corn is small may be helpful; later only shallow culture should be given. With clean land any cultivation when corn has made large growth will probably do more harm than good.—Prof. G. L. Morrow.

GIRLS AS ACCOUNTANTS.—"My daughter keeps my farm account, sir, and she is as systematic and particular as ever my son was, who kept them before he left home. I tell you it does girls (and he might have added boys, too) good to give them some responsibility, and set them to watching things about the farm and household. They learn, I find, economy by it, and soon discover that their father is not necessarily a crabbed old curmudgeon because he doesn't loosen his purse-string whenever they see something they happen to fancy, for they discover the real reason why the purse should not be opened." So said a progressive farmer, a kind, appreciative and proud father, and a big-hearted man on general principles.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1886.
122 E. 27th St.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.,

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold, nor any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in acute cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, life has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

HARPER—Mrs. Anna S. Harper was born in Wake county, N. C., November 15, 1805. While she was quite young her father moved to Hareyman county, Tenn. Here she was married, in January, 1828, to Samuel B. Harper. After living in Lagrange, Tenn., for several years, they moved to Marshall county, Miss. In 1846 they moved to Camden, Ark., where they lived until 1853, when they moved to Minden, Claiborne parish, La. The husband at that time was in very feeble health, and during that year died. After the death of her husband, she, with her children, settled about twelve miles north of Minden, where she resided until after the war—in fact, until two or three years ago, when the old homestead was sold. All of her children having married, she made her home with her youngest son, Dr. W. D. Harper, at whose house she died on the morning of March 1, 1887, being over eighty-one years of age, full of years and Christian faith. The time of her making a profession of religion and joining the church is not known to this writer, but I am satisfied it was when she was quite young.

She was a cultivated Bible Christian, a zealous Methodist, and pronounced in her religious experience. I have often heard her relate her experience to the edification and encouragement of the church. Her friends, neighbors and children are witnesses that her life exemplified her public testimony for Christ. Left a widow with a family of children, she commanded her house well, and her children grew up respected and honored citizens; nearly all of them became members of the church. Three of her sons graduated in medicine; two of them are still living; one has passed away. Others of the children have crossed over the river; the rest are, we trust, following in the footsteps of the mother. God grant that they may be as ready when the Master calls as the mother was! Sister Harper's kind, affable nature and benevolent spirit won for her a large circle of friends that now deeply mourn the loss of this aged mother in Israel. JNO. A. MILLER.

WEST—Charles Robertson West, son of John B. and Margaret M. West, was born April 16, 1868; professed religion and joined the Baptist Church in August, 1883, and died March 9, 1887.

My acquaintance with Charley, as we all called him, was short; but I knew him only to love him. His stay on earth was short, being only eighteen years, ten months and twenty-three days old. But he was always a good boy even before he was converted, and was considered the model boy of the neighborhood. He was the light of his home. Being a good singer, fond of music and understanding how to sing, he filled his home with joy and gladness. He will be missed at home; his place will be vacant at the table, around the fireside and piano; and not only there, but in the Sabbath-school and church worship his voice is hushed and will be heard no more. But, thank God, while we mourn there is mixed with it that religion that sustained him in life and caused him to be full of songs of praise to God—sustained him in death; and while we are filled with sorrow and sadness, no doubt he is singing songs of praise around the throne of God. Weep not, stricken ones, the grace of God that sustained Charley will sustain you; and though we can not bring him back to us, we can go to him. May God bless the bereaved ones and help them to submit to the will of God, and so live that they may meet their loved one again. A. P. LEECH.

DRAKE—Our Bro. Drake, of Moss Point, and his family are in deep sorrow. An infant daughter was born to them on June 28. The baby seemed healthy and strong, and was beautiful. More than a week ago she was attacked with pneumonia. By careful and skillful attention she seemed at times to be better, but on the night of Friday last her short earthly life was closed, her sufferings ended, and little "Alice Covington" was taken by the dear Christ, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

H. JONES.

NEWSOM—Joseph Roger Newsom, son of W. J. and Ella Newsom, was born November 26, 1886, and died March 5, 1887.

Sweet flower budded on earth, but gone to bloom in paradise. Though he remained on earth so short a time, at his departure many hearts were filled with sadness. God gave thee him, dear parents, but quickly took him home to live and bloom forever where death shall never come.

J. A. LEECH.

ROWELL—John V. Rowell was born in Jasper county, Miss., February 19, 1844. He professed religion in early life, and lived a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, until death, which took place February 1, 1887. He was happily married to Miss Barbara Lightsey, January 15, 1865. She with eight children are left to mourn for a devoted husband and father.

Bro. Rowell was a good steward of Pleasant Hill Church for many years, and a very successful Bible class teacher in the Sabbath-school. He was dearly loved by the people generally. I visited him as pastor a few days before his death and administered to him the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and found him ready for the Master's call. Bro. Rowell was truly a Christian gentleman—one of those few men (alas! we are sorry to say) who erected the family altar in his house. We hope and pray that the bereaved family will follow his pious example, and keep up family worship. We could say much more in memory of our departed brother, but we know he is in a land of peace and joy; therefore, we close with a sincere prayer for the heart-stricken wife with her eight fatherless children that they may be faithful unto death, and meet a sainted father in the better land!

J. C. BROGAN.

BRYAN—W. A. Bryan was born in Baton Rouge, May 16, 1830; joined the church at the age of eighteen years; married Miss Sarah S. Townsend, of East Baton Rouge, in 1851, and died in Plaquemine, January 13, 1887.

Bro. Bryan was a loyal Methodist, a devout Christian, and an influential citizen. He was an affectionate and indulgent husband and parent. He was beloved by the church and community. The children all loved him. He was steward and Sunday-school superintendent, and his death is a great loss to the church and community; but while we feel the loss so deeply, we know that he is at rest—sweet rest. Ah! there is no suffering, pain or death in that land of rest. May God bless the broken-hearted wife and orphan children!

W. WIMBERLY.

BUFORD—Capt. James H. Buford, received in the Methodist Church on profession of faith, in 1871, by Rev. R. A. Jones, died March 4, 1887, at his residence, in Pickens Station, Miss., aged fifty-three years. He was the son-in-law of Rev. G. D. Wade, of the North Mississippi Conference.

Bro. Buford was an excellent man in all the relations of life. He was for years a member of the Board of Stewards of Richmond circuit. Faithful, patient and cheerful to a remarkable degree under great bodily sufferings, humble, consistent, upright, his loss is greatly felt and deplored by this community. Having buried his noble Christian wife, Mary A. Buford, a little more than two years ago, he has passed over the last river to join her and be with her in the home of God. THOS. CAMERON.

Daily Winding.—The watch in your pocket, or that clock on the mantelpiece needs to be wound every day or every eight days. Neglect them over the day or over the week, and soon the tell-tale hands will remind you, and the confusion in your household or business would loudly call for the rewinding. Do you think your private devotions, or family prayer, or social and public worship would be more faithfully attended to if there were some tell-tale hands to show you that you were not coming up to time? Because God does not treat you like a machine, and does not remind you in a way that can not be overlooked, will you, therefore, give more attention to your timepiece than your altar? Shall your own pleasure and convenience and secular business be of more regard to you than your religious condition, your spiritual happiness, or your devotional duties to yourself, to others, and to God?

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

News Summary.

MARCH 15.

Over 200 persons have already been arrested for connection with the attempted assassination of the Czar.——A remarkable darkness enveloped London at noon to-day. It was as dark as midnight in the entire region of Charing Cross, Whitehall and the Strand, the atmosphere being pitchy black.——The governor of Tennessee signed the bill submitting to the people a prohibition amendment to the Constitution. The election will be held next September.——The New Orleans Mardi Gras show will be reproduced in Washington in October.

MARCH 16.

It is reported that Emperor William on his birthday will proclaim the Crown Prince Frederick William co-regent, with the consent of the Bundesrath.——Pursuant to the governor's call, the General Assembly of Virginia met to-day at noon in extra session.——A guard has been set over the vault in which Mr. Beecher's remains are deposited.——The Rhode Island Republican State Convention met to-day and nominated by acclamation all the present incumbents of State offices, from the governor down, for the party candidates.

MARCH 17.

The Cardinal's hat was conferred on Archbishops Gibbons and Taschereau at Rome to-day.——A feature of the observance of St. Patrick's day in England was the appearance of many Englishmen wearing shamrock.——The Radical press made a bitter attack on M. de Lesseps for calling France the natural friend of Germany, and advise him to stay at home in the future and confine himself to canal matters.——The contract for making the Mexican Independence Monument was awarded Messrs. Schulz, of Washington.——Dr. T. G. Ford has been pardoned by Gov. McEnery.

MARCH 18.

De Lesseps says that Bismarck stated "that when our forces are equal, the two peoples will fraternize."——The fund being raised by the press of Russia for the benefit of families of the insurgents executed in Bulgaria has reached 10,000 roubles. The Czar gave 5,000, the Czarina 3,000, and the Czarowitz 1,000 roubles.——The Deputies have granted the government $40,000 to be expended in keeping up the sanitary cordons on the roads from the Argentine Republic into Bolivia.——Mrs. Adele Gratiot Washburne, wife of Hon. E. B. Washburne, ex-Minister to France, died in Chicago to-day.——Thirty lives lost in the burning of a hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

MARCH 19.

Mr. Penfield, U. S. Vice-Consul General in London, has resigned and accepted an executive position with the American Exhibition.——Prime Minister Salisbury is ill, but was able to preside at the Cabinet Council held at his residence to-day.——The new alliance between Germany, Austria and Italy places each of these powers on an equality.——The Prince of Wales has gone to Berlin, where he will represent the Queen on the occasion of the ninetieth anniversary of the Emperor William's birth.——The men regarded to be sure of being Interstate Commissioners are: Morrison, of Illinois; Bragg, of Alabama; and Cooley, of Michigan.

MARCH 20.

It is reported that the Czar received a letter, dated March 1, from the executive of the Nihilist Committee, informing him that at the sitting of the committee, on February 22, he was condemned to death, and that fifty members were appointed to execute the sentence.——A majority of the Bulgarian delegates are resolved to reelect Alexander King of Bulgaria just as soon as the Regents deem it opportune.——Carl Muller, the sculptor, is dead.——Renewal of the Polish Church troubles in Detroit.——Disastrous conflagration amid the summer resorts on Lake Chautauqua.——Warsow Salt Works at Warsow, N. Y., destroyed by fire.

MARCH 21.

The Emperor William's birthday festivities virtually began yesterday. There is an unprecedented gathering of royalty and nobles. The National Gazette, referring to the gathering, says: "The signs of peace that are coming from all sides testify that the occasion is treated in the most splendid and unequivocal manner as a European peace festival."——The British government is determined to press the Coercion Bill. It will be opposed by the combined strength of the Gladstonians and Parnellites.——The fire at Chautauqua destroyed eighty buildings. Total loss will probably exceed $100,000.——On the 272nd ballot William H. Martin was last night nominated to succeed Hon. John H. Reagan, of Texas, in the House of Representatives.——Ex-Representative Hall, of Iowa, will be the Commissioner of Patents.

The New Cyclopedia of Family Medicine.

OUR HOME PHYSICIAN.

By George M. Beard, A. M., M. D., assisted by several eminent physicians and surgeons, each of whom is a specialist in his department.

This book is written for the people in plain common-sense language, giving causes, symptoms and reliable remedies for every ill. Its ever-ready counsel will dispel anxious fears, doubts and uncertainties, and will prove a Good Samaritan in every family procuring it, in promoting health, happiness and long life.

The Appendix giving Homœopathic Remedies and Treatment, by Samuel Lilienthal, M. D., Professor in the New York Homœopathic College, and editor of the North American Journal of Homœopathy, etc., gives additional value to this great book.

C. A. Sleddard, D. D., Editor of The New York Observer, says: "It is a remarkably sensible, comprehensive and valuable work for young and old, and is entirely healthful and decorous in style and matter."

The New York Medical Record says: "Our Home Physician is, in our opinion, the best work upon the subject that has ever been published."

The Chicago Tribune says: "It must prove an invaluable guide in the household."

Over 1,500 Royal Octavo Pages. Illustrated with nearly 300 Chromo Plates and Wood Cuts, carefully excluding such as would offend good taste and propriety.

Price, $12; reduced to $6. Agents are wanted by E. B. TREAT, PUBLISHER, 771 Broadway, New York.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

Mr. Stevenson has caught the ears of the readers of books, and is likely to keep their attention; and this new collection of new tales from his pen will interest many.

—The following pamphlets have been received:

The Original Status of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by Prof. Tigert, of Vanderbilt University.

Colleges North and Colleges South, by Julius D. Dreher, president of Roanoke College.

Evangelization, by George F. Pentecost, D. D.

The New South and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by Rev. J. C. C. Newton, of the Baltimore Conference.

Profit Sharing, by N. O. Nelson, St. Louis, Mo.

PERIODICALS.

—From George E. Wharton & Bro., this city, we have received the March number of Outing, an illustrated monthly magazine of recreation. It is devoted to out-door sports of various kinds, and must be an interesting monthly to all lovers of out-door life. Published by The Outing Company, 140 Nassau street, New York City. Price, $3.

—The Quiver, for April, is already on our table, and full of good things.

—The Magazine of Art, for April, is a fine number of this monthly. The illustrations are exquisite; the notes entertaining in the highest degree. Cassell & Co., 739 Broadway, New York. Price, $3 50 per annum.

—The Gospel in All Lands, for March, is devoted to Africa—country, people, customs, superstitions and Protestant missions. This is a most valuable missionary monthly. Published by Phillips & Hunt, 805 Broadway, New York. Price, $2 per annum.

Notice.

To the Pastors of the Woodville District, Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Please send me, at Centreville, Miss., the names of local preachers, recording stewards and delegates, that we may make arrangements for their entertainment at our District Conference, which meets here on April 14 next; also let us know who are going to bring their wives or daughters. We will be ready to receive and entertain all that come.

P. HOWARD.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Story of a Postal Card.

I was afflicted with kidney and urinary Trouble—

"For twelve years!"

After trying all the doctors and patent medicines I could hear of, I used two bottles of Hop Bitters;

"Bitters!"

And I am perfectly cured. I keep it

"All the time!"

Respectfully, B. F. BOOTH, Salisbury, Tenn. May 4, 1883.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1885.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in years, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them. MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

ASHBURNHAM, MASS., Jan. 15, 1886.

I have been very sick over two years. They all gave me up as past cure. I tried the most skillful physicians, but they did not reach the worst part. The lungs and heart would fill up every night and distress me, and my throat was very bad. I told my children I should never die in peace till I had tried Hop Bitters. When I had taken two bottles they helped me very much indeed. When I had taken two more bottles I was well. There was a lot of sick folks here who have seen how they cured me, and they used them and were cured and feel as thankful as I do that there is so valuable a medicine made. Yours truly,

MISS JULIA G. CUSHING.

$3,000 Lost.

"A tour to Europe, that cost me $3,000, done less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; they also cured my wife of fifteen years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness and dyspepsia."—Mr. H. M., Auburn, N. Y.

Baby Saved.

We are thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its nursing mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.—The Parents, Rochester, N.Y.

☞ Unhealthy or inactive kidneys cause gravel, "Bright's disease, rheumatism and a horde of other serious and fatal diseases, which can be prevented with Hop Bitters," if taken in time.

"Ludlington, Mich., Feb. 2, 1885. I have sold Hop Bitters for ten years, and there" is no medicine that equals them for billous attacks, kidney complaints and all diseases incident to this malarious climate. H. T ALEXANDER.

"Monroe, Mich., Sept. 25th, 1885. SIRS:—I have been taking Hop Bitters for inflammation of "kidneys and bladder. It has done for me "what four physicians failed to do—cured me. The effect of the Bitters seemed like magic to me.

W. L. CARTER.

GENTS:—Your Hop Bitters have been of great value to me. I was laid up with typhoid fever for over two months, and could get no relief until I tried your Hop Bitters. To those suffering from debility, or any one in feeble health, I cordially recommend them. J. C. STOETZEL, 638 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Can You Answer This?

Is there a person living who ever saw a case of ague, billousness, nervousness or neuralgia, or any disease of the stomach, liver or kidneys that Hop Bitters will not cure?

"My Mother says Hop Bitters is the only thing that will keep her from severe attacks of paralysis and headache.—Ed. Oswego Sun.

"My little sickly, puny baby was changed into a great lumbering boy, and I was raised from a sick bed by using Hop Bitters a short time."

VOICES OF PRAISE.

A HYMN AND TUNE BOOK OF RARE MERIT FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AND RELIGIOUS MEETINGS.

Price 40 cents; $4.20 per dozen.

BY REV. CHARLES L. HUTCHINS.

The publishers, with much pleasure, announce a new edition of a very successful book, highly commended by clergymen and Sunday-school men of all denominations.

It is, as many believe, the only book of the kind that entirely, and without qualification, meets the views of educated and refined people who wish plain tunes, but not dull music, and true and high class, but bright poetry, for Sunday-school and Social Meeting service.

VOICES OF PRAISE has all that. Even the old English Church Tunes, which are so apt to drag, furnished with quicker notation, here advance with a youthful, joyous, elastic step, which is, indeed, their true tempo.

VOICES OF PRAISE is a large, but light and conveniently carried book, with 410 Tunes to nearly as many Hymns and Canticles. It has sold very largely. The price is low.

THE BRAVEST BATTLE.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

The bravest battle that ever was fought!
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not:
'Twas fought by the mothers of men!

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen;
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought
From mouths of wonderful men;

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently bore her part—
Lo! there is the battlefield!

No marshaling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave!
But, oh! these battles, they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

"Jack's Patch."

BY REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

My story had its origin in the good old days (before the war), when the highest type of manhood was seen in the thoughtful Christian master, and the greatest expression of happiness was found in his faithful servant. In those days of "massa's corn and massa's hog," "massa's law and massa's nigger," there was a freedom from care and fear of want, and certain liberties enjoyed by the Southern slaves, that can only be appreciated by those conversant with life on the "old plantation." Among the privileges granted by the master, there was none so appreciated as that of every man to have his patch. These were plots of ground, of greater or less size, which were devoted to raising whatever, in the judgment of the proud possesser, was considered to be the most remunerative. Who does not remember the glorious watermelon patches of Sam and Jack and Bob? Why, the "white folk's" patch sank into nothingness beside these plots covered with beautiful melons—some long, some round, some green, some striped and some white. And how nice they were, weighing forty pounds, more or less, and, oh! so refreshing! It was from the fruits of these patches that the servant obtained the necessary cash for all his extra Christmas demands. To work them an occasional half Saturday was given, and an hour was taken during the long resting time at noon by many of the more industrious. Thus many a Sambo found himself often the possessor of great riches as the result of his industry and frugality. It was also the custom with most masters when Christmas came to have something extra to bestow upon each family with which they might make merry. What times of rejoicing were these when all the darkies from the quarters came up to the "Big House," singing that deeply expressive chorus, "Christmas comes but once a year," etc.

But to my story and its point. It runs thus: One fine Christmas morning, in response to the many merry "Christmas gifts," as they had been "caught" on the master, he called his servants around to get their presents. One by one they came forward with smiling (?) faces to receive the gift. Finally Jack was called. A trim, neatly dressed man stepped to the front, confidently expecting that master had something unusually good for him, as he was faithful and trusty beyond his fellows. But, to his surprise and mortification, instead of a reward, the master withheld his hand, and addressed him thus:

"Well, Jack, I have no gift for you this morning. You raised a fine patch this year, didn't you, Jack?"

"Yas, sah."

"Sold a good many melons, didn't you, Jack?"

"Yas, sah."

"Got nice prices for them, too; didn't you?"

"Yas, sah."

"Well, Jack, what did you do with your money?"

"Got it home in my chist, sah."

"Well, Jack, you are able to buy your own present. I've nothing for you."

How did the heart of poor Jack sink within him and his countenance change as he walked away to his lonely cabin! What feelings of indignation at the base injustice done him, and that, too, by one in whom he trusted! The general verdict of all who dared express their opinions was that Jack had not been dealt with justly. Master had done him a wrong all because he had been more industrious and frugal than any other on the plantation. What Jack had, and not the faithfulness with which he had served, was the basis of action toward him. His ability to do for himself, and not the pure principles of right and justice, had influenced the master in rewarding him.

So I have often wondered if the principle illustrated in "Jack's patch" had not in some instances found its way into the church. The preacher who by close economy has laid by a pittance must not speak of it, or he will be found dependent on the proceeds of his patch. If by some good fortune he finds himself possessed of a house and lands, then his patch must make up the deficit of many a short assessment. He has the courage and foresight to gather about him such things as may be grown and reared on a country home. Everybody works, from least to greatest, while the man of God is looking after the church. What wife and children have done is seen by all, and the patch plays and pays its part. Daughter is in charge of some good school and son is making good wages at some store, and, therefore, the patch is doing a very considerable part. No suffering will ensue if the salary falls short; for has not the preacher, in addition to all that, performed a great many marriage ceremonies during the year which have paid him handsomely? Should a school for a few months be accepted that a meagre salary might be supplemented to living figures, the brother finds himself the owner of a veritable patch. And so I might enumerate many other ways by which the preacher becomes the possessor of a genuine "Jack's patch." Let the motto of every member of the church be, Justice to all men—patch or no patch—and the laborer is worthy of his hire.

"The World in the Church."

BY REV. R. S. WOODWARD.

The facile pen and eloquent tongue of Bishop Pierce sleep in the silence of the grave; but his sermon on the above-named subject still speaks "with no uncertain sound"—on a subject as vitally important to the church to-day as when it fell fresh from the lips of the living preacher. It can be had at our Publishing House, in tract form, so cheap that every preacher throughout the connection ought, I think, to put it in each family of his charge. There is an intense liberalizing sentiment pervading the moral atmosphere of our modern society, the tendency of which is to relax the tone of Christian morals and spiritual religion, and degenerate into the spirit of worldliness. It has its origin in a deceptive sentimentality, rendered respectable by being clothed in silken sheen and popularized by the tinsel and flippancy of a numerous championship, professedly the advocates of "religious liberty," "advanced culture," "the spirit of the age," etc. These latitudinarians denounce the exercise of church discipline as "behind the age," narrow, puritanical, etc. Modern skepticism, with all of its brilliant galaxy of advocates, is not a more dangerous or subtle foe. From its plausible and insidious manner, it gains access to all classes of society, and in one form or another its disastrous influence is felt in every community. There are hundreds of mothers who would shudder at the thought of having the pure minds and simple faith of their daughters tainted with any of the varying forms of skepticism; yet these pious (?) mothers seem delighted at seeing their daughters whirling in this insidious maelstrom of worldliness, as if it did not as effectually separate all thoughts of God and the salvation of the soul from their minds and hearts as any of the forms of infidelity could do. The delusive spell is harder to break, for "she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth." Oh, what a multitude of church members have we, who are loosening their moorings from the cross, and venturing out farther and farther on this perilous sea, some of whom are daily just reaching the "danger line," beyond which there is no return!

Some of our members have become leaders at balls, germans and progressive euchre; and though the more pious of the church are grieved, and lament the growing evil, their voice is too faint and their nerve too weak to arrest the billowy tide. As to how we can best meet successfully and counteract this subtle influence, just at this time, is a most momentous question. We do not wish to cut any off, if it can be avoided without compromising the church. But if the church is to be fruitful and continue to be a power for good in the world, its purity must be preserved. We recommend faithful preaching and private admonition in the spirit of meekness and love, and a resort to discipline only after all other means have failed. But let us, my brethren, stand by the church—stand firmly. If any must suffer, let it be the worldly portion. If we must decline, let it be in numbers, and not in puffity and spiritual power.

Numbers, with all the eclat that wealth and worldly pomp can give, will not compensate for the loss of spiritual simplicity in the church. The sentiment expressed in the words, "Simply to the cross I cling," as experienced by the humble, trusting followers of Christ, has more conservative power in it than a volume of creeds diluted to suit the perverted tastes of a church where the spirit of worldliness dominates.

There certainly lies at the door of the ministry a fearful responsibility touching this matter. Are we not in danger of involving ourselves in criminal neglect if we fail to expose more faithfully this evil that is jeopardizing the spiritual life and power of the church? Shall we, from the fear of offending a vitiated public taste, betray our sacred trust and suffer the church to be robbed of its strength and influence? Shall we, whose divinely given commission it is to watch and give the alarm on every approach of danger, from fear of disturbing the syren enchantment of the people, let their souls drift on into this whirlpool of death and go down forever?

These alarming facts call for Zion's watchmen to awake, and give the alarm, lest the people in their blind infatuation perish, and their blood be upon our heads.

VAZOO CITY, Mississippi.

Letter from Woodville.

BY REV. T. W. BROWN.

MR. EDITOR: Woodville has had a rare treat in a series of meetings which continued for a week in the Presbyterian Church, conducted by Dr. James Hoyt, evangelist. He is bold, unflinching, unsectarian, speaks to the point, and is generally successful. With a glorious magnanimity he turns the trophies of victory over to any church which suits the new convert. About twenty united with the various churches. The Methodist Church registered thirteen. We are all under obligations.

From the amount of light being shed on the college question we expect you to be very full of educational wisdom when you shall come up to that meeting of certain curators. We are being keyed up. The signs are of life, not of death. Wisdom is at work. The mountain groans. The giant bestirs himself. How gravely and ponderously the brethren walk right into the heart of difficulties. A tap on the top of the subject by the Bishop has awakened the sentinels. A few little piney-woods schools that the ambitious proprietors want somebody to call colleges, and which are doing good work, too, as far as they go, seem to have smitten with dismay many hearts and started the very ghosts of ruin from their hiding-places. No matter if you do define a college, and stick to the definition, it will not lessen the number of them or "degrade" these schools. They are neighborhood necessities. They wander in calico and brogans, and, if need be, minus the brogans. They are composed, some of them, of genuine Methodist stuff. They are as hungry for knowledge as an opossum is for persimmons, and as tenacious of life and limb—that is, until they can get the persimmons. These very schools which Bro. Hunnicutt kindly agrees to be let alone, and fondly called colleges, are the best feeders, and will be, of our sure-enough colleges. Systematizing, correlating, regulating, etc., will throw the forces into a little better shape. The force is what is wanted, the capital, the money. That was a very nervous lay brother that took a fit over a bag with a hole in it. Now there are bags and bags without any holes, and some that a good layer of greenbacks would forever prevent even from porosity. Stop the hole, the next one you see, brother, with your money.

Maybe no church ever did come up to the measure of ability, and maybe the Methodists least of all, though we have done wonders. Hitherto the surplus only has been dedicated. Now there is no surplus, and the want of it is beginning to hurt. That woful wail of debt, debt, debt, that comes like a heart-groan from the great organ at Nashville, is a revelation of the true reason of our difficulties.

There is a general depression in secular affairs, and it is pleaded and thought to be sufficient as a reason for withholding aid from our colleges. We are to learn even in the midst of poverty and financial pressure the value, the preciousness of religious education, and even in poverty must learn liberality. The great Southern heart is throbbing with expectancy of an industrial revival. We are trusting that we are nearly through the tunnel of transition. Our educational interests will keep abreast. We are not wanting in self-sacrificing men who would die to promote the interests of church education. Some concessions may have to be made, in our curriculums, to modern ideas. Much patience and charity must be indulged towards the unfairness of State universities, especially as they are so strongly pillared on the shoulders of Christian men and women. Yet the Christian churches can never afford to commit their youth to "the world" to be educated. Their spiritual life and energy demand that their young people shall have sanctified learning. But they must learn to give and sacrifice much, and all the rest will come right. If the people were not so poor and business so dull and non-paying, the trouble would cease. We hail the discussion of the subject as ominous of good, and hope that our Bishop who has started it will live to see the moss scraped from our college walls and our Niobe dry her tears.

Hints and Helps to the Study of God's Word—No. 3.

INSTRUCTION FROM EXAMPLES OF SCRIPTURE.

We may be instructed by noticing the conduct of individuals in particular cases, and by comparing the conduct of different persons under similar circumstances. Instance—The boldness of Micaiah (I Kings xxii, 14, and Jer. xxvi, 12-15); the faithfulness of John the Baptist (Matt. xiv, 4). The heroic courage of these servants of God—rebuking sin and vice in the highest places, and then patiently suffering for the truth's sake, instructs us as to duty and responsibility under similar circumstances. The weeping of Elisha (II Kings viii, 11); of the Psalmist (Psalms exix, 136); of Jeremiah (Jer. ix, 1); of Paul (Phil. iii, 18); of our Lord (Luke xix, 41), over sin and sinners, instructs us as to the proper state of mind and heart which should characterize us, if true Christians, in the midst of abounding sin, and the apprehended peril and doom of sinners.

The disobedience of Saul in sparing Agag, king of Amalekites (I Sam. xv, 3, 8, 19), and of Ahab in sparing Ben-hadad (I Kings xx, 34), are examples in which sin is its own punishment, in part, at least; for an Amalekite robbed Saul of his crown, and it was in battle with Ben-hadad that Ahab was killed.

Compare the impatience of Moses, Elijah, Job and Jonah, who prayed that they might die, with the willingness of Paul to live and suffer. (Num. xi, 15; I Kings xix, 4; Job vi, 8; Jonah iv, 8.)

Compare the conduct of Joseph's brethren and that of Paul and Silas under the same outward conditions, and we see the effects of good and bad consciences in similar circumstances. (Gen. xlii, 21; Acts xvi, 25. See also Isaiah lvii, 21, with II Cor. i, 12.)

This work of gathering instructions from examples in Scripture may be greatly extended and largely profitable in giving us a better knowledge of human nature and of our own hearts and the duties of life. We may also learn the probable effects of particular circumstances upon ourselves by the study of their effects upon the conduct of others under similar circumstances. H.

Notice.

To the Auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South—

DEAR SISTERS: You are aware that Miss Gordon, of Columbus, Miss., has offered herself to the Woman's Board of Missions, to go to China, and has been accepted. As she goes from the North Mississippi Conference Society, I feel that each auxiliary would like to aid in her outfit, for which at least $200 will be necessary. I call attention to this now, that all the funds may be in hand at the meeting of our Conference Society in Grenada, which will probably be some time in June or July.

Pastors will please make a note of this, so that in case the ADVOCATE does not reach the presidents of the auxiliaries in their charges, they may be notified of this request.

MRS. C. N. TERRY,
Pres. N. Miss. Conf. W. M. S.

A man may transgress as truly by holding his tongue as by speaking unadvisedly with his lips.—Spurgeon.

(Nashville Christian Advocate.)

Let it be understood on all sides that in the South any man's room is more desired than his company when he comes to subvert our Sabbath, or otherwise demoralize our people. We can afford to be poor, but we can not afford to be corrupted. If there is any people on the face of the earth who have exalted poverty to the level of the fine arts, it is the Southern people, who in direst straits have still cultivated the purest sentiments. We want none of what Mr. Matthew Arnold calls "beastly prosperity," and in the simplicity of this faith our people should be taught to continue to walk.

(Alabama Christian Advocate.)

No question that woman's place has not been fully defined. She has not yet "done what she could." Too many restrictions have been put upon her movements, and her work has been confined within too narrow a circle. But prejudices are giving away. She can now do almost any kind of office work, edit papers, write books, manage schools, keep store—all without either losing her self-respect or forfeiting the esteem of good people. These things she may do, if not prevented by the duties of her home. But the home she must take care of. When she abandons that—all is lost. That is her place. God made her for it, and qualified her to meet all its demands.

(Evangelical Messenger.)

Leaders of the hosts of God must have this sacred Christian passion of enthusiasm. Without it the preacher is like a stove without fire, a lamp without flame. Truth from cold lips may be beautiful as crystals of snow, but it neither kindles nor warms. A live coal from God's altar touched the lips of the seraphic Isaiah. Fire flamed visibly over the heads of the apostles, at Pentecost—the divine symbol of inspired enthusiasm. The baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire crowned the early church. This same fire and power and contagious enthusiasm is the need of the church to-day. Without it there must be coldness and torpor and failure. With it there will be the old-time warmth and energy and conquering power.

(Methodist Advance.)

There is nothing seriously the matter with the South—the grandest country in the world—and nothing the matter with the times. The trouble is with the people, and is generally home-made trouble. Invincible ignorance, insupportable laziness, confirmed dishonesty, and meanness of spirit, are the diseases that prostrate society and fill the land with discontent. Are the people getting in the notion to know more and do more and be better than they have been? If they are, then there are better times, not ahead, but at hand. The day a man determines upon such a reform as this, gets brighter to him the moment this noble determination is born. The brightest day on earth is cloudy to a man of a mean, sour spirit.

(Advance.)

Dear leader of the prayer meeting: Do not be impatient; do not be nervous; do not talk too much, nor too often; do not say whatever happens to occur to you; do not make any impertinent remarks, such as may divert the mind from the main thought of the evening; do not consider every moment wasted that does not happen to be "occupied;" do not indulge in too much importuning; do not seem over-anxious to elicit mere outward expressions; do not try to do what it is not your business to do, what it is impossible for another to do, but must be done by each individual for himself, or must be done by the Holy Spirit himself. One may safely trust the truth, trust the Spirit, and trust him who has said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in their midst." To lead a prayer meeting well, that is a sacred art; and, too, there are many people who have it.

(St. Louis Christian Advocate.)

The heavenly Father does not do for us what he has given us power to do for ourselves. Thousands of professed Christians do not keep the Sabbath as they should, nor do they, in this respect, govern their families as they should. There are in these United States some twelve million men and women connected with the several Protestant Churches—one-fifth of the federal population. Add to these several millions who though not members of any church, yet acknowledge their obligations to observe the Sabbath, and we have a mighty army. What are all these doing to secure a proper observance of the day? It will do no good to sit down and cry over Sabbath desecration, and nothing more; nor need ye pray about it unless our spirit and conduct correspond with the nature and character of that for which we pray. Prayers are right and necessary; but the Master said, "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say."

THE LIGHT THAT IS FELT.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

A tender child of summers three,
Seeking her little bed at night,
Paused on the dark stairs timidly.
"Oh mother, take my hand," said she,
"And then the dark will be all light."

We older children grope our way
From dark behind to dark before;
And only when our hands we lay,
Dear Lord, in Thine, the night is day,
And there is darkness nevermore.

Reach downward to the sunless days,
Wherein our guides are blind as we,
And faith is small and hope delays;
Take Thou the hands of prayer we raise,
And let us feel the light of Thee.

The Sunday-School Lesson for April 10, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

JOSEPH MALIGNED, IMPRISONED, EXALTED.

Genesis xli, 38-48.

GOLDEN TEXT: Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass.—Psa. xxxvii, 5.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

The last lesson left Joseph just entered into Egypt, the victim of his brothers' cruelty, the slave of Potiphar, the child of Providence. His condition at the profligate and tyrannical court of the Pharaohs was well calculated to take all the spirit out of him. How could a slave expect happiness or preferment? Each day and hour his life itself hung suspended upon the whim of a capricious and unscrupulous tyrant. But Joseph indulged in no vain repinings over his lot. His duty lay in doing heartily whatever his hand found to do. He performed his work so faithfully, so successfully, that his master was convinced "that the Lord was with him," and "he put all that he had into his hand." Remarkable responsibility to be placed in the hands of a slave and a foreigner!

"The Lord blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake," and everything seemed hopeful; but in this world of wicked surroundings it sometimes happens that the exercise of virtue and integrity bring their possessors into deep trouble. Potiphar's wife enticed Joseph to fall into grievous sin. He resisted, and furnished a record which until this day proclaims him as belonging to the highest type of humanity. He was cast into a prison through a base falsehood of the unscrupulous woman.

Here was an occasion for temptation to come in as a flood and sweep away the faith of God's presence and providence. Purity and truth seemed to have no protector, and the brazen front of wickedness no one to make it quail. But Joseph's hold upon his God was not to be shaken loose by such experiences. He, doubtless, felt the effort to sully his reputation with a keenness far greater than one whose character is less pure. Prison walls and prison routine must have been exceedingly irksome to one capable of administering an empire. But the same motive inspired him here as before—that is, perform the duty at hand, and each other duty as it came up in its turn. As a consequence, he arose to the highest favor with the keeper of the prison, and all things were put under his hand, "because the Lord was with him."

Once a dreamer, Joseph became now the interpreter of dreams, and his explanation of the dreams of the baker and butler was literally verified—the baker being hanged and the butler restored to his place.

Soon after this, Pharaoh had his memorable dreams about the fat and the lean kine and about the full and the blasted ears of wheat. None of the magicians or wise men of Egypt could interpret them. The butler told the king of Joseph's remarkable fulfillment of dreams in the prison. He was sent for, and declared the dreams to be one, indicating seven years of plenty and seven years of famine. He counseled Pharaoh to prepare in the years of plenty for the years of famine.

COMMENTARY ON THE LESSON.

Verse 38. Though Pharaoh was the impersonation of defiance to God's command, yet he knew that "a man in whom the Spirit of God is" could be trusted with the most important and difficult business. A parallel passage is II Chronicles xv, 9—"For they fell out to him in abundance, when they saw that the Lord his God was with him."

Verses 39, 40, 41, 42. Pharaoh attributed the wisdom and discretion of Joseph to the inspiration of God, and for that reason placed him over all his house. He had been appointed to the first place in Potiphar's house, the first place in the prison, and now to the first place in the populous and powerful realm of the Pharaohs. If a man is true to the Spirit's impulses in all things, he will be in demand; and if he have commanding talents, as a rule, he will go to a post of honor. Pharaoh "took off his ring from his hand and put it upon Joseph's hand," thus empowering him to give the official seal to his acts. He also "arrayed him in vestures of fine linen," indicating a position of royalty; in addition, he "put a chain of gold about his neck," a badge of office and, perhaps, an emblem of the close connection between all the branches of the government. This investiture proclaimed before all the people

JOSEPH, THE PRIME MINISTER.

Verses 43, 44. Pharaoh reserved to himself alone the chief place, causing Joseph to "ride in the second chariot," commanding heralds to cry before him, "Bow the knee," and investing him with supreme authority—"Without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt."

Verse 45. "Zaphnath-paaneah"—by no means an euphonious name. Abstractly considered, it was an intolerable burden; but, taken in either one of the various meanings given to it, it is the synonym of a rare record, as "revealer of secrets," "savior of the land," "preserver of the age." Asenath, the wife given by Pharaoh to Joseph, could not claim to possess the qualifications sought by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob for the wives of their sons—the progenitors of the Savior—being the daughter of a priest of the sun; yet marrying him into so distinguished a family was of a piece with honors previously bestowed upon him, and the connecting him with the priesthood was a tribute to his piety.

Verses 46, 47, 48. Joseph being seventeen years of age when he came down into Egypt, and being thirteen years a slave, now entered upon his responsible career in the full-rounded strength of his young manhood. As he had predicted, the earth brought forth handfuls, and, as a skillful commissary general, he "went through all the land" and established depots in every city for the grain produced in the contiguous fields.

"Men of Israel, Help!"

MR. EDITOR: I beg space enough in your columns to present the case of our church in Oxford, Miss., to the generous favor of your readers. Our people in Oxford need help and deserve it. They deserve it because (1) their enterprise is worthy and appeals to every Methodist in Mississippi, and because (2) they have first themselves given of their own substance all that they feel able to give. What they are moving to do is expressed in the following statement:

"First, a brick vestibule and belfry, to serve the purpose of an entry and north-wind breaker; second, stained-glass windows to make the house lighter, the light more pleasant, and to dispense with the present banging shutters; third, to lower the floor towards the rear, so as to put the audience and speaker into better relations; fourth, new pews to get rid of the present instruments of torture; fifth, to re-roof the building; sixth, to repair the walls where they are somewhat cracked toward the tops; seventh, to panel the ceiling and finish the walls with a little ornamental moldings, and finally, to give the building somewhat more of a modern appearance, attractive style and substantial comfort."

The good people who have entered upon this work have long suffered from the discomfort due to the existing condition of their house of worship, and the work of our church there has been seriously hindered for years from that cause. For three successive winters of this writer's pastorate there the congregations were almost lost to us from the lack of essential comfort in that house. A temporary, but inefficient remedy was devised. Our people there have lived in financial straits; in recent years they have been heavily taxed in buying a parsonage and in providing more adequately for their preacher. Now they come forward with resolute hearts and liberal hands to put the Lord's house in suitable condition of comfort and of architectural taste for his worship. This is due the Master's name, his cause, the Methodism they represent, and the influence they wield over the salvation of the young men and young women who go from our homes to the State University.

A plan of the work to be done was recently submitted to builders for their bids. Two bids were made, both practically the same, putting the cost at $4,500, which is a thousand dollars more than what was supposed the cost would be. Our people there did not intend to appeal to others beyond their local Boards, nor do I know that they intend now to do so. They pressed themselves up to a subscription of $3,000; that is valid. They thought they had the promise of $500 from the Board of Church Extension; but they are now sure of only $200 from that source. This leaves a lack of $1,300 to meet the demand of the bids. These bids have been made upon close figures. The plan submitted for the improvement is as limited and modest as the real interests of our work there will allow. Those who have given will give again; but they feel inadequate to the present demand, and yet are unwilling to mar their work by narrowing the plan. They have resolved to struggle for the completed whole.

Now, the church in Oxford is the representative in a certain way of Methodism in Mississippi. We are judged of in a degree by what is seen there, and our power for spiritual good will be modified by the material and social instrumentalities possessed there. The Methodist young men and women who go there to the University ought to find there the best conditions for their denominational satisfaction and for their spiritual nurture. The house which is to undergo the proposed refitting was built nearly forty years ago. The foundation and walls are of the best brick and laid with a master's hand; but time and use have rendered it imperative that the work projected shall be done at once. Now, inasmuch as our Methodist people throughout the State will go on sending their sons and daughters there for education in numbers such as to make a large proportion of the students of the University, is it not proper that these Methodists shall take part in providing for the needs of these students in respect to their Christian life? That house is rich in the memories of sainted dead who helped to put it there; let us re-endow it and reconsecrate it, and send it on to the future on its mission of comforting the tempted and burdened, and of meeting the laudable religious aspirations of the young who may come to worship and learn at that altar. Who does not wish to have part in the stream of consecrated intellectual and spiritual life that shall be nourished there, and then flow out over the land to water all human growths with the life of God?

Let me urge whoever reads these lines to send something to help this cause in Oxford. I am sure Bishop Galloway can endorse what I have here said. It will be eminently befitting, if every Methodist alumnus of the University, or who has been a student there, will send his loyal greetings and blessings to the church where he used to worship the God of his fathers. Let each one give what he can, whether little or much.

"Let each his friendly aid afford
And feel his brother's care."

Contributions can be sent to Hon. Edward Mayes or the Rev. E. B. Ramsey, Oxford, Miss.

Ministers and the Sabbath.

MR. EDITOR: It would seem that the fact that Dr. Fitzgerald did not take that Sunday night train has produced considerable surprise. Is this surprise to be indicative of the conscience of the church on the subject of Sunday traveling? Why should it be thought incredible that our chief editor is a moral man, and, therefore, will not be guilty of immorality by transgressing the fourth commandment? For one, this scribe would have been sadly surprised had Dr. Fitzgerald acted otherwise than he did. Had he left Montgomery on Sunday night, some of us would, to a great extent, have lost our keen relish for those sparkling paragraphs which are wont to come from his gifted pen. Has it come to pass that for a minister of the gospel to observe the holy Sabbath is a matter of surprise?

Mr. Editor, is not this Sunday traveling a growing evil? I know a beautiful little Southern city, where, about two years since, all the Protestant ministers, colored as well, agreed upon a simultaneous proclamation in all their pulpits on the subject of Sabbath observance; and in order to more effectually prepare their congregations for the subject, they circulated five thousand circulars setting forth the points for discussion. The appointed day came on. It was a bright and beautiful day. God and nature seemed to smile approvingly upon the righteous project. Congregations were unusually large. Fine impression in favor of Sabbath observance was produced upon almost the entire community. The ministers had rebuked, with special emphasis, Sunday traveling. Next Sabbath morning the four o'clock train brought into the city one of our most distinguished D. D.'s—a brother, for many consecutive times a member of General Conference, and is now in high official connection in the church. He filled the Methodist pulpit at eleven A. M., and preached a fine sermon which delighted the audience. That afternoon, at six o'clock, the Doctor bade us farewell and took train for home. The good people of that city felt very much like "their own familiar friend, in whom they had trusted, who had eaten of their bread, had lifted up his heel against them."

Bishop McTyeire, upon the floor of the great Ecumenical Conference, sounded the alarm when he said: "But, sir, it knocks a great deal of good preaching in the head on the Sabbath day when a minister of the gospel, without urgent necessity, is seen to take the railroad train on Sunday morning." There is a very hurtful influence going out from this practice upon the part of some of our ministers. Some presiding elders that I could mention are rather too fond of taking train for home after the communion service on quarterly meeting occasions. Some circuits that are ridden by use of the steam horse are suffering from the same cause. Expel members for improprieties, and promote and honor ministers guilty of habitually violating the great moral law! "A house divided against itself can not stand." "A little evil destroyeth much good." One building up; another tearing down! Some of our own household are threatening us with a European Sabbath.

A Proposition to Support a Missionary from the North Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR: I notice that several of the Conferences have equipped a missionary and sent him forth and guaranteed his support while he remained in the mission field. It occurs to me that the North Mississippi Conference might equip, send out and support, at least, one missionary. I do not think that we are so much lacking in Christian enterprise, or want of zeal in the cause of missions, as that no special effort has been made among our people to send some one from our own Conference. While our people may contribute freely to support those missionaries sent from other Conferences, I doubt not but that they will feel a deeper interest in one sent from our own Conference, and that it will induce them to contribute more freely to the cause of missions. They will feel more closely identified with the worker and the work. While now they have a general interest, to send one from our own Conference will give them a special interest in the work to which he is assigned.

Well, I do not know what the Conference is going to do, but hope it will take steps immediately to get up the money, and as early as possible start our missionary on his way to carry salvation to the benighted heathen. Now, I have a plan. I want us to send one from the North Mississippi Conference by private donations. I wish to say to the good people within the bounds of our Conference that I will be one of one hundred to pay ten dollars annually to support a missionary in any field that the Board may elect. Where are the ninety-nine? Who will assist in this great work for God and souls? Do not begin to say that ten dollars is too much. Our money is not our own; it belongs to God, and it is needed to carry the gospel to those that are in darkness and are asking for light and life at your hands. We do not prohibit larger donations. Give us God has prospered you, and put it into your heart to contribute to save your benighted brother. Neither will smaller contributions be despised. We most earnestly pray that God may put it into your hearts to assist us in sending one from our own Conference immediately.

You can correspond with me at Pontotoc, Pontotoc county, Miss.

Letter from a Supernumerary.

It might be interesting to some of the readers of the ADVOCATE to have some notes from this part of the work. It fell to our lot to be placed on the supernumerary list at our last Conference. We moved to this place for residence, and met with a very hearty welcome by our good pastor, Rev. J. W. Bell, and his kind people. Other brethren have written of storms and poundings; but there has been almost a constant gale here ever since our move. All this, too, from a people upon whom we have no claims. May the Lord reward them according to their deeds! We have just closed a revival meeting here. Bro. Bell had the assistance of Bros. Jones, Gains and this writer. We did not realize such a general interest as was desired; but still there was much good accomplished, both in the conversion of souls and the resuscitation of church members. We all appreciate the labors of our much-beloved pastor, and doubt not that the good seed he is sowing will some day bring a harvest of souls into the Master's garner. My health has so improved as to make it safe for me to be doing some work. You shall hear from me occasionally. I expect to try to do some good work for the ADVOCATE this year. It ought to be in every family. We have sickness in our family at this writing. Pray for us.

Yours, fraternally,

E. G. KILGORE.

From the Work.

REVIVAL AT BAY ST. LOUIS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I think proper to give a more extended report of our revival in Bay St. Louis. We are all thankful to our heavenly Father for his gracious visitation so long desired. We have long felt the need of a deeper piety and a more unqualified loyalty to the Savior in this part of our Conference bounds. I stated to you in my article of December last that we had had a small church building in Bay St. Louis for twenty-five or thirty years, and that we had lately begun to gather a little strength; our influence was being felt in the community. From eighteen members, which I found there in 1884, we had increased to thirty-six, thus increasing one hundred per cent. in three years. Bay St. Louis was an uninviting and an unpromising field of labor to our church. Romanism had long held sway in the community. The Sabbath was desecrated, given to pleasure, amusement and dissipation after morning mass; dram drinking and drunkenness prevailed. The Bible was not read, and to all appearance God was worshiped less than idols. Gambling in some sort and dram selling were resorted to to sustain the institutions of the church. Thoughtful religious people were few and far between. By many censure of the church was dreaded far more than sin, and the fear of purgatory deterred the people from exercising freedom of thought or searching for truth. Superstition rests yet like a pall upon many of the people. In this state of things the progress of the gospel was slow; but we had a few earnest workers. Men and women labored and prayed in hope. We knew our weakness and from whence came our strength. We needed also a fearless, bold leader. Such a man God sent us in Bro. J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference. We had prayed, some of us, for just such a man. On my return from Conference I found him already there. I had sought help during the years preceding from New Orleans and other places; but none of the brethren found it convenient to come to my aid. Bro. Bowen came in search of health for his wife. Why did he not go somewhere else? Did God send him here just at the right time? Dr. Abbey, in his green old age and manly strength and vigor of thought, was with us. Our meetings commenced on January 16, and continued four weeks. The number of attendants gradually increased from the first, until the house was crowded with eager hearers. On the twenty-fifth several persons applied for membership, and on February 6 were received into the church. In four weeks we had gathered forty-six into our fold. Most of these people had passed from death to life. A more willing, ready set of workers than our members there can hardly be found. The new converts talked to their friends and brought them to the house of God. Some of those that united with us came from other churches, uniting and working with us until they shall have regular services in their own churches. We hope, however, that they will remain with us; we think they can do most good where they are. Some are converts from Roman Catholicism, and are now studying the Bible with great delight. Indeed, the Bible and its teachings are the common talk of the town, and the interest awakened is remarkable. I think this work of God most wonderful, and it confirms me in the opinion that we have not hitherto appreciated the importance of gospel work along this coast. Here the question arises, When will Romanism give up its superstitions, and cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord, and when will the Christian world learn and mark the distinction between Romanism and Christianity? We ask the prayers of all Christian people, that this good work may continue and increase, until superstition shall be driven from our midst, wickedness and worldliness cease to prevail and the blessed gospel of the Redeemer reign supreme.

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I desire to let the friends of Zion know what the good Lord is doing for us in Ocean Springs charge. Our first quarterly meeting came off on the twelfth instant. Our presiding elder was with us, and has labored faithfully and efficiently. I am happy to state that we are in the midst of a precious work of grace. Such wonderful manifestations I have seldom witnessed. I have no doubt that God intends to conquer and take to himself this whole gulf-coast country, if his people are true to his gracious cause placed in their hands. Our presiding elder's preaching was unctious, and has been a blessing to our town. We take great pleasure also in acknowledging the able assistance of Dr. R. Abbey, and last, but not least, the labors of Bro. James A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference. He is a precious man, exercising a peculiar fascination over the minds and hearts of his hearers, drawing them almost without their own volition to the house of prayer. We have many congregations that have promised to pray for us. So far we have received 15 members. Many good wishes for the prosperity of the ADVOCATE.

G. F. THOMPSON.

MARCH 18, 1887.

SOUTH BOSSIER, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Our first Quarterly Conference has been held by our new presiding elder, Bro. Cassity, who is proving himself to be a man of executive ability and is alive to his work. Our congregations are good, Sunday schools are being reorganized, prayer meetings are going on. We have a good prayer meeting at Doyline. We have three Woman's Missionary Societies now on the work. The last was organized at Doyline, with the following officers: President, Mrs. S. S. Bates; vice-president, Miss Ticia Doyle; recording secretary, Miss Athlene Tompkins; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Sue E. Magee; treasurer, Miss Jessie Doyl.

Our collections are good so far. We are preparing to take our missionary collections in April and May. We are doing what we can for the ADVOCATE and Centenary College.

Faithfully yours in Christ,

HENRY S. JOHNS.

MR. EDITOR: Please say in the ADVOCATE that I will (D. V.) attend the Jackson District Conference at Edwards, March 31, and the Brookhaven District Conference, at Brookhaven, April 7, to represent all of the publishing interests of the church. I will have on hand a large and varied assortment of books, tracts, etc., and will be prepared to take orders for all good books and papers. I have been sick a few days, but am now convalescing and hope to be up and out again soon. Any church news of special interest in these quarters.

Marvelous Changes.

WHAT THE FUTURE WILL BE TO THOSE WHO REFUSE TO BELIEVE.

Is this country unconsciously undergoing a wonderful change, is the change to take place before we are aware of the fact, and when it has taken place will we wonder why we did not see it before it was too late?

Those that see the changes early avail themselves early, and thereby receive benefit.

The shrewd iron man sees the iron interest transferred from Pittsburg and Pennsylvania to Birmingham, Alabama, and in his far-sightedness sees the furnaces in Pennsylvania torn down and deserted for this new and prolific field. It is claimed by the iron men of Alabama that the low price at which iron can be produced there will revolutionize the iron interests of the world.

We have seen the grain-growing centers of this country shifted to the West. We have seen the pork-packing industry flit from Cincinnati to Chicago, and from thence to Kansas City and Omaha. Southern cotton mills undersell New England and American markets, and challenge the world.

We have seen and are seeing all this take place before our eyes, and know that other changes are taking place equally as prominent, and we wonder as we behold them. Ten years ago the insurance companies only required an analysis of the fluids when they were taking insurance for very large amounts. To-day no first-class company will insure any amount unless they have a rigid analysis of the fluids passed, and if any traces of certain disorders are apparent, the application is rejected. In their reports they show that the death of sixty of every 100 people in this country, is due either directly or indirectly to such disorders. The Brompton Hospital for Consumptives, London, England, reports that sixty of every 100 victims of consumption also have serious disorders of the kidneys.

Among scientists for the treatment of this dread malady the question is being discussed:

"Is not this disorder the real cause of consumption?"

Ten years ago the microscope was something seldom found in a physician's office; now every physician of standing has one and seldom visits his patients without calling for a sample of fluids for examination.

Why is all this? Is it possible that we of the present generation are to die of diseases caused by kidney disorders? or shall we master the cause by Warner's safe cure, the only recognized specific, and thus remove the effects? It is established beyond a doubt that a very large percentage of deaths in this country are traceable to diseased kidneys. For years the proprietors of Warner's safe cure have been insisting that there is no sound health when the kidneys are diseased, and they enthusiastically press their specific for this terrible disorder upon public attention. We are continually hearing its praises sounded.

This means wonders!

Can not the proprietors of this great remedy, who have been warning us of the danger, tell us how to avoid a disease that at first is so unimportant, and is so fatal in its termination? Are we to hope against hope, and wait without our reward?

The most significant of all changes, however, that we of to-day can note is this radical change of view to which the public has been educated: It was formerly thought that the kidneys were of very small importance; to-day, we believe, it is generally admitted that there can be no such thing as sound health in any organ if they are in the least degree deranged.

Have You Saved Anyone?

Many people are being saved these weeks, and being added unto the churches. These precious people have been saved, humanly speaking, through some earnest effort on the part of some earnest Christian worker. Now, friends, let us drop this question into our hearts. Have you saved anyone? We mean, of course, as an agent of the Holy Spirit, who desires to use every child of God.

What a searching power there is in the question. An interrogation walks into a man's life as a lighted candle comes into a room. If it be empty, the moment the candle is within its emptiness is revealed. If it be furnished, you see the beauty of the furnishing. Let this question be as a candle and a torch to your life. Let it come in and throw its life around. The question asked is: "Have you saved anybody?" Is there any living soul that looks upon you as its savior? any wretched one; anyone that was starving; anyone that was on the verge of despair; anyone that had fallen; anyone that was rude, wicked, coarse? that looked upon you, that remembered your name, and says: "That man brought me to Jesus! That woman led me to Christ!"

Look within your bosom, and answer truly. Is there within your heart the savior instinct? Have you the Divine characteristic, the heavenly ambition and mood? Have you the joy of the heavenly ones when a sinner repents? Do you fairly represent the class to which you claim to belong?

The Scriptures say: "He that doeth the truth comes to the light." If a man feeds the hungry, clothes the naked, takes the stranger by the hand, and converts the sinner from the error of his ways, he will never lapse from the fervor of a religious life, nor fall into negations and semi-skepticisms.

In view of these things, therefore, suppose we apply this test of saving people in the measurement of our piety. The markings of this rule are deeply cut, plainly seen, and its decisions can not be mistaken. If you have saved anybody, anybody, well and good. If you haven't saved anybody—haven't saved anybody—what then?

Amid all the fine pleasures of life there is one that is finer than all; and amid all the joys that bloom in the landscape of our days, there is one whose flower stands pre-eminent; whose beauty is seen afar, and whose fragrance fills the air. It is the pleasure of bringing back some one that has gone astray; the joy of knowing that you have led one sinner to repentance. There are pleasures that last but an hour. There are joys that fill but the circle of a moment. There are delights that rise with the sun and go down with the same, leaving darkness, and it may be a darkness that has not a star. But the pleasure of bringing a man back from his evil ways lasts with our lasting; and the joy of finding one who has wandered far off, been bitten by wolves, and lies dying—the joy of finding that wanderer, lifting him to your bosom, and bringing him back to the Father's fold, is a joy that neither rises nor sets with the sun, but stands fixed like an orb that moves not, and whose beams never fade in the firmament of life everlasting. For this is the joy of heaven, and those that are heavenly.—D. D. MacLaurin.

You will have no use for spectacles if you use Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Eye Salve; it removes the film and scum which accumulates on the eye balls, subdues inflammation, cools and soothes the irritated nerves, strengthens weak and failing sight. 25c. a box.

Walking in Religion.

"They shall walk and not faint." Now, walking is our ordinary mode of motion; and the promise here is, that in "the daily round, the common task," we shall be so upheld by the Divine arm, and so guided by the Holy Spirit, as to go on steadily and unwearidly in the faithful discharge of ordinary duty. But is there the same need for Divine power here? Are we not quite equal to the ordinary work of life? Can we not be honest, sober, truthful, and diligent by the mere exercise of our own native power? Does not the prophet make a slip in rhetoric, as well as in fact, when he closes his climax by this reference to work so truly commonplace? But let us think a moment. After all, walking is not so very easy. To walk in the market-place without a trace of dishonesty or deceit; to walk in society without a stain of evil-speaking or detraction; to walk in the high places of fame and influence without a touch of pride or vanity; to walk in the midst of prosperity, and yet keep the affections set on things above; to walk in the midst of trouble, and yet keep the spirit ever serene and trustful; to see others on every side plunging into this indulgence and that, yet deny one's self and take up the cross and follow Christ; after all, is this so easy? Who is sufficient for these things? How is such a walk to be maintained but by very close and earnest waiting on the Lord? By daily prayer for daily grace; by using our means of grace, public, private, and social, as channels of communication with the unseen—real wells of salvation, from which we seek to draw the water of life, enabling us, whatever we do, to "do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." And this waiting on the Lord must be a habit of our life, a habit of every day. The food that sustains our body to-day does not sustain it for more than the day, and must be followed by a similar supply to-morrow. The grace that renews our spiritual strength is subject to the same law. "Give us this day our daily bread," is as applicable to the spiritual as to the natural life. "Pray without ceasing," must be our rule. "Abide in me and I in you; as the branch can not bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye, except ye abide in me."—Prof. Blaikie.

Reading with Prayer.

Prof. Ernest C. Richardson, of Hartford, closes an interesting article in the Congregationalist with these remarks:

"Lamb, writing of 'Grace before meat,' asks well, 'Why have we none for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton, a grace before Shakespeare, a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the "Fairy Queen?"' So it is true that the inclusive principle in the art of reading is reading with prayer. This is no imaginary or conventional statement, but a fundamental, tested truth. The very attitude of mind of prayer—humility, seeking and sympathetic responsiveness to the truth—is the acknowledged attitude for gaining truth. The Spirit, whose gift are all true ideas (unless some one will say whence ideas come), only gives to those who humbly search, but richly gives to every one who asks.

"Reading with prayer, one's intellect is kindled electrically, by a page of Spencer, to a keen and intense joy in material truth, and soothed again into quiet, tender, peaceful joy, as over a page of Burroughs' 'beauty through all his senses steals,' and all unrest is stilled. And reading thus the truths of human life, the heart broadens to a new tenderness of friendship, joy in men and sympathy for helpless passion, over the pages of Shakespeare, or Robert Browning, or Blackmore; lifts to a stronger, nobler joy in truth over his Plato; and swells again into a joy unspeakable and full of glory, calmer, gentler, deeper than anything he has dreamed of, as he reads in the pages of the Apostle John the record of his Master's love and suffering."

ALWAYS YOUR BEST.—A man's work is always of more importance to himself than to others. Whether it be teaching, literature, art, or some form of practical endeavor, he is more concerned than those who listen to his words, study his works, look upon his pictures. They may reject him, pass him, ignore him; but he can neither reject nor ignore himself. The minister who "preaches down" to his congregation, the artist who sacrifices his ideal for the sake of immediate popularity, the writer who trims his truth to catch the currents of passing interest—all these defraud others, but they defraud themselves still more. A man's work is a part of himself; it is a fruit of his living; it takes something from his life. Those about him may lose much if he gives something less than the best, but his own loss is always the greatest. A man's work is part of the return he makes to God; if he chooses to pay God in inferior coin, he debases the circulation and others suffer, but the guilt is his alone. —Christian Union.

Briefs.

There has been laid upon our table an address in regard to a Home for the Aged and Infirm Colored People in Louisiana. From this address we learn that there are about 700 of such persons in this State "in the extreme of indigence, infirmity and decrepitude." To assist such persons, the Louisiana Homestead and Aid Association is undertaking to "devise ways and means to procure a home, where they can be comfortably maintained and supported." The purpose is to "purchase a farm near this city, and stock it and run it for the use and benefit of such poor persons." An appeal is made to the entire community for the furtherance of this laudable object.

A correspondent of the Times-Democrat gives some interesting statistics in regard to the inmates of the Insane Asylum at Jackson, La.

Of the inmates of the asylum, 39 are under 20 years; 109 from 20 to 30; 96 from 30 to 40; 82 from 40 to 50; 46 from 50 to 60; 15 from 60 to 70; 9 from 70 to 80; 2 from 80 to 100.

Of the nativity of patients, 245 are from Louisiana, and nearly 200 from the various States of the Union, England, Ireland, Denmark, Germany, Barbadoes, France, China, Italy, Austria, Belgium and Spain. Of the parishes of the State, 218 are entered as from Orleans, but many of them are foreigners and natives of other States who land in the city, and coming directly from there, are credited to that parish. Every parish in the State is represented in the asylum except Richland—many of the parishes sending only one. Of the occupations, the largest number of insane are taken from the ranks of laborers, 139; next housekeepers and clerks, 16 each; then farmers, 11; planters, 8; tailors, 5. Almost every known profession and trade is represented. Of the civil conditions, 199 are single, 163 married, 62 widows, 7 widowers and 1 divorced.

Of the forms of insanity, 187 are chronic mania, 95 acute mania, 46 chronic dementia, 24 senile dementia, 19 acute dementia, 37 melancholy, chronic and acute, 17 general paralysis, 16 imbecility, 9 idiocy.

Of the duration of insanity, the longest period was nearly fifty years, and the shortest under one month. The average duration is about ten years.

Of the causes of insanity, by far the greatest number is not stated; 43 resulted from epilepsy; 22 from religious excitement; 20 from old age; 18 from alcohol; 19 from ill-health; 10 were hereditary; 13 were congenital; 6 were from disappointment. Small numbers each were from various other causes, which are many.

Of the entire number, 417 are supported by the State, and only 19 by the family. Of the number of inmates 295 are colored.

THE VALIDITY OF WILLS.—It seems to be a difficult matter for very rich men to make a valid will in these days. Some of the wisest lawyers, who have drawn up wills for hundreds of testators, fail in making their own wills. We have heard it said that one of the chief justices of Louisiana made a sad failure when he executed his own will. And now, according to the papers, it appears that so wise a man as Mr. Tilden made a will that is likely to be broken. Mrs. A. T. Stewart's will is to be contested, and so on of many more. The moral of all this is, that the people ought to donate their money while they are living. This plan has so much to commend it to the sober sense and sound reason, that the wonder is that rich benevolent people have not always adopted it.

"Your Paper."

A good brother writes, "I will do all I can for your paper." We like the brother's resolution, and if he only puts it in operation, we shall certainly be grateful. Nobody can do a grander thing than to "do all he can." The most enduring monument ever reared—a monument whose stability will not be jostled by the trembling earth in its last throes, and whose peak already touches the eternal sky—was reared upon the occasion of a young woman simply doing "what she could." Let the brother carry out his resolution, and the ADVOCATE will hand his name down to posterity as one of the "few immortal names, that were not born to die." In the meantime, let the brother remember that every earnest lick struck for the ADVOCATE is a blow that helps to secure his own support. It looks sometimes as if the brethren were afraid that subscriptions to the paper would be that much from their own salary. This is a great mistake, proved to be such by the men who work faithfully for the paper.

We do not like the brother's phrase, "your paper." It looks as if the brother thought he was working specially for the editor. This is no more the editor's or publisher's paper than it is our correspondents'. We have no more right in it than our brother has. The paper belongs to the patronizing Conferences, of which the editor is only one little unit. In Mississippi and Louisiana there are 81,944 Methodists, besides the traveling preachers, and the editor's right in the paper amounts to just one eighty-one thousand nine hundred and forty-fourth part of the whole. So the brother had better say, "our paper," and change his resolution to, "do all he can for our paper." People generally work for their own unless they are afflicted with "constitutional tiredness."

Perhaps if our good brother had known the paper was as much his as the editor's, he would have had no occasion to write this sentence: "I have done nothing as yet in getting new subscribers." There is a dim memory coming up from the days of our presiding eldership that gives a mournful meaning to that wo-begone phrase, "Nothing as yet." Alas, for the glorious opportunities that have been carefully wrapped in the melancholy winding-sheet of that phrase and consigned to that grave whose doors will never open to resurrection power! Three or four of the best working months of the year gone forever, and "nothing as yet" done in procuring new subscribers.

The editor thinks the brother has not awakened one moment too soon. It is a sad confession he makes of the hold this paper has upon his conscience. And we fear that there are others in the same category, only they have not made confession of the fact. The brother's words—"nothing as yet" for the paper—has been continued by laymen from different sections of our territory, who have said in this office: "The preachers, many of them, are not doing their duty by the paper." Brethren, the editor is here as your agent; put here by the votes of your representatives, and he has the right to expect your co-operation. It is impossible for him to do the work of the office and at the same time travel all over the country drumming up subscribers. Pulpit talks will not do what ought to be done unless backed by earnest and persistent private, personal solicitations. This paper is the chosen organ of 81,944 Methodists. Of that number how many subscribers ought it to have?

It is said that Mr. Talmage has over 4,000 communicants in his church. We don't believe there is any use for such big churches.

Regeneration.

HOW AND BY WHOM ARE WE REGENERATED?

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

It is not a work wrought in one man by another through example, teaching, or persuasion; nor is it a change brought about by ourselves by some sudden or gradual action of our wills. It is not the result of one man acting on another, no matter what his official or sacerdotal position may be.

"No bleeding bird, nor bleeding beast,
Nor hyssop branch, nor sprinkling priest,
Nor running brook, nor flood nor sea
Can wash the dismal stain away."

We can not change nature—ours nor any other. We may by abuse and oppression dwarf an oak, but we can never reduce and change it into a bramble; we can by fertilizers and high cultivation develop and improve a bramble, but we can never exalt it into an oak. So we can not change our natures. We can change our associations, we can change our habits, we can change our opinions even; but we can never change our natures. We can by abuse and neglect degrade our natures, we can by culture develop them; but the essence, the quality, of our natures we can never change. By long discipline considerable self-control may be acquired, evil tendencies may be repressed and held in abeyance, precisely as one may adjust a filtering apparatus to a fountain so as to purify the outflowing water, but the fountain will remain unchanged. The Ethiopian can not change his skin, nor the leopard his spots. Nature always remains what it is until the Lord and Master of nature renews or changes its quality. It is not by works of righteousness we are saved; but according to his mercy he saves us by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost. We are born again, not of blood, nor of the will of man, but of God. Baptism is a solemn, lively and appropriate sign of an inward renewing; but it is not the purifying the heart—it is only the answer of a good conscience, as the fruit of obedience. Various instrumentalities—as prayer, searching the Scriptures, church connection, and the Lord's Supper—may help us on to God; but God, the Holy Spirit must, and he only can, make us "new creatures."

Justification is a work God does for us; but regeneration is a work God does in us, renewing us in the spirit of our minds. It is the work of the Spirit of God in the spirit of man—a spiritual agent and a spiritual subject—and, therefore, in our present material state incomprehensible and inexplicable. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is everyone that is born of the Spirit. The work must be spiritually discerned, our consciousness must recognize the supernatural work wrought in our spirits by the renewing power of the Holy Ghost, so that each regenerated man shall have a consciousness, more or less distinct and vivid, that he is born of God; for "the Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God," for "he that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself."

NEW ORLEANS.

PAUL TULANE.—This distinguished gentleman, whose philanthropy has done so much for the education of the youth of Louisiana, died at his home in Princeton, N. J., last Sunday night. He founded the Tulane University in this city, and up to the time of his death had donated to that institution $1,100,000. He has thus left a monument to his memory in Louisiana which will be an every-day reminder to a grateful people of his eminent philanthropic virtues.

The Federation Idea in Church Schools.

Some things may be readily conceded in regard to church education: (1) That the church ought as far as possible to educate its own children; (2) that our present system, or want of system, of church schools is very unsatisfactory; and (3) that no subject is of more importance to the church than that of education, and, therefore, none should elicit more painstaking consideration.

It seems to me that our idea is fundamentally wrong concerning education. We build colleges, and let the State or private enterprise educate the masses. What proportion of the population of this country is educated in the colleges? Many of those who reach distinction even never go to college, and the overwhelming majority of the masses can never hope for more than common school education. I know the objection against the idea of the church furnishing common school education is that such schools can not be sustained in the presence of a mixed population and in competition with State schools. But the same objection lies against higher education, for there is the presence of the same mixed population and the competition of the same grade of institutions fostered by the State and other organizations. But the Catholic Church measurably maintains its common schools, and furnishes church education at the very time in the life of the pupil when church education is most necessary. But if we must forego common school education as a church, then let our colleges be made adapted to and available for those who would be most benefited by them. It has always been that in our Southland our church institutions have been out of reach of a very large proportion of that class of the people who would be most benefited by them. The boys and girls of the middle class who are not so rich as to feel that they need nothing more than the name of being educated, and yet not so poor as to have no aspirations for an education—this is the class from among whom our strongest minds are to come, and yet against whom the college is effectually closed for want of means. If it can not be made available by endowment and by the introduction of industrial features into its curriculum, then the college must remain empty and our children unprovided for.

I do not see anything feasible in Bishop Galloway's plan of college federation. By it you would introduce a new and disturbing feature into our church machinery. The genius of its organization contemplates unity and universal harmony in all of its methods of church life and enterprise. I would, therefore, move to substitute the idea of federation by that of co-ordinating education in the church with its other great enterprises; and, along with our Mission Board, Church Extension Board, and Publishing Committee, let the General Conference create a Board of Education, with auxiliary Boards in the Annual Conferences. Then, with a general secretary in the field, and the whole educational work of the church unified, you might accomplish all that the idea of federation contemplates, and at the same time under the general authority and supervision of the church. Would not this give stability to our institutions of learning, moderate the friction, and stamp them with the character and authority which they can never have when left to the caprice of individuals or localities?

J. W. MEDLOCK.

There are 870,000 adult converts from the heathen world in communion with the church of Christ as the result of Protestant missionary labor.

Parsonage Building.

A very simple plan was given us by the last General Conference, with which we may do this work through the regular channels of church. Those who will study the Constitution of the Woman's Department of Church Extension will find that it is organized upon the theory that our preachers are our missionaries at home; and to make their work more efficient and relieve our itinerant policy—which gives us so strong an evangelizing power—from a most serious obstacle to its perfect working, we must provide homes in every charge, that the itinerant, in passing from one to the other, may not lose the time and strength that should at once be given to the evangelization of the new pastorate, and that the thousands of dollars now paid out for rent may be saved for other purposes in our church economy. With this parsonage building department attached, the Board of Church Extension becomes a very powerful agency in the hands of the church for pushing its way in the West, and doing its part in the contest there between heathendom and Christianity. But more than this, a by-law of the Constitution of our Parsonage Societies—that we hope to organize everywhere in the Western and in the Eastern Conferences—calls for a "visiting committee" whose duty it shall be to bring scholars into our Sabbath-schools. In the West this will be made the means of bringing in the Chinese and other heathen races. And in the East we may hope to reach the ignorant class now becoming the victims of Mormonism. By forming classes in our regular Sunday-schools, or, if necessary, having a separate hour for them, we may hope to do much towards the salvation of these people—for this is the method used in the foreign field. Reports of what is being done, or needs to be done in the various parts of the church, will be made for the encouragement of those engaged in the work. In every charge will be found good women ready for this work—who, by giving a small portion of their time and going but a few steps from their doors, may do the work of missionaries to the heathen, may preach the saving gospel to the poor and ignorant without expense to the church or to themselves. And shall we not be willing to do this, if it cost us many little sacrifices, when some of our number have been willing to give life, friends, home and all to take upon themselves the hardest part of this service of God and go in obedience to the command to preach the gospel to other nations? Perhaps when we undertake to do our part more fully here we will better understand, more highly appreciate the sacrifices they have made, and be more willing to aid them in their noble endeavor to obey the command of God.

I shall be glad to supply anyone who desires it with a copy of the Constitution of the Woman's Department of Church Extension.

LUCINDA B. HELM,
Gen. Sec. Woman's Dep't.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: Thanks to Dr. Evans for such a neatly and clearly arranged copy of Conference minutes as he has gotten up. But allow me to call attention to an omission in one instance. In the table of statistics I notice that Rayne and Plaquemine Brulee is left blank in the column for education. Turning to a memorandum made at New Iberia, August 5, 1886, I find Rev. S. S. Keener credited with $10 paid by Rayne to the Educational Fund. Please publish in justice to Bro. Keener and all parties concerned.

Notes.

That was a notable birthday celebration the other day in Berlin. A few weeks ago all Europe was bristling with arms and ready for the fray, and we on this side of the water were listening with bated breath for the clash that would usher in the most horrible war that ever bathed the earth in human blood. As we listened, lo! a strain of merry melody, originating in "Berlin, the beautiful," came floating over the sea to us and went gliding softly into all the cities and countries and palaces of Europe, and instantly all the eyes of Christendom were turned in that direction, and, behold! kings and princes and high dignitaries, representatives of all the sovereignties of the old world, were pouring into the German capital to extend the congratulations of empires and kingdoms and dukedoms and principalities and republics and cities to the "hale old Emperor" upon his reaching his ninetieth birthday. War was forgotten and "rumors of war" were unheard, and everybody vied with everybody in placing their wreaths of honor upon the brow of the oldest sovereign in the world. King William was, what we would call, "an old man" when he came to the throne of Prussia, January 2, 1861. He was then sixty-four years of age. January 18, 1871, he was crowned Emperor of United Germany. So that he has been twenty-six years King of Prussia and sixteen years Emperor of all Fatherland, and was ninety years of age March 22. The Germans, as a rule, love their Emperor as a father, and the displays of that love last week in Berlin must have been peculiarly grateful to him. If such a spirit pervaded the world, all talk of war would be immediately suspended, and peace would fling her beautiful banners to every breeze that blows on land or sea.

As between license and prohibition, an exchange puts the case thus: License pays about five per cent. of our public expenses; but at the same time increases those expenses about sixty per cent. The least that prohibition can do is to bring the whole to an equation, which puts the fifty-five per cent. on the right side. In plain words, where the license prevails sixty per cent. of public expenses are directly attributed to its existence. If the expense is $1,000, then $600 of that must be debited to the license system. Of that $600 it only pays $30, and the tax payers pay the remaining $570. Under the prohibition system, the tax payer will have only $400 to pay. Thus prohibition will save to the tax payers $570 in every $1,000. And yet our wise legislators will not give the country prohibition! But the people are awakening and the saloons are doomed.

An exchange, commenting on a statement received from one of its subscribers, that "progressive euchre is all the craze at his place," says:

We have never yet known one who was living as a Christian ought to live—one who was filling his or her place in the prayer circle, who was interested in and disposed to labor for the salvation of others—who yet enjoyed and participated in games such as that mentioned. Possibly there may be some relation between the condition of the church to which our questioner refers, and the fact that the circulation of our paper in that church has steadily decreased for two or three years past. It is quite common for a decline in the spirituality of a church to be felt in this office.

From what our publisher tells us, there are some people in Louisiana and Mississippi who are backsliding. We do hope they won't go as far back as "progressive euchre." Hold on to your paper, friends, and follow its directions, "and ye shall never fall, but an abundant entrance will be granted you into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ."

The most important laws enacted by the last Congress are the following:

Settling the succession to the Presidency.

Regulating the counting of the electoral vote.

Repealing the Tenure of Office act.

Forfeiting and restoring to the public domain about fifty millions of acres of land.

Prohibiting the ownership of land by aliens.

Effectively dealing with the crime of polygamy.

Referring all private claims to the Court of Claims.

Giving money for fast cruisers, for naval harbor defences and for steel guns for all the new ships.

Ordering a thorough inquiry into the affairs and management of the Pacific railroads.

Authorizing the President to deal with the fishery troubles.

Regulating interstate commerce.

Reducing the fees on postal money orders.

Extending the free delivery system to cities of one thousand inhabitants.

Relieving the merchant marine of a number of vexatious and needless burdens.

Redeeming trade dollars.

Prohibiting the use of convict labor on public buildings.

Ordering the adjustment of railroad land grants.

Allotting lands in severalty to Indians.

Authorizing the issue of small silver certificates.

Our City Churches.

Interesting revival services are going on in Felicity Street Church under the guidance of the watchful pastor, Rev. S. H. Werlein. The attendance and interest are increasing daily.

Bro. F. S. Parker has been holding services in his Carrollton Church every night during the past week with encouraging results. His brother, Frank N. Parker, was with him four days last week.

There are no special services in the other churches, but everything is moving on to the encouragement of pastors and workers.

Bishop Keener preached last Sunday morning in the Dryades Street German Church, and at night at Carrollton. The Bishop's health is good, and he expresses himself as much gratified with the results of our general church work during the past year, and is very hopeful of the future.

Grammatical and Critical.

MR. EDITOR: "W. L. C. H.," in the ADVOCATE, of March 10, calls attention to "grammatical deficiency" of Luke vi, 17, 18.

In answer, I would say the words "company" and "multitude" are in the nominative case in our English version, as well as in the Greek. "Company" governs "came," in "came down;" and "multitude" governs "came," in "came to hear." "Stood" is a singular verb here, as well as in the Greek, and refers to Jesus only. The grammatical construction of these verses I would, therefore, render as follows: "And he, the apostles (here referred to by them), and the company of his disciples came down (from the mountain), and (he) stood on a level place, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases; and they that were vexed with unclean spirits were healed."

NEW ORLEANS.

THE DEVIL TO FIGHT.—The temperance people are more and more convinced that their fight, in its last analysis, is simply a fight with the devil. Every victory obtained over him but increases his rage, and he turns in blind fury to wreak his vengeance in any way that many come to hand. We read in one of our exchanges that Mr. F. N. Monroe, at Howell, Mich., chairman of the county Prohibition Party Committee, received about the first of March the following letter:

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 27—To F. N. Monroe, Howell, Mich.—Sir: I wish to inform you that you must stop your work in the prohibition cause, or we will burn you out, root and branch. You may prepare for the worst as we are on your track.

MANY SALOON KEEPERS.

In accordance with this threat, on the night of March 12, Mr. Monroe's hardware establishment and six other buildings were burned. Put this and that together, and what is the conclusion? And yet notwithstanding this plain manifestation of the animus of the saloon keepers, our law makers are hard to be moved in the direction of prohibition.

Personals.

Rev. J. W. Howard, of the Virginia Conference, died March 11. "He was an amiable, good man, and an earnest, faithful preacher." He had been forty-two years in the ministry.

Bro. Sawyer, our presiding elder, is getting credit for some things he don't do. He did not write the article on "Church Suppers," which was signed "S," and published by us some time ago. There are other people who belong to the "S" family.

Of the result of the four addresses delivered in Mobile, Ala., by Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, on the question of temperance, the Register says: "Much good has been done by her visit, prejudices have been removed, interest awakened, new names added to the roll of workers, and a fresh inspiration imparted to those who are looking for a speedy triumph of the temperance cause."

Rev. J. B. Hamilton, a member of the Tennessee Conference, died in Nashville, March 14. "His record is one of fidelity and usefulness."

Rev. R. J. Jones, of Vicksburg, Miss., will preach the annual sermon at the Port Gibson Female College, June 12.

Bishop Hendrix is to preach the commencement sermon at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., next June. That is the Bishop's alma mater.

Rev. John Pipes, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, a man greatly beloved by his brethren and highly honored by the laity of the church, and whose praise is in all the sister churches, we regret to learn, expects to remove to St. Louis, Mo., where he will spend the remnant of his days with his children. The benedictions of the Methodists of Louisiana will follow Bro. Pipes wherever he may go.

Queen Victoria travels under the assumed title of "Countess of Balmoral."

Garibaldi will have a monument on the heights of St. Elmo, near Naples.

George M. Pullman, the car builder, has been knighted by King Humbert of Italy.

Miss Mary Booth has been editor of Harper's Bazar for twelve years, working in her office six hours each day; and now she is going to take a needed rest in Europe.

Alfred Tennyson has been England's poet-laureate for a longer period than any of his predecessors. He has held that post since 1850.

It is said that Sam Jones will hold a six weeks' meeting in Minneapolis and St. Paul, beginning the middle of April.

Rev. B. K. Pierce, editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, has resigned the editorship of that paper, which position he has held for fifteen years. Rev. D. A. Goodsell, D. D., of the New York East Conference, has been elected as Dr. Pierce's successor, and will enter upon his duties at the beginning of next year.

Bishop Galloway expects to spend the week between the church extention meeting and the Bishops' meeting—the last week in April—in North Carolina.

Rev. Louis H. Davis, "the blind preacher" of the North Mississippi Conference, died March 15.

The Nashville Advocate, of March 26, reports the condition of Dr. McFerrin as much improved.

Dr. George R. Crook is preparing a biography of Bishop Simpson.

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, the distinguished writer and preacher of the Northern Presbyterian Church, spent some days in our city last week. He preached morning and evening of last Sunday to large congregations in Dr. Palmer's Church, on Lafayette Square.

Mrs. Agnes Hoover, a native of London, England, and a member of Carondelet Street Methodist Church, in this city, died last Thursday, aged eighty-three years.

Bro. Faunt LeRoy, of Baton Rouge, has sent to Dr. Kelley $16 40, which redeems his promise at Conference to collect ten cents apiece from his Sunday-school scholars for foreign missions. His school numbers 157. We have not heard of another Louisiana pastor that has done the like! Why not?

Chronic Coughs and Colds,

And all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, can be cured by the use of Scott's Emulsion, as it contains the healing virtues of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites in their fullest form. Is a beautiful creamy Emulsion, palatable as milk, easily digested, and can be taken by the most delicate. Please read: "I consider Scott's Emulsion the remedy par-excellence in Tuberculous and Strumous Affections, to say nothing of ordinary colds and throat troubles."—W. R. S. CONNELL, M. D., Manchester, O.

Items of Interest.

The Virginians are talking of rearing a monument to the memory of "Stonewall" Jackson upon the spot where he received his death-wound.

There is a "large item of large interest" on the first page, entitled "Jack's Patch." Read it, and see if you can not easily identify "Jack" in the Methodist itinerancy.

The Mississippi river has caught the contagion, and appears to be likely to beat everything and everybody in the business of "booming."

Queen Victoria has reigned fifty years, during which time England has been engaged in fourteen foreign wars.

At the end of 1884 there were 2,400,000 adherents and 650,000 church members in heathen lands.

The contributions for missions last year from Europe and America amounted to $10,371,000.

The Knights of Labor in Chicago held a large meeting recently in the interest of Sabbath keeping.

There is a bill before the Legislature of Illinois prohibiting the sale or furnishing of tobacco to minors under sixteen years of age, except at the written request of parent or guardian.

Philadelphia has 6,059 licensed saloons, or one to every 160 inhabitants, or one to every twenty-six voters, or ten to every church.

The late Congress appropriated the sum of $25,000 for educational purposes in Alaska.

Chicago was fifty years old March 14. It then had 4,000 inhabitants. It now has 700,000.

George Bancroft, the historian, was President Polk's Secretary of Navy forty-two years ago. He is the oldest ex-Cabinet officer now living.

The tobacco bill last year was $180,000,000—that is, $3 for every man, woman and child in this country. That's the way the money goes—at least, a good deal of it.

The Chinese in Shanghai contributed $1,260 for the Charleston sufferers.

The Connecticutt Legislature has passed a bill to regulate Sunday traffic on railroads. All trains are to be stopped between ten and three, except in "cases of necessity or mercy."

The students in Cornell University have recently contributed $9,000 for the erection of a Christian Association building.

During the last month, fully five hundred conversions have been reported in Louisville, Ky.

The oldest inhabitant of Charleston, S. C., died March 11. He was Henry A. Middleton, born in 1793.

Even Massachusetts has failed. The Woman's Suffrage Bill was defeated in her Legislature by a vote of ninety-seven to sixty-one.

The prohibitionists of Mississippi have captured two-thirds of the State, and the opinion is whispered about that they have designs against the other third!

FREQUENTLY accidents occur in the household which cause burns, cuts, sprains and bruises; for use in such cases Dr. J. H. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment has for many years been the constant favorite family remedy.

Louisiana Notes.

The New Iberia National Bank, with a capital of $50,000, was organized in that city on the twenty-fifth.

Shreveport has a Mutual Building Association whose stock is $400,000. Cotton received at warehouses from September 1 to date is 98,328 bales—an excess of nearly 24,000 bales over the corresponding date last year.

The governor has issued his annual quarantine proclamation, to take effect April 20—about three weeks earlier than usual. This is due to the prevalence of cholera on the western coast of South America.

The following are the enterprises of the day at New Iberia: A number of the citizens are organizing a national bank; two building associations have been recently chartered, and shares found ready sale.

A "Church Temperance Guild" has been organized at Trinity Episcopal Church, this city.

In the $10,000 trial for damages against the Mississippi Valley road, brought by H. Reary, of this city, for injury done to his minor child, the jury returned a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $3,000 and costs.

The Louisiana State Medical Association will meet in Alexandria on April 11.

Natchitoches will soon be connected with the outside world via the tap railway to Prudhomme station, on the Texas-Pacific.

The Louisiana State Prohibition Convention will meet in this city, at Werlein Hall, April 19 and 20.

The frosts in the northern part of the State have done considerable damage to the peach crop.

The Tensas Land Improvement Company has been organized with a capital of $3,500,000.

Gen. Nicholls will address the East Feliciana Memorial Association in Clinton, April 9.

Shreveport is to start a cotton factory soon that will cost three or four hundred thousand dollars; one hundred thousand to be furnished by home men, and the balance by Eastern capitalists.

United States Surveyor J. J. Byles, in a letter to the DeSoto Democrat, states that in a recent survey made by him through the eastern portion of DeSoto parish, ore, yielding between seventy-five and eighty per cent. pure iron, existed in paying quantities all through that portion of the parish.

Hannon & Voss were awarded the contract for building the jail at Tallulah. The price to be paid is $20,995—$5 less than the limit fixed by police jury.

Mississippi Notes.

The Mississippi Mineral and Mining Company at Duck Hill has been duly chartered. The authorized capital stock is $10,000,000.

The Wilkinson County Agricultural and Live Stock Association has changed its name to the Agricultural and Live Stock Association of Southern Mississippi and Louisiana on account of the interest taken in it by Louisiana farmers.

The Southern Baptist, of Meridian, and the Baptist Record, of Jackson, have been consolidated. The paper will be known as the Southern Baptist-Record, with Dr. Gambrell as editor-in-chief, and will be published at Meridian.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Brookhaven, celebrated their second anniversary on the twenty-first.

The State fair will be held in Jackson, commencing October 24.

The capital stock of the Columbus Cotton Factory has been subscribed and the company organized.

A convention of grass growers and hay makers of Mississippi is to be held at Aberdeen on May 3.

The Board of Trade will take charge of the members of the Press at their gathering at Meridian in May.

The girls of the State Female College will soon issue a paper—The College Echo.

Hon. Frank Hurd, of Ohio, has accepted an invitation to deliver the commencement address at the University of Oxford on June 29.

The Messrs. Spengler, the proprietors of Cooper's Wells, will construct a telegraph line from Raymond to the wells, and it is stated will have the same in operation by the opening of the hotel on May 1.

The Monumental Association has seventy-five members, and is now incorporated.

The money order system has been discontinued at Chester, Choctaw county. All money order business has been turned over to the Ackerman office.

The first convention of the Young Men's Christian Association, of Mississippi, met in Columbus on the twenty-fifth.

The charter of incorporation of the Southern Land Company, of Vicksburg, is published; capital stock, $50,000, which can be increased to any amount not exceeding $150,000 by a vote of two-thirds of stockholders.

The cotton compress at Holly Springs is completed and ready for work.

STORMS—AND AFTER.—The preachers have certainly been lucky this year. Judging from the number of "storms of good things pouring in upon us," reported from time to time in the ADVOCATE, we think the preachers ought to be qualified, at least physically, to give some heavy blows against the devil's ramparts. A well-fed ministry can't be defeated. Whatever some may say about not being able to preach with a full stomach, a hungry man's preaching is a very lean affair. The preachers, having been "stormed with good things," are now expected to storm others. "Freely ye have received, freely give." We are not receiving reports of revivals as we have wished. We trust the brethren are laying deep and far-reaching plans, and that when the battle begins it will be march and fight and victory all through the year. The brethren may rely confidently upon the support of the ADVOCATE'S guns in this campaign.

A smart boy's composition on babies reads: "The mother's heart gives 4th joy at the baby's 1st 2th."

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 125 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Matzushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the most certain remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and worms are most frequently the result of these hidden rappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes eating food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, sleeping restlessly in dreams, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid to the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, but suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle in hopes of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, Howard Co., Mo.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

DYSPEPSIA IS NOT A BLOOD DISEASE, and CANNOT be cured by the so-called blood purifiers, but is caused most commonly by an imperfect condition of the secretions; the food fails to digest properly, the mucous lining of the stomach is weakened, and chronic dyspepsia results, bringing the bad appetite, the faint, gnawing feeling, low spirits, and all the symptoms dyspeptics know so well.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY has in thirty years' use in England and five in America never known a case of failure. It contains no opium or mercury. We guarantee every case, and will return the money where we fail. Our Young People.

"WHEN I WAS A BOY!"

BY J. R. EASTWOOD.

"When I was a boy," the grandsire said
To the bright lad by his knee,
"Of the victors crowned with fame I read
Who triumphed on land and sea,
And through the years, from the deathless page,
A summons has sounded long:
To youth, and manhood, and hoary age,
The message is this—'Be strong!'"

"When I was a boy—" he paused, and said
To the listener by his knee,
"Of the men who were lights I read
In a dark world's history!
They prized the truth, and were loved of God,
And no fear of man they knew!
And still, from the glorious heights they trod,
The message is this—'Be true!'"

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written to the ADVOCATE in a long time, I thought I would write again. I have joined the church. I joined last summer. We are not having Sunday-school now on account of bad weather; expect it will soon commence again. Our preacher for this year is Bro. Lowe. I have never heard him preach yet. I do not go to school, but I study at home. I will answer some of the little cousins' questions: Moses was buried in a valley in the land of Moab. Methuselah was the oldest man that ever lived; who died before his father did. I will ask the little folks' a question: Where is the word "ear-ring" found in the Bible? I am,

Your little friend,

MINNIE B. JACKSON.

COMO, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to the dear old ADVOCATE but once, I thought that I would write again. I am now eleven years old. We have a young men's prayer meeting here every Sunday evening, and the ladies have a prayer meeting every Thursday night. We have a union prayer meeting every Wednesday and Friday night, and we have good prayer meetings too. My father is a Methodist preacher. I will answer Amanda Hollingsworth's question: Moses was buried in a valley in the land of Moab. I will close by asking a question: How old was Jared when he died, and where is it found in the Bible? With many good wishes to the dear ADVOCATE, I remain, Your little friend,

HENRY LEWIS.

LAUDERDALE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: You were so kind as to publish my first letter, so I thought I would write again. Your paper is a welcome visitor to our home, especially the little folks' letters, which I always delight in reading. We have no Sunday-school now, but we will before long. I think I can answer Amanda Hollingsworth's question: Moses was buried on Mount Nebo. A. A. M. Garlington, Zacharias foretold the coming of John the Baptist. Now, I will ask a question: Where did Christ preach his first sermon, and from what book did he read? I will close, wishing the ADVOCATE and its editor abundant success.

Your little friend,

IDA L. ELLINGTON.

SALLIS, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I love to read the little children's letters. My papa is the pastor of the Methodist Church here. I do not go to school; but my mamma teaches me at home. I have one brother and one sister. I study spelling, reading, history, arithmetic and geography. I am a member of the Methodist Church. We live in a nice new parsonage. I will answer Annie Middleton's question: "Schoolmaster" is found in Galatians iii, 24, 25. I will ask the children a question: Where is the word "needle" found in the Bible? I fear my letter will be too long.

Your little friend,

NETTIE M. CAMERON.

ELCKENS, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I see the little cousins are trying to answer my puzzle, I will tell them plainly that it can not be done.

ANNIE L. WILSON.

OAK GROVE, Louisiana.

(If the editor had known that the puzzle about the hogs could not be worked out, he would not have published it. Hereafter when the little folks send anything of this kind, they must send the answer at the same time, or no attention will be paid to it.—ED.)

Lost Time.

"Oh, Miss Jennie," cried a little girl to her Sabbath-school teacher, "I am so sorry, but I have lost a whole morning."

"Lost a whole morning?" repeated Miss Jennie, with a grave look upon her sweet face. "How was that, Clara?"

"Why, mother was so busy, and she left Harry in my room, and really, Miss Jennie, the little fellow was so full of fun that I have done nothing but play with him."

Just then Harry put up his dimpled arms to "love" Clara, as he called it in his baby talk. He pressed his lips upon her cheek, saying, "Me love 'oo, C'ara."

"You have not lost your morning, Clara," said her teacher. "You have helped your mother, and you have bound your little brother closer to you by your kindness. Such a morning may have been well spent, my dear."

A few days after this, Mrs. Palmer was seized with a severe illness. She could not bear the least noise or confusion, and Harry's noisy play distressed her very much. So Clara took the little fellow to her own room, rocked him to sleep at night, and cared for him almost as well as his mother could, until Mrs. Palmer recovered.

"My dear child," said the physician, as he placed his hand upon the little girl's head, "if your mother had not had so kind and thoughtful a daughter, I fear that she would not have recovered so soon, if at all."

Thus little Clara had her reward. Never call that hour lost which is spent in making others happy.—Morning Star.

DOING THINGS FOR JESUS.—It was for his name Paul said he was willing to give up everything; or, as we say, "For Jesus' sake." Papa says he stopped smoking for Jesus' sake, and gives the money for the missionaries. Mamma goes early every Sabbath morning to teach a class in the Sabbath-school, though she has so much to do and so many children to dress she hardly knows how to spare the time; but she says: "I won't give my class up; I will try to keep it for Jesus' sake."

Then Molly wanted a new sacque this winter, and had a nice one picked out; but when the news came of the poor starving people who could not get work or enough to eat, and papa asked, "What can you give them, Molly?" she thought hard about it, and then the next day said, "I'll give up my new sacque and wear the old one."

"What!" said Nell; "wear that old one?"

"Yes," said Molly, "for Jesus' sake."

Now what can you do "for the name of Jesus?" If you drop some of your candy pennies into the missionary-box, won't that be for him? If you leave the play you like so well to mind baby for mother when he is cross, isn't that for the name of Jesus?—Our Children.

The Wonderful Healing Properties of Darbys Prophylactic Fluid.

Wherever a preventing, healing, cleansing and deodorizing injection or wash is required use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid. Any inflamed surface, external or internal, treated with the Fluid will be quickly relieved. It has effected cures that had resisted the best medical skill.

HOLD IN CHECK.—What a little thing the tongue is, and yet how powerful! A few words spoken by a general have given a new heart, a new purpose to his soldiers, and they have won the battle that was almost lost. The word of a king, a judge has deprived a man of life. The little words, "Yes" or "No," have decided a boy's career. Not to know when and how to use these words makes a girl or boy miserable for life. The tongue is a wonderful power. The Bible says a great deal about the tongue, and one is this: "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man." You see by this that to be able to control the tongue proves a man to be a masterful man, one who controls himself. He who controls himself is a greater man than the one who conquers a city. When can one begin to be this kind of a man? When a little boy. The boy who keeps back the angry word, the impatient word; the boy who never yields to the temptation of telling a lie, who speaks kindly, gently, is the boy who grows into a strong, self-reliant, kindly man. You know the brain is master of the tongue. If the thought is kindly, truthful, calm, the tongue will obey it.—Christian Union.

MR. EDITOR: Please publish the following recipe for bone-felon for the benefit of our people.

RECIPE.

Take of good bar soap and table salt, equal parts; mix well; thoroughly saturate the poltice with spirits of turpentine; apply it to the affected part with a bandage; renew three times daily until relieved.

This remedy will give immediate relief; but the time taken to effect a cure is about a week. Try it. J. N. TUCKER, P. C.

POPLARVILLE, Mississippi.

MAKE YOUR HOMES ATTRACTIVE.—Mothers and fathers who have sons and daughters growing up do not always realize as they should the great necessity of making home not merely a place in which their children eat, sleep and are clothed, but one in which they find positive happiness and enjoyment. In nine cases out of ten where you see a wild youth or a giddy girl, go to their homes; you will find them cheerless, unattractive, or perhaps actually disagreeable.

The nature of youth is excessively restless; it has a longing for action and excitement, ambitions more or less vain, and always the irrepressible desire to know a broader life. Repress these natural instincts, and you will be sure to throw them into any society that in a measure will gratify their longings. Your sons do not go to the public barrooms at first for the taste of the liquor which they have not as yet acquired; they go for the gay companions they find there. The influence for good or evil that a mother has over her sons, the control that she exercises over their destinies, is a grave responsibility. Throw open your best room to the children in the evenings. Have books and a magazine or two, even if you put away less money. Stimulate their ambition, and invent occupations and amusement for your children. Give them games and endear yourself to them by sharing their joys and plays. Encourage them to be affectionate. Do not with formal coldness starve them for want of caresses.—American Agriculturist.

FARM LIFE.—It is a common complaint that the farm and farm life are not appreciated by our people. We long for the more elegant pursuits or the ways and fashions of the town. But the farmer has the most sane and rational occupation, and ought to find life sweeter, if less highly seasoned, than any other. He alone, strictly speaking, has a home. How can a man take root and thrive without land? He writes his history upon his field. How many ties, how many resources he has; his friendships with his cattle, his teams, his dogs, his trees; the satisfaction in his growing crops, in his improved fields, his intimacy with nature, with bird and beast and the quickening elemental forces; his co-operation with the clouds, the sun, the seasons, heat, wind, rain, frost. Nothing will take the various social distempers which the city and artificial life breed out of a man like farming, like direct and loving contact with the soil. It draws out the poison. It humbles him, teaches him patience and reverence, and restores the proper tone to his system.—John Burroughs.

The bits of brass about the house, be they ornaments or fire irons, or only the trimmings of the doors and windows, can be kept bright and shining with ammonia; the strongest concentrated will remove stains when all else fail.—New England Farmer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:

G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene I. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

Spring and Family Medicine

in use. "It beats all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "how does sell." Prepared by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

HAUGHTON—CAROLINE F. HAUGHTON (nee Brandon), daughter of Thomas and Eliza Brandon, was born in Huntsville, Ala., February 25, 1822; was married to James H. Haughton, October 20, 1836; moved to Aberdeen, Miss., in 1843, where she resided until March 4, 1887, when, at the residence of her daughter, in Memphis, Tenn., after an illness of ten weeks, she was called to a home in the skies. And thus another of earth's pure ones has gone to join the blood-washed throng.

Mrs. Haughton was converted to God when quite young, and for forty-five years was a consistent and useful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Her religion was a matter of conscious reality. She had an experience in divine things, and delighted to hold converse with those who had a like experience. This experience brought forth its legitimate fruit in her life. There were many of the Christian virtues prominent in her character. Her faith in God was marked, strong and abiding. Prayer was a delightful exercise with her; hence she was often found at the throne of grace, and her place in the prayer meeting service was rarely vacant. Her house was one of prayer; and, as a result of her godly example, all of her children, save one, and grandchildren, who are of sufficient age, are converted and are in the church of their mother. Surely they will "rise up in the end and call her blessed." Kindness to the poor and suffering was one of her marked characteristics. Many times has the writer, in his pastoral visits to that class, found her there ministering to their wants, speaking words of comfort and encouragement, and, in every way possible to her, alleviating their distress. Truly the "poor" of Aberdeen have lost a friend and benefactor. Her last illness was long and painful. For nearly ten weeks she lingered at her home. Gaining some strength, she went on a visit to her daughter in Memphis, hoping the change would prove beneficial; but soon after her arrival there she was prostrated, and after a few days death claimed her as his own. Her last days were peaceful and tranquil. Death had no terrors for her. The sting had been extracted. She said she only desired to live to see her last son converted, for which she had so long prayed. May her prayers yet be answered; for are they not before the throne? "She, being dead, yet speaketh."

R. P. MITCHELL.

MCADORY—LINNIE, only child of Williamson and Sarah McAdory, was born February 9, 1866, and died February 17, 1887. She united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the fall of 1875, and to the last exhibited an unswerving loyalty to God.

She was not only the life and joy of her home, but her memory is enshrined in the hearts of all who knew her. In attestation of this fact, we mention the painful solicitude manifested during her protracted illness, and the vast cortege that followed the precious remains to the grave, and the snow-white cross, immortelles of purity, wrought by the hand of unfeigned affection. But a short time preceding her dissolution the sorrowing father bent over the precious child, and asked in accents of subdued tenderness, "Daughter, do you know that you are dying?" And then with that dauntless heroism, begotten only of God, she calmly nodded assent. Oh, sorrowing ones, be of good cheer, and grasp with a firmer hold the communion of saints! God will never relax his almighty grasp of our feeble hand; and loneliness is not desolation while we can look up into his benignant face, and say, "Our Father."

J. T. CUNNINGHAM.

GRAMLING—Died in Ruston, La., January 22, 1887, WILLIAM BRYANT, youngest child of James F. and Mary Gramling.

The writer baptized this little darling the last session of the Louisiana Conference held in Ruston. It was truly a lovely and precious child upon which, perhaps, the parents doted too fondly. God has seen fit to transplant it in heaven, away from all sorrow; and thus says to its parents and to us all: Set your affections on high. It can not return to you, dear brother and sister, but you can go to it. God will be your help in this sore bereavement.

R. S. I.

MUNHOLLAND—Died, near Delhi, La., March 18, 1887, FRANK MUNHOLLAND, aged fourteen years, youngest son of Moses and Eliza Munholland.

Frank was an invalid nearly two years. He bore his sufferings with patience. This is the fifth time since 1884 that unwelcome visitor death has visited this heart-stricken family. It seems indeed hard that we should so often be called on to part with our loved ones; but God knows best. Weep not, father, sisters and friends. Frank is not dead, but awaiting you in that home beyond, where sorrow, pain and death can never enter and loved ones meet never again to part. Bereaved ones, we sympathize with you in your great distress. May God help you to bear your cross with patience and Christian fortitude! Farewell, dear Frank, since it is God's will you should go. May we meet you in heaven where parting is no more!

COUSIN ELLA.

BONNETT—GEORGE WASHINGTON and EMMANUEL ERASTUS, children of James R. and Susan Bonnett, died at the home of their parents, in Winn parish, La., on August 3, 1886. George Washington was born February 22, 1881, and Emmanuel Erastus was born June 1, 1885.

These little children were the especial pets of the entire family; and to give them both up on the same day was a double sorrow that almost refused to be comforted. They were laid away side by side in the same grave; and it was hard to give them up as they thus lay as if in a gentle slumber. We may now sorrow over these little faded flowers nipped in their early bloom; but in the spring time of eternity they will bloom afresh with a beauty and a glory that will gladden the hearts of the reunited family. It must be some comfort to this bereaved family to know that they now have two such loving links to bind them to Heaven; and it is the prayer of the writer that no link in this family circle may be missing "in that day when God makes up his jewels!"

A. M. WAILES.

SMALLWOOD—MRS. CORA V. SMALLWOOD, wife of A. A. Smallwood, died March 5, 1887. She was born December 11, 1851. For reasons best known to herself she never joined the church, but through years of affliction gave evidence of the power of the gospel to save, and in her last illness expressed a readiness to die, for she had no fears. Her end was peace. She leaves seven children and a husband, to whom she was married March 21, 1871, to mourn their loss. May God be with them until they meet again!

L. P. MEADOR.

WEATHERSBY—MRS. JULIA CATHERINE WEATHERSBY, wife of the late Dr. William Weathersby, and daughter of E. A. and M. A. Enochs, departed this life March 21, 1887. She was born September 22, 1819. She was married to Dr. Weathersby, September 26, 1877. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church quite young, and afterwards lived a consistent Christian life.

No one was surprised to find her ready. Her house was in order, and when the Master came he found her watching, perfectly conscious, and to almost the last breath, saying, "I am ready." She leaves two little boys, a mother, sisters and a host of friends to sorrow, but not as those who have no hope. A glorious reunion awaits them who die in the Lord.

L. P. MEADOR.

SELF-INSPECTION.—Make sure that, however good you may be, you have faults; that, however slight they may be, you had better make some—not too painful, but patient—effort to get quit of them. Now, therefore, see that no day passes in which you do not make yourself a somewhat better creature; and, in order to do that, find out first what you are now. Do not think vaguely about it. Take pen and paper, and write down as accurate a description of yourself as you can, with the date to it. If you dare not do so, find out why you dare not, and try to get strength of heart enough to look yourself fairly in the face, in mind as well as body. I do not doubt that the mind is a less pleasant thing to look at than the face, and for that reason it needs more looking at; so always have two mirrors on your toilet table, and see that with proper care you dress the body and mind before them daily.—Ruskin.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health can not exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid, the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels. W. J. MCELROY, MACON, GA.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

News Summary.

MARCH 22.

A slight earthquake was felt yesterday at Mentone, Italy, where the people are still camping out under temporary shelter.——The nineteth anniversary of the Emperor William's birthday was ushered in by the pealing of bells in all the churches and the tower of the town, and the sounding of a choral in Berlin.——A naval review will take place July 23, to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee.——The Interstate Commissioners are: Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan (Rep.), six years; W. R. Morrison, of Illinois (Dem.), five years; Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York (Dem.), four years; Aldace F. Walker, of Vermont (Rep.), three years; Walter S. Bragg, of Alabama (Dem.), two years.

MARCH 23.

Prince Bismarck has donated 100,000 marks to the corporation of Osnabruk for the formation of a museum.——The German residents of Bombay gave a banquet in honor of Emperor William's birthday.——Russia is pressing her claim against Turkey for war indemnity.——Six Russian conspirators were executed Monday, March 21.——An explosion by which seventy miners were killed occurred today in the Bull Colliery, Sidney, New South Wales.——Three shocks of earthquake were felt yesterday at Travesna, Bosnia.——Twelve Michigan miners perish in a burning boardinghouse.

MARCH 24.

Germany has refused to participate either in the industrial or art sections of the Paris International Exhibition of 1889.——The German Oberhaus adopted the Ecclesiastical Bill.——Ex-Secretary Daniel Manning arrived in England to-day.——The President has appointed Oscar S. Straus, of New York, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey; Harold Marsh Sewall, of Maine, consul general of the United States at Apia, and N. J. George, of Tennessee, consul of the United States at Charlottestown, Prince Edward Island.

MARCH 25.

The British Ministry secures a hearing for the Coercion Bill. Morley's motion in opposition lost by a vote of 349 to 260.——Father Keller, the priest imprisoned for not betraying the confidence of the Irish tenants, in a letter says: "If kept in jail until I die, I will never do the infamous thing the judge asked me to do—betray the confidence of the defenseless and loving people who trusted me."——The Duchess of Cumberland is insane.——The presents received by the Emperor William on his birthday are sufficient to fill five furniture carts.——The Press censor has sent to the editor of the Moscow Gazette, a first warning.——Cardinal Gibbons took possession of his titular church.——Recorder Trotter is seriously ill of pneumonia.——New Orleans retains her prominence as second importing port of the Union.——The steamer Scotia, from Naples for New York, with 1,200 passengers, is aground off Blue Point.

Five hundred French troops left Toulon for Madagascar to-day.——Earl Derby has declined to act as chairman of the British Silver Commission.——Mr. Daniel Sullivan, father of the Rt. Hon. Timothy Daniel Sullivan, Lord Mayor of Dublin, died to-day.——Eighty-seven torpedo boats belonging to the Russian fleet in the Baltic have been ordered placed in a state of constant readiness for service.——The passengers on the stranded ship Scotia have been rescued and forwarded to New York. There is a fair chance of saving the vessel and cargo.

MARCH 27.

The yacht Coronet defeated the Dauntless in the great ocean race from New York to Queenstown. The voyage made in 14 days, 23 hours, 34 minutes and 46 seconds.——Secretary Lamar has rendered his decision in regard to the swamp lands of Louisiana, which modifies and practically reverses the decision of Commissioner Sparks.——The Wisconsin Legislature has passed a bill requiring the railways to furnish free passes to members of the Legislature.

MARCH 28.

The Reichstag adjourned over Easter holidays. The next sitting will be on April 19.——Lord Randolph Churchill has returned to London improved in health.——Paul Tulane died Sunday night, March 27.——Hon. John H. Reagan was seriously hurt, while mounting his horse, by the saddle turning and throwing him to the ground.——Alexis E. Lemee has been appointed receiver of public moneys at Natchitoches, La.

OUR HOME PHYSICIAN.

The New Cyclopedia of Family Medicine. By George M. Beard, A. M., M. D., and ten associate editors, in their several departments of medicine. It contains clear descriptions of the structure and functions of the human body, the laws of health, care of the sick, management of infants and children, and all possible self-aids in the treatment of accidents and disease in plain language adapted to the household. All its descriptions and treatment are based upon the latest and highest authorities.

The Homœopathic treatment of diseases with their remedies is given in an Appendix, by Samuel Lilienthal, M. D., Professor of Clinical Medicine in the New York Homœopathic College.

The TESTIMONIALS to the work from the medical, religious and secular press, and from men of world-wide reputation are of the strongest kind.

Rev. Joseph Cook writes: "I keep it on a prominent shelf in my library, and find it a kind of guardian angel in matters, sanitary and hygienic."

The New York Christian Advocate says: "It supplies a real want among the people. By all odds, it is the best book of its class before the people."

Dr. S. F. Strong, Remedial Institute, Saratoga Springs, N. Y., writes: "It is a very judicious and practical work for the people."

Illustrated with nearly 500 Chromo Plates and Wood-Cuts—everything offensive to good taste is excluded—and contains over 1,500 Royal octavo pages.

The price, $12, is now reduced to $6. AGENTS WANTED. E. B. TREAT, PUBLISHER, 771 Broadway, New York.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

BOOKS.

ELEMENTS OF ENGLISH. An introduction to English grammar, for the use of schools. By George Hodgdon Hicker, A. M. The Interstate Publishing Company, Chicago and Boston. Price, thirty cents.

This is one of the best little books on grammar that we have seen. It makes things plain, and that is not what many grammars do.

CREED AND CHARACTER. Sermons by Rev. H. S. Holland, M. A., canon at St. Paul's. Published by Scribner's Sons. Price, $1 50.

These sermons are "good to the use of edifying." The subjects are various, and in the main well treated.

REALISTIC PHILOSOPHY. By James McCosh, D. D. In two volumes. Scribner's Sons, New York; and for sale by Wharton & Bro., in this city.

The first volume is devoted to an exposition of the realistic philosophy, and the second is devoted to its history and criticisms of various writers on philosophical subjects. The author's name and fame as a writer on such subjects is a guarantee that the work is well done.

PERIODICALS.

—The Studio, for March, has a fine picture of John Quincy Adams at the age of sixteen; an engraving of Behind the Scenes, by Degas, and reading matter to match. 3 East 14th street, New York.

—Musical Herald is a good monthly for all people who love chats about music and musical folks. Franklin Square, Boston.

—St. Nicholas, for April, is on hand in all its brightness and beauty. It is almost as beautiful as our own flower-bespangled city.

—Cassell's Family Magazine has much that will interest its readers even during the shiny days of April.

—Christian Thought contains articles from George B. Stevens, of Yale, Dr. J. E. Rankin, and A. Wilford Hall, the author of the Substantial Philosophy; and then Views and Reviews. This is one of the best and one of the safest periodicals published in this country. W. B. Ketcham, 71 Bible House, New York. Price, $2. Clergymen, $1 50.

—Journal of Education, for home and school, has a good table of contents. This is the official organ of the Louisiana Educational Association, and is edited by Prof. William O. Rogers. Price, $1 50. Address, Journal of Education, P. O. Box 1609, New Orleans.

—American Art has a number of fine illustrations and is filled with the latest art news, and will be welcomed by all art lovers. American Art Magazine Company, 170 Tremont street, Boston. Price, $2 50.

—Popular Science Monthly, for April, has a splendid table of varied and interesting articles. The first, Brain-Forcing in Childhood, by Dr. Hammond, ought to be seriously pondered by parents and teachers. Other articles will command attention. D. Appleton & Co., New York. $5.

—The Homiletic, for March, has its usual bill of fare for preachers. Its various "sections" commend themselves better than any words of ours can commend them. E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, New York. Price, thirty cents.

—Scribner's Magazine, for April, contains, Unpublished Letters of Thackeray, with fine portrait; continuation of The Siege of Paris, by ex-Minister Washburne, several other continued articles, and finishes with a fine contribution on English in Our Colleges. Altogether this is a splendid number. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Mason & Hamlin Pianos.

The new mode of piano construction, invented and introduced by Mason & Hamlin in 1882, is an assured success, tested and proved; many of the best judges having pronounced it "the greatest improvement in pianos of the century." By it musical tones of remarkable brightness and purity are obtained, and tuning is required less than one-quarter as often as in the old system. An illustrated catalogue, fully explaining the improvements, will be sent free to any address.

VOICES OF PRAISE.

A HYMN AND TUNE BOOK OF RARE MERIT FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AND RELIGIOUS MEETINGS.

Price 40 cents; $4.20 per dozen.

BY REV. CHARLES L. HUTCHINS.

The publishers, with much pleasure, announce a new edition of a very successful book, highly commended by clergymen and Sunday-school men of all denominations.

It is, as many believe, the only book of the kind that entirely, and without qualification, meets the views of educated and refined people who wish dignified, but not dull music, and true and high class, but bright poetry, for Sunday-school and Social Meeting service.

VOICES OF PRAISE has all that. Even the old English Church Tunes, which are so apt to drag, furnished with quicker notation, here advance with a youthful, joyous, elastic step, which is, indeed, their true tempo.

VOICES OF PRAISE is a large, but light and conveniently carried book, with 440 Tunes to nearly as many Hymns and Canticles. It has sold very largely. The price is low.

We feel we must write something of the success of Hop Bitters. Their sale is treble that of any other article of medicine. Hence we feel it but justice to you and your Bitters to say that it is a medicine of real merit and virtue, and doing much good and effecting great cures.

Yours, J. F. & H. B. UTLEY.

HAYESVILLE, OHIO, Feb. 11, 1884.

I am very glad to say I have tried Hop Bitters, and never took anything that did me as much good. I only took two bottles and I would not take $100 for the good they did me. I recommend them to my patients, and get the best of results from their use.

HOP BITTERS MFG. CO.:

I know Hop Bitters will bear recommendation honestly. All who use them confer upon them the highest encomiums and give them credit for making cures—all the proprietors claim for them. I have kept them since they were first offered to the public. They took high rank from the first, and maintained it, and are more called for than all others combined. So long as they keep up their high reputation for purity and usefulness I shall continue to recommend them—something I have never done before with any patent medicine.

THE SUNKEN CROWN.

(Translated from the German of Uhland.)

BY MISS IDA A. AHLBORN.

Upon the hill-top yonder,
There doth a cottage stand;
One looks upon its threshold
Out in the fairest land.
There sits a free-born peasant,
And in the parting rays,
His scythe he beats and sharpens,
And sings to Heaven praise.

Down yonder in the valley
The pond in twilight lies,
And in its waters sunken
A crown, the proudest prize;
At night, no doubt, are sparkling
Carbuncle and sapphire rare;
Long years the crown is sunken,
And no one seeks it there.

The Church As An Educator.

BY BISHOP E. R. HENDRIX.

The church is the mother of the school. The earliest school known was the school of the prophets. "Long before Plato had gathered his disciples around him in the olive grove or Zeno in the Portico, those institutions had sprung up under Samuel in Judea." Not only was this the case, but it is historically true that religion is the cradle of philosophy. Man's religious nature prompting the endeavor to know his origin and destiny will be found to be the starting point of his history as a student and a thinker. The early philosophies all begin with trying to explain the great creative cause. The earliest literature of a people is a religious literature. What antedates the Bible, the Veda or the maxims of Confucius? The only schools to be found in the Orient, save those planted by Christianity, are for the study of these sacred books, alike the earliest and the latest, because the only literature worth the name ever produced in Asia. But for man's religious nature stimulating him to thought and investigation his intellectual nature would be simply the purveyor to his appetites. Living simply to eat, the chief use for his mind would be to find the needed food and prepare it. His religious instincts have made him a thinker. The sense of awe awakened in the mind of Moses by the sight of the burning bush led to inquiry and to worship. The more he worshiped, the more consuming the desire to know until the petition burst from his heart, "I beseech thee show me thy glory!" A man's true and highest education is thus the proper gratification of his religious instincts in the imparting of proper knowledge and in training the mind to reflect upon it.

Religion has been the patron as well as the parent of learning. It has not simply given birth to the earliest literature of every people; it has also guarded and preserved that literature amid whatever perils. Whether it was worth preserving, depends on the value of the religion which it could not but embody. Man's religious nature is so supreme that his words and writings are not only stimulated by it, but they measure its moral tone. An irreligious literature marks a period when men are doing violence at once to their intellectual and their religious natures. A perverted religious nature may be zealous to preserve and propagate falsehood no less than a healthy religious nature may be zealous to perpetuate and extend the truth. To abandon her legitimate work of stimulating the human mind to thought and of training its faculties to the utmost and of carefully guarding the products of sound thought, is for the true religion to confess decay of her power and to permit an enemy to wrest her sceptre from her nerveless grasp. It is simply a question as to whether a true or a false religion shall claim the homage of the human mind. Man must and will worship. Shall the worship be of him who claims to be the Light of the world, or shall its altar bear the inscription, To the unknown God? To this alternative has all thought now come—Christianity or agnosticism. Man's religious nature shows itself in the common name which despair uses whether in Athens or London when it would designate its latest philosophy—the unknown.

Indifference on the part of the church to her legitimate function as an educator is not simply a blunder; it is a sin. Such indifference means a loss of conscience and of vital power. No church can long command respect that fails to urge the right use and constant increase of all one's talents, that does not bid, Add to faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge. She must look to the proper development of the whole man. Procreative power is not the highest form of power. The increase of their own species is possible to every form of animal life. The lower the form of life the more abundant the offspring. It is not the number of our spiritual children; it is what they are as useful factors in the church, it is what fruit they bear unto perfection. We hear nothing later of the multitude who heard Christ's sermons or witnessed his miracles and shouted "Hosannas"; but those who sat long enough at his feet to curb their passions and to think after his great precepts were spoken of as men "that had turned the world upside down." Pride of our numbers may be our curse. "Not how many, but how much."

If asked what is most vital to the success of our church schools, I would say the proper estimate on the part of parents of the value of religious training of their children. Let this exist, and if all of our church schools had been destroyed, the demand for them would create an immediate supply. Let this exist and parents would not only endow and support our colleges; they would send to them sons and daughters of sound morals and of noble aims to constitute a religious as well as intellectual community. Imagine Abraham sending Isaac to a modern military school with its card parties and its hops, or to some State institution where there has never been a conversion since its walls were built! Is it of such material that God can make a peculiar people in whom all the world shall be blessed? "I know Abraham that he will command his children and his household after him, and that they shall keep the way of the Lord."

Our church institutions are not on the consciences of our people because of the too slight importance set upon the religious training of our children. We would have better schools with more family altars. We are often more careful of the morals of our daughters than of our sons, and hence the large attendance on our female schools. An aroused conscience on the religious training of our sons and daughters would show itself in a vastly increased attendance in our Christian institutions, parents counting the slight additional expenses for tuition, a small matter in comparison with the benefits of a religious atmosphere and of the association with Christian teachers and students. Once fully on the conscience of the church, our people would give to our colleges as they give to church buildings and to missions, and far more wills would contain liberal bequests for Christian education.

What are we to do? Years ago it was our boast in the South that we had more students in college in proportion to population than the North had. But in what colleges? Largely those of the Eastern and New England States. With one or two exceptions we have not properly endowed and supported the institutions of learning in our own territory. Statistics show that Harvard and Yale receive the majority of their students from New England. Any worthy college makes patronage, and in time patronage makes a worthy college. Hundreds receive a college education because a good college is in their own or an adjoining State. It is possible to provide in many of our Southern States colleges where students can receive as thorough an education as at any New England college. These must not multiply too rapidly, but more will be needed in time. We need now to greatly strengthen those we have in libraries, apparatus, endowment and patronage, keeping well in mind those which are of strictly collegiate grade. The church must direct the higher education of our youth, or unbelief will. Her influence will be increased manifold as she asserts her right and place as an educator. Let us abandon our foreign missions as soon as our colleges. Said Judson on one occasion when passing Madison University, "If I had a thousand dollars, do you know what I would do with it?" "Yes," said his companion, "you would give it to foreign missions." Said Judson, "I would give it to a Christian college like that." "Planting such colleges," said the missionary, "and tilling them with religious students, is raising seed-corn for the world."

The conscience of the church must be reached by pastors stressing more the religious training of our children, by a campaign in which our Bishops, college presidents, editors, presiding elders and pastors shall all unite until the attention of the church is arrested and the conscience of the church aroused to enlarge, equip and patronize our church schools. We must educate the church as well as our children, and we can not begin too soon.—Southwestern Methodist.

On the Wrong Use of Churches.

BY C. K. MARSHALL, D. D.

MR. EDITOR: Much depends on the right use of our houses of worship. They are built for the solemn worship of God, the administration of the holy sacraments, and the public preaching of the gospel by duly ordained and authorized ministers of the church. A house of God is a holy place, and "holiness becometh the house of God forever." When once a building has been dedicated to God, and set apart for the honor of his name, can there be any propriety or necessity requiring the use of such a place for political harangues, phrenological discussions, or temperance lectures, such as are ordinarily delivered by the army of lecturers traveling through the land? I simply distinguish between the lecture of the professional lecturer, with his funny stories and side-splitting humor, shaking the house with peals of laughter, and cheering the orator by stamping the floor, and evangelical workers, who, concerning the faith in Christ, reason of temperance, righteousness and judgment to come, as did Paul. These humorous lectures have their mission in the many-sided temperance work, but are entirely out of place in the sanctuary. For one, I could take no part in a picnic held in a graveyard. A right thing may be done in a wrong way. Some things and some places must be held inviolably sacred, or our Christianity must perish. Christ reverenced his Father's house. He drove out the money brokers and them that sold doves: nor would he suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple. Mr. Wesley, on that passage, says: "So strong notions had our Lord of even relative holiness, and of the regard due to those places, as well as times, that are peculiarly dedicated to God." Christ forbade the misuse of "the house of prayer."

I have known—it grieves me to say it—political embroilers, partisan fomenters and money-making lecturers to get into houses of worship by ways and methods neither lawful nor polite. Much less offensive to the great majority of our people, is the occasional use of our houses of worship for proper temperance lectures. All true Methodists are temperance people. But, while some of them see no impropriety in throwing open the church and pulpit to any and every sort of lecturer on that subject, others, and equally conscientious members, greatly differ on that question. For such it is no pleasant sight to see a lecturer skilled in producing uproarious fun and boisterous laughter—as has lately taken place in some of our churches, of which many pronounced the lectures as "funny as the negro minstrels," and others, "as good as a circus"—in the very place where they have solemnized the Savior's death, poured out their penitential griefs, and wept over their dear dead ones. I honor their sense of the sacredness of the place. Have church officers no obligation to protect the large class of serious and considerate members from being thus grieved and wronged?

If it is all right and according to the laws and usage, and the piety and prayerfulness of the church is promoted by it, and God is more honored and more souls saved, then we surrender. But we think the laws and usage of the church should go for something. Many years ago the demand for the liberal use of our churches led to such scandalous scenes that the Conference forbade their use for any other purposes than the original and high purposes for which they were built. The officers of the church met in official meetings, and declared that the church should not be used for miscellaneous lectures, etc. Then public halls and opera houses were taken. Now the cry is for churches. Do other denominations allow their sacred places to be thus used? Not much.

Mr. Editor, I want to say a word on the manner of obtaining these churches. In my young days as a pastor a phrenological lecturer came to this city to lecture. He called on me and asked for the use of the church. I said, No! no! no! "But," said he, "if your officers agree to let me have it, will you object?" "Well," said I, "they know their duties. I have nothing to do with their wishes." So somehow he got the names of four or five trustees, having met them on the streets, or at their places of business, and asked them. When they declined, he pressed his suit thus—"If the others consent, will you object;" and generally he received the answer in the negative. So he got the majority into that trap, scattered his dodgers all over the city, rung the bell, lighted the church, and proceeded to array his skulls and examine heads. How do you suppose the officers of the church felt on seeing that display of audacity? Not one had, as an officer, given consent.

Now, what I want to say here is, that, unless a trustee or steward of the church has been called to an official meeting, and the proper officer is in the chair, and a quorum is present for the transaction of business, he is no more an officer authorized to agree to such propositions than any other member, male or female. To illustrate this fact, suppose I want a note for $5,000 discounted in the bank. The Board of Directors hold official meetings to decide on the reliability of the endorsers on notes. But I can not wait. So I say to Mr. A. (director), "Will you agree to have this note cashed by your paying teller?" He is speechless. "Well, will you, if a majority of your Board will agree to it." He answers, "Yes;" and I go in quest of B. (a director), and he says, "Yes, if the majority agree—all right." In this way I get them all (five in number) to agree to have the note cashed. So I take it to the paying teller, and say to him every one of the directors has agreed that he shall cash my note. And he hands me the $5,000. Is that business? Was that the voice of the Board of Directors? But the bank teller was never allowed to handle any more funds for that institution. Now, those directors on the street had no more right to pronounce upon my note than five school-boys. They should simply have said, "I am not a bank director outside the office of the bank."

This is true alike of church trustees and stewards, and by observing the common usage and discipline and the philosophy of official relations, great harm may be prevented.

I am for temperance and prohibition, and fought its battles before many of the present army of workers were born. A great battle is yet to be fought, and it looks as if indiscreet men will get our non-partisan plans mixed up with politics; and if so, and the churches become the field of combat, farewell to religion.

I beg our people to weigh well these suggestions, and hold the reins of your own business in your own hands.

VICKSBURG, Mississippi.

Theological Skeptic-Makers.

That not a few skeptics have been made, or at least encouraged, by church writers and speakers, is a reflection as sad as it is true. Passing over such discouragements to the reception of religious truth as grow out of vehement—not to say, angry—discussions of such non-essential questions as frequently arise among Christians of different denominations, and, secondly, such as grow out of the observance of loose religious conduct in church members by irreligious persons, it may be very pertinently asked, how far it is proper for mere theologians to insist on certain doctrines of a scientific character as are incidentally alluded to in Scripture.

I assume that scientific subjects are alluded to in Scripture incidentally, and not as matter of direct or primary teaching. They are, perhaps, mainly astronomy, geology and chemistry. And while the Bible does not attempt to teach at all, much or little, on these departments of science, they are frequently alluded to in filling out a statement, or by way of illustration or enforcement of the matter in hand.

The sciences of astronomy, chemistry and geology, for instance, have no nearer relation to Christianity than that between mathematics and agriculture, or between medicine and architecture. A mathematician, in teaching the science of numbers, might very properly allude to optics or hydraulics; but he would be out of his line of teaching were he to insist on lenses of some exact concavity or convexity for this or that visual purpose, or on this or that exact particular formation of a suction pump. A mathematician might also be a chemist or surgeon; but in treating on those subjects he would not act in the capacity of a mathematician, but as chemist, or surgeon, etc. And just in the same way I look upon a theologian contending with an astronomer, chemist or geologist about facts or principles pertaining to those sciences. When he contends with an astronomer, he does so as an astronomer, and not as a theologian; and so of chemistry or geology. A rhetorician or a theologian, as such, does not need to know, or is not presumed to know, the relative size of the planets, or the exact distance of the sun from the earth. Neither does a theologian, as such, need to know the relation of the cænozoic, mesozoic or paleozoic eons. These questions are scientific, not theological. Theology does not demand their study.

Of course, there is no objection whatever to any theologian setting up and urging his objections to the theories or facts set forth by any geologist, but he does so as a geologist and not as a theologian. As a mere theologian, he is no more interested in any geological teachings than in those of the lawyer, physician, chemist or engineer. An engineer may make a very blundering survey of a certain bridge, but the theologian, as such, has no more cause to correct it than to correct any real or supposed error of the geologist when he divides and classifies the geological eons of past ages and separates them by millions of ages. The geological periods between the period of man and the tertiary and cretaceous eons is a scientific question in which the mere Christian is not interested.

It was but yesterday almost—only in the sixteenth century—that the "infallible" church and the theologians run into this same error in regard to what might be well caricatured as theological astronomy. And as has been the outcome of the theological astronomy of the sixteenth century, so will it be—almost is—the geological and chemical theology of the nineteenth.

The Pope and his theological counselors held the Bible to be an astronomical text-book, and that to deny theological astronomy was as fatal as to deny any other plain Bible doctrine. And just so we are told by not a few theological geologists and chemists of this day.

I must be understood here as having no opinion to express—nothing to affirm or deny as to the correctness or incorrectness of the teachings of any particular scientist or class of scientists on any scientific subject. What I wish to say just here is, that I know of no scientific errors or truths popularly promulgated along in those days, in which the theologian is more interested than is the lawyer, the doctor, the farmer or mechanic. If they give millions of years of physical history to our globe and place man upon it first only yesterday almost—only about six or seven thousand years ago, what objection has Christianity to it? Christianity does not teach on the subject of the age or antiquity of the earth.

OLD IDEAS RESTATED.

Joy is life's sunbeam, and sorrow its darksome night.

Faith, Hope and Charity are the brighest stars of a glorious constellation.

Wisdom, Truth and Goodness are kindly fairies, whose precepts, obeyed, insure success.

Folly is a spiteful sprite who entices to injury.

Anger is a great storm which lays waste the fair "garden of peace."

Cheerfulness is a cooling fountain, keeping fresh the heart, and ever stirred by sprightly spirits bubbling from its depths.

Youth is the spring of life, bedecked with budding flowers; maturity, its summer, possessing full growth and fruitage; and old age, its winter, when the frost-king has wrapped nature in his white mantle and destroyed its bloom.

NEW EVERY MORNING.

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new;
Ye who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you;
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the things that are past and over;
The tasks all done and the tears all shed,
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds which smarted and bled
Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever,
Bound up in a sheaf which to all holds tight,
With glad days and sad days, and bad days, which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And spite of old sorrows and of old sinning
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain,
Take heart with the day and begin again.

The Sunday-School Lesson for April 17, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

JOSEPH MAKES HIMSELF KNOWN.

Genesis xlv. 1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Overcome evil with good."—Romans xii. 21.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

According to Joseph's prediction, there had been seven years of plenty: the land was full of corn and very prosperous. Unto Joseph had been born two sons. One he named Manasseh, signifying "forgetting;" the other Ephraim, meaning "fruitfulness." Time, which makes all things even, had reconciled him to his absence from the scenes of his youth, and his heavenly Father had so abundantly blessed him that he declared his gratitude in the names of his sons.

The years of famine had begun. Joseph's prediction had not been believed to the extent of laying up store: hence all the "land of Egypt was famished," and "the people cried unto Pharaoh for bread." "Pharaoh said unto all the Egyptians, Go unto Joseph; what he saith to you, do." Literally, the lives of all the people round about were in Joseph's hands. Pharaoh put the supreme authority upon him. The famine extended into the land of Canaan, where Jacob with his eleven sons and their families were still living. They heard that there was corn in Egypt, and the ten sons were dispatched to buy some. The same ten who had wreaked a cruel vengeance upon him because of his dreams now journeyed down into Egypt, came before Joseph, and "bowed themselves before him with their faces to the earth." It is not to be wondered at that they did not recognize their stripling brother, last seen as a slave stripped of his coat, now promoted to be governor of all the land of Egypt, and clothed in the robes of royalty. He easily recognized them, however, and, desiring to impress their evil conduct upon them, he treated them roughly and put them in prison. Their guilty consciences attributed all their troubles as resulting from their treatment of their brother. They said in his hearing, not thinking that he understood their language: "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." It was finally arranged that Simeon should be left as a hostage for their return, and for the bringing of their younger brother with them.

Jacob was much distressed at their narrative, and gave vent to his feelings—"Me ye have bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me." "My son shall not go down with you: if mischief befall him by the way, then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave." The famine left them no alternative, however, and Jacob, in extremity, consented that Benjamin should go. He made them take double money, and also told them "to carry down the man a present." They went down with trepidation, and were quick to tell about returning the money. Joseph had them to dine with him, and they marveled that he should have set them, the first according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth.

On their departure Joseph's silver cup was put in the mouth of Benjamin's sack. A messenger from Joseph overtook them and accused them of the theft. They confidently repelled the charge, saying, "The man with whom you find the cup shall die, and we will all be your lord's bondmen." It was agreed that only the one with whom it was found should be a bond-man. What was their dismay to find the cup in Benjamin's sack! Judah made a most eloquent appeal to Joseph, pathetically referring to Jacob's grief for the son that was lost and his tender love for the youngest one, averring that their father would be brought down with sorrow to the grave if Benjamin should not return with them. He magnanimously proposed to take Benjamin's place in bondage, so that the lad could go up with his brethren. Possibly there may have been a grim satisfaction to Judah to offer himself as a substitute for one brother as an atonement for the wrong of selling another into slavery.

I.—A BROTHER FOUND.

Verses 1, 2. Joseph could not refrain himself. The rough treatment toward his brothers had been a piece of acting on his part: his tender heart had yearned all the time to bestow a brother's warm greeting, and now he saw they were sufficiently humbled and repentant. Cause every man to go out from me. There is something about the intercourse of families, especially about family jars and troubles, that every sensitive heart shrinks from making public. Hence Joseph wanted to be alone with his brothers. 2. He wept aloud. His long pent-up feelings, being excited by the pathetic speech of Judah, portraying the tender love of his father for him and bringing up so vividly all the scenes of his youth, found vent in loud weeping, so that the Egyptians and the house of Pharaoh heard—doubtless those whom Joseph had sent out of the apartment, together with others who served him, are referred to.

3-5. I am Joseph. What a wonderful announcement! Could they believe their eyes and ears? Doth my father yet live? He had been assured of that before; but he wanted reassurance, and it may be that other particulars were included in the inquiry: "Is he well? Does age tell upon him? Does he ever ask about his long-absent son?" His brethren could not answer a word. And no wonder! Doubtless their thoughts were busy with the bloody "coat of many colors," with the old "pit," with the "twenty pieces of silver," with "the anguish of the soul of their brother"—all which were made by Joseph's presence to cry aloud for vengeance. Be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye have sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life. Joseph, true to a spirit of mercy and pity, was trying to comfort his brethren. He did not certainly mean that they were not to condemn their conduct, but that, while it was wicked in itself, they could find some comfort in it, because God had overruled it all to good.

6-8. Five years, in which there shall neither be earing nor harvest. To "ear" means to till. (See I Sam. viii, 12; Isaiah xxx, 24.) Less than half of the famine was gone; the most trying part was yet to come. God hath sent me before you to preserve a posterity in the earth. Had not God selected Joseph, or some special one to fill his place, then inevitably all would have perished. So it was not you that sent me hither, but God. God had nothing to do with the envy that sold Joseph; yet it was easy for him to take advantage of the evil conduct of the brothers to further his Divine plans. Reuben's proposition to put him in a pit instead of killing him, the timely appearance of the caravan and Judah's suggestion to sell, might have been from the Author of all good, but not the envy and cupidity of the brethren. A father to Pharaoh, in the sense of a counselor and a provider.

II.—A SON ANNOUNCED.

Verses 9-11. Haste ye. Joseph desired greatly to see his father. Thy son Joseph saith come down and tarry not. The message announced that Joseph was yet living, and that the invitation was from the highest authority. Thou shalt be near unto me with all that thou hast, and I will nourish thee. Here was ample security that the remaining years of famine need have no terrors for him.

12-15. Your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin. They had ocular demonstration of his existence, and they could tell his father. Particularly his own brother Benjamin could assure the father of himself, and the father of his only brother, that he, Joseph, was still alive. Ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt. There was no intention of self-praise in this; Joseph was simply telling his father of news which would be more gratifying to him than any upon earth. He fell upon Benjamin's neck and wept, and Benjamin wept upon his neck. Moreover, he kissed all his brethren. What a joyous family reconciliation! The most cordial, happy soul among them was he who had been most sinned against. The most forgiving had been the most wronged. The lightest heart had once been the heaviest. It is Christ-like to forgive. It resembles the blessed offices of Christ to have been permitted "to save much people alive."

Jottings from the Work.

MR. EDITOR: Your kindly face is seen every week in the healthful countenance of the dear ADVOCATE. It seems to be renewing its youth. A vigorous, healthy, progressive, Christian literature we must disseminate. The ADVOCATE has many readers in these parts. We hope to see the face of its worthy editor at our District Conference. "For Zion's sake I will not hold my peace." Our congregations are increasing; Church Conferences have been held; we have formed an affinity for the people, and have their growth and maturity in grace on our heart; have lifted the collections for foreign and domestic missions and church extension (all together); will be reported in full, and the money forwarded to general treasurer at Nashville.

"By the way," I have a singular, satisfactory and encouraging incident to relate: At Arizona Church last summer four distinct and separate public collections were taken up in about six hours. I never knew the like before in a ministry reaching over thirty years. On Saturday, at Church Conference, it was asked: "What is the church doing for the poor?" It was answered and agreed by all present, that there were no poor in the community. So, without any concerted plan, at Sunday-school, in the morning, a collection was taken up for Sunday-school literature. After the eleven o'clock sermon by the pastor a generous collection for missions and church extension was taken. We met at three o'clock P. M. First, the Woman's Temperance Society had its monthly meeting and a good collection. Immediately on its adjournment, the Woman's Missionary Society, organized a month ago, met, and a nice collection was taken. I tell you that cow was well milked that day! But I saw no one wince seriously; and if one or two dodged, it made no difference, for the last milking was the best and most creamy ("the strippings"). Those Arizona people are noble. Our Temperance Society, under the able leadership of Mrs. John Willis, is a success. And our newly organized Woman's Missionary Society, under the presidency of Mrs. Menifee, is doing a grand work. That was a fine Sabbath's work. And there was such a delightful spirit in it all. May the blessed Master's name be glorified more and more!

The Sabbath night was spent at the home of the courtly, refined and venerable Joshua Willis, Sr., now in a few days of his ninety-second birthday. Wonderful old man! Gracefully and graciously leaning on the Savior, all his powers almost unimpaired. His anti-whisky and anti-tobacco principles and sentiments are clean-cut, and voice the oncoming reform. Doubtless in this is the wherefore of his longevity. (Parenthetically: If our people—men, women and children—would quit using ardent spirits in all its forms, and tobacco in all its forms, including, with emphasis, cigarettes and snuff, how full the treasury of the Lord would be!) While conversing with this old gentleman, and realizing an atmosphere of true Christian hospitality, and patient, loving faith in the Redeemer, I am reminded of those lines of Charles Wesley:

"In age and feebleness extreme,
Who shall a fellow-worm redeem?
Jesus, my only hope thou art,
Strength of my falling flesh and heart!
O, could I catch a smile from thee,
And drop into eternity!"

There the old man waits amid his children, and children's children of the third and fourth generation, "till his change come." I imagine it will be a quiet transition. His widowed daughters—Mrs. Thomasson and Mrs. Moreland—live with him, and they are a comfort to each other as the evening and twilight approaches.

I might say much of Homer: its kind, hospitable people, our evening service of song under the leadership of Bro. Gill and Sister Johnson, and the promising outlook. But oh! the abomination of abominations—represented by eight vigorous saloons—is strongly entrenched in this fair city of oaks! How to dislodge him from his stronghold is the question! How to save our young men and boys and many gray-headed men from the demon drink, is the absorbing problem! It is a time for work, prayer, faith. I might speak of Lisbon, the model church, with a live Sunday-school under the superintendency of that symmetrical man, Billy Dawson, and all the generous hospitable people thereabouts; but I forbear.

Notwithstanding the pruning and cleaning up of our church register and the ravages of death by which we have lost twenty names, we think it only breaking up the "fallow ground" for a fine harvest. "God gives the increase." We will have a full, good, encouraging report at our forthcoming quarterly meeting, next Saturday and Sunday, when our worthy presiding elder is expected to minister to us. The good Lord is blessing us abundantly. We are constrained to say, "Surely goodness and mercy have followed me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

In Christ, affectionately,

T. R. WHITE.

Temperance in Vicksburg, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: The following, clipped from the Daily Commercial Herald, of this city, March 26, will give some intimation of the wonderful progress of the temperance cause in this city during the last two weeks. Col. R. S. Cheves and Mr. L. J. Beauchamp came upon an invitation from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and began their work under most discouraging circumstances. Sustained and encouraged by those who had invited them, and a few noble temperance men, and inspired by a zeal and earnestness in the good cause not easily overcome, they prosecuted their work to the grand success indicated in this testimony from one of the leading dailies of the city. After having been associated with these men in their work for more than two weeks, and after having heard from each of them seventeen lectures, I feel no hesitancy in endorsing their methods, plans and doctrines, and cordially recommending them in their work. They are Christian men; they have Christian views of the work; they prosecute it by an appeal to Christian motives and arguments, and use no methods inconsistent with Christian propriety and policy. The basis of their work is total abstinence, and their objective point is prohibition. They lay the foundation by offering the pledge, and then by arguments, clear, strong and convincing, and an appeal to motives, high and sacred, they urge onward to the consummation of their object. Theirs is simply Christian work by Christian men, without any party politics. We are truly glad they came to Vicksburg.

R. J. JONES.

(This is the clipping referred to by our correspondent.—ED.)

"A summary of the work accomplished by the lecturers, and the people of this city who are interested in the anti-liquor movement, shows astonishing results. The blue ribbon brigade is now a most powerful organization, and the tiny knots of blue pinned on coat-lappels and dresses are of sufficient number to warrant the prediction that the trade in intoxicating drinks will decline considerably, for a time at least. Blue ribbons are now worn conspicuously by many men who were formerly noted for hard drinking, and several confirmed victims to strong drink have been reclaimed and have signed the pledge to abstain. Young men who have sworn to touch, taste or handle no more are also very numerous, and the gentlemen who have assisted during the lectures state that all of 1,200 new names have been added to the list of those who have renounced "John Barleycorn." The permanent temperance society in this city now has 313 charter members, and these have declared that they will not permit the feeling in favor of their principles to die out."

Reminiscence of Rev. G. D. Wade.

MR. EDITOR: Seeing the announcement of the death of that beloved veteran, Rev. G. D. Wade, calls to my mind vividly the last associations I had with him. We met on the train last spring, on our way to District Conference; were met at Winona by our good brother, John T. Turner, who kindly carried us to his home, where we spent a pleasant night with his delightful family. I shall never forget that night. At family prayer Bro. Wade sang, "Deliverance will come," and when he had finished we all felt that we were, as it were, in the very antechambers of heaven. He talked of death and dying with that composure that a Christian full of faith only can talk. I have no doubt all who were present remember the love-feast conducted by him on Sunday morning, at the Conference. After reading the fifteenth chapter of John's Gospel, he gave us such a kind exhortation of love and admonished all to meet him in heaven. He seemed to be impressed with the thought that he would never attend another District Conference, and so it has been ordered by divine Providence. One by one the landmarks pass over the river.

L. A. POWERS.

From the Work.

PLAQUEMINE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We began a meeting in Plaquemine four weeks ago and closed up last Thursday night. Great interest was manifested from the beginning, and God was with us from the first till the last. Men and women who had never been inside of a Methodist Church attended services, heard the gospel of peace and went away rejoicing, justified by faith in the blood of Christ. We received twenty-nine persons in the church—all grown except one little boy, aged fourteen years.

The people told me when I began the meeting that it would be a failure. A revival in Plaquemine? "Hard place!" they said. "Too many Catholics," some one would remark. I replied, that God had told me to go, and given the promise, "I will be with you"—hard place or no hard place, Catholic or no Catholic. God's promises are yea and amen in Christ Jesus. Nearly half of those who joined were formerly members of the Roman Catholic Church, and great many of them came forward for prayer. Methodism is getting a strong hold in this town.

Rev. Fitzgerald S. Parker was with us three days, and did excellent work. An old colored woman, who is a member of my church, heard Bro. Parker's father preach, some years ago, and said: "Dat man preaches like his fader; only he's wusser when it comes to fire and brimstone." The last week of our meeting I had Bro. H. D. Kimball to assist me. He got hold of the people at once and held them till the close. Bros. Kimball and Parker made many warm friends during their stay. To them I extend, through the ADVOCATE, many thanks for their zealous work. To God be all the glory. Amen!

W. WIMBERLY.

MT. CARMEL, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: This is one of the oldest circuits in the Mississippi Conference, and in former years was, I believe, the banner circuit in the Conference. Many of the first preachers of the Conference are well remembered by a number of these wide-awake Methodists, such as H. J. Harris, H. P. and W. B. Lewis, W. W. Hurst, Dr. Laney and others. Mt. Carmel circuit is now composed of six appointments, with a good and comfortable parsonage in the neat little town of Mt. Carmel. When we came here there was no furniture in the parsonage; but in a few days we found ourselves not only in a good parsonage, but in a well-furnished one. We are all delighted with our nice new house and the constant breeze which comes from all quarters and blows good things into our door. Then comes Quarterly Conference, and that brought to our homes our presiding elder, Dr. West, who, with his pleasant manner and soul-stirring sermons, made us feel that he was the right man in the right place; and, like a good overseer, looking after the interest of both preacher and people, he remained with us five days, and, though it rained all day, a number of stewards were present and paid nearly one-fourth of the assessment for preacher and presiding elder.

OLLIE.

CORNERSVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: As I am something of an optimist, I will give your readers a few notes from Cornersville that are encouraging. Not one of the many young folks who joined the church last year have gone back to the world that I know of. There is also an advance in finances. The cold winter has not killed the prayer meetings, thank the Lord! I like revivals; but if the effect is not living, practical Christianity, I do not think them a success.

The minutes of the North Mississippi Conference are before me. They reveal some facts that are encouraging. There is a net increase of membership of 1,998, and an increase of seven cents per member for foreign missions. We paid about twenty-three cents per member last year; but we will have to more than double our diligence if we pay fifty cents per member this year, and that is what we have promised. The style of the minutes is neat and plain. I have seen but few better. The minutes of the Conference at Kosciusko gave information of our ministers' relief association. The minutes of the Conference at Aberdeen gave a statistical history of the Conference and each member. Nearly all the minutes since I have been a member of the Conference gave a concise statement of the distribution of the domestic missionary fund; the minutes just received do not. I have never understood the method of that appropriation. From the Discipline, the Conference and the minutes I get all the information wanted but this—What is the basis of the appropriation? I see that it is not always the men who get the smallest salary from their circuits or missions; also I see that appropriations are made to districts when the presiding elder has received four times as much from the district as some of the preachers in the district received from their circuits or missions, who did not get anything from the Board. Will some one, who can, explain how the appropriations are made.

Mr. Editor, the next session of the Holly Springs District Conference will meet at Cornersville. It will embrace the fifth Sunday in July. We would like very much to have you with us. This charge needs stirring on the question of church literature, as an editor only can stir it. There are very few church papers taken here. They all agree with me that our papers are valuable; but they say they are not able to pay for them. But before I leave the house I usually find that from one to three political papers are received there weekly. Now, this ought not to be. Now, Mr. Editor, if you see Bishop Galloway in your route, bring him along with you. The people at Cornersville say he must come. Now, Mr. Editor, if you see proper to give this a place in your journal, I will see it again where I can read it better than I can here.

Fraternally, J. H. SMITH.

OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our protracted services closed at this place last evening with an interesting sermon from Bro. J. D. Hays, of Scranton, Miss. We have had twenty-nine accessions, and between seventy and eighty professed to be blessed during the meeting. Several family altars have been erected. In some of the families every professing Christian leads in prayer. The young men have organized themselves into a "Young Men's Christian Association," every one of whom prays in public. There are seventeen members. The Lord is doing a great work on this coast country. We propose to continue this battle against the powers of the evil one. I expect to hold a meeting at each of the following points as soon as I can make arrangements for them: Biloxi, Handsboro and Mississippi City, where the indications are fine for a good work. Our people feel very grateful to Bros. Evans, of St. Charles Avenue; Drake, of Moss Point; Bowen, of Bay St. Louis, and J. D. Hays, of Scranton, for their earnest labor among us. I regret to say the ADVOCATE hasn't the support on the coast that it ought to have. I hope our gracious revival will also prove a material benefit to your excellent paper in the way of an increased subscription list. Doctor, we would gladly have you assist us at some of our proposed meetings, and your visit would prove no detriment to your paper. We hope you will remember us in your prayers.

Your brother in Christ,

G. F. THOMPSON.

Death in the Water.

IS THE ELEMENT WE DRINK DECIMATING THE PEOPLE.

HOW A UNIVERSAL MENACE TO HEALTH MAY BE DISARMED.

A few years ago the people in a certain section in one of the leading cities of the State were prostrated with a malignant disease, and upon investigation it was found that only those who used water from a famous old well were the victims.

Professor S. A. Lattimore, analyst of the New York State Board of Health, upon analyzing water from this well, found it more deadly than the city sewage!

The filling up of the old well stopped the ravages of the disease.

Not long since the writer noticed while some men were making an excavation for a large building, a stratum of dark colored earth running from near the surface to hard pan. There it took another course toward a well near at hand. The water from this well had for years been tainted with the drainings from a receiving vault, the percolations of which had discolored the earth!

Terrible!

A similar condition of things exists in every village and city where well water is used, and though the filtering which the fluids receive in passing through the earth may give them a clear appearance, yet the poison and disease remains, though the water may look never so clear.

It is still worse with the farmer, for the drainage from the barn yard and the slops from the kitchen eventually find their way into the family well!

The same condition of things exists in our large cities, whose water supplies are rivers fed by little streams that carry off the filth and drainage from houses. This "water" is eventually drunk by rich and poor alike with great evil.

Some cautious people resort to the filter for purifying this water, but even the filter does not remove this poison, for water of the most deadly character may pass through this filter and become clear, yet the poison disguised is there.

They who use filters know that they must be renewed at regular periods, for even though they do not take out all the impurity, they soon become foul.

Now in like manner the human kidneys act as a filter for the blood, and if they are filled up with impurities and become foul, like the filter, all the blood in the system coursing through them becomes bad, for it is now a conceded fact that the kidneys are the chief means whereby the blood is purified. These organs are filled with thousands of hair-like tubes which drain the impurities from the blood, as the sewer pipes drain impurities from our houses.

If a sewer pipe breaks under the house, the sewage escapes into the earth and fills the house with poisonous gas; so if any of the thousand and one little hair-like sewer tubes of the kidneys break down, the entire body is affected by this awful poison.

It is a scientific fact that the kidneys have few nerves of sensation; and, consequently, disease may exist in these organs for a long time and not be suspected by the individual. It is impossible to filter or take the death out of the blood when the least derangement exists in these organs, and if the blood is not filtered then the uric acid, or kidney poison, removable only by Warner's safe cure, accumulates in the system and attacks any organ, producing nine out of ten ailments, just as sewer gas and bad drainage produce so many fatal disorders.

Kidney disease may be known to exist if there is any marked departure from ordinary health without apparent known cause, and it should be understood by all that the greatest peril exists, and is intensified, if there is the least neglect to treat it promptly with that great specific, Warner's safe cure, a remedy that has received the highest recognition by scientific men who have thoroughly investigated the character of kidney derangements.

They may not tell us that the cause of so many diseases in this organ is the impure water or any other one thing, but this poisonous water with its impurities coursing constantly through these delicate organs undoubtedly does produce much of the decay and disease which eventually terminate in the fatal Bright's disease, for this disease, alike among the drinking men, prohibitionists, the tobacco slave, the laborer, the merchant and the tramp, works terrible devastation every year.

It is well known that the liver which is so easily thrown "out of gear" as they say, very readily disturbs the action of the kidneys. That organ when deranged, immediately announces the fact by sallow skin, constipated bowels, coated tongue, and headaches, but the kidney when diseased, struggles on for a long time, and the fact of its disease can only be discovered by the aid of the microscope or by the physician who is skillful enough to trace the most indirect effects in the system to the derangement of these organs, as the prime cause.

The public is learning much on this subject and when it comes to understand that the kidneys are the real health regulators, as they are the real blood purifiers of the system, they will escape an infinite amount of unnecessary suffering, and add length of days and happiness to their lot.

Too Many Studies.

As we walk to and from our office, morning and evening, we meet the school-children on their way to and from school, and never fail to notice the big bundles or satchels of books they always carry. We wonder if they study all these books, and how they can attain and retain so many different kinds of knowledge in their immature brains. There must be an unnatural forcing somewhere that is permanently injuring the vital forces of these growing children. Dr. William A. Hammond has a very suggestive article on this subject in the April number of Popular Science Monthly, to which we invite the earnest attention of parents and guardians. There is no subject connected with the education of the young that is of more importance than this one of "Brain-Forcing." We make this extract from Dr. Hammond's article:

"Not very long ago a lady of this city brought her little daughter, twelve years of age, to see me professionally. The child was on her way to school, and had with her a large satchel full of books. She was pale, tall, and thin. The muscles of her face twitched convulsively, and she could not keep her hands and feet still. She was suffering from chorea, or St. Vitus' dance, and, in addition, had almost constant headache and other symptoms of nervous derangement. In the course of my examination I asked her to empty her satchel of the books it contained, and which, as she informed me, she had been studying that morning and the night before. This is the list:

"1. An English grammar. 2. A scholar's companion. 3. An arithmetic. 4. A geography. 5. A history of the United States. 6. An elementary guide to astronomy. 7. A temperance physiology and hygiene (whatever that may be). 8. A method of learning French. 9. A French reading-book.

"Nine in all—nine different subjects of knowledge which that poor child was required to study between the hours of three in the afternoon of one day and nine in the morning of the following day! Allowing one hour for dinner, half an hour for breakfast, an hour for undressing at night and dressing in the morning, an hour for going home and returning to school, and eight hours for sleep (and less than this will not suffice for a growing boy or girl—it had better be nine or ten), and we have six hours and a half left in which to study nine different branches of learning! Now, suppose either one of you ladies and gentlemen should retire to some quiet nook, and, with your well-developed and trained brains and experienced minds, should try to study nine unfamiliar subjects of knowledge in six hours and a half, would you think it strange if at the end of that time you should somewhat mix matters, and imagine that Hong-Kong is the name of a lunar volcano, that the Continental Congress is one of the parts of speech? She showed no such confusion of ideas. She had studied her lessons well, but she had done so at the expense of her brain substance. This is no flower of speech, but a sober fact. A very simple examination enabled me to satisfy myself that she was living on her brain capital instead of her brain income. Her expenditures were greater than her receipts, and brain bankruptcy was staring her in the face."

A New View of Our Lord.

A new picture has presented itself to our contemplation. It has been before our eyes ever since we could read the Scriptures; but we never saw it until to-day. Having eyes we see not. We have seen the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world in various attitudes; but we see him now in a new one in which we never saw him before. We have seen him on the mountain-side as he taught the multitudes, and on ship-board by the edge of the lake as he talked to those who stood on the shore; we have seen him as the guest of his friends, and as he sat by the well, talking to a woman; we have seen him in his mighty works, and in his glorious transfiguration; we have seen him giving thanks over the loaf and the cup; we have seen him in the garden when sweat like blood dropped from his face and hands; we have seen him before Pilate, and on Calvary, and in the grave; and afterwards, and when he ascended up into heaven out of sight. But until this day we never thought of him as standing up with his disciples around the table when the supper was instituted and lifting up his voice in song. "And when they had sung an hymn they went out into the Mount of Olives." (Matt. xxvi, 30.) Oh what music that must have been when the Lord Jesus Christ sang a hymn! Was ever anything like it heard in heaven? Forever sacred is the air of earth that voiced the melodies of that pure and gentle spirit. The music was in him, and as he sang the air took it up. Thank God for the privilege of breathing that air. We often think of him as praying, and often see him as he fell on his face in dreadful Gethsemane; only once is it said of him that he sang, and we seem now to see him in a new light, and to feel that we are closer to him than ever before. He was in deed and in truth the Son of God; but how verily like the Son of Man he seems when we see him singing! When we think of him as our Savior we are wont to exclaim, "My Lord and my God!" but when we see him singing we incline to exclaim, "My Brother!" He, like ourselves, had emotions which he could express only in verse, and in song. The succession of sweet sounds was to him as it is to us—a gratifying expression of sentiment: the spirit feasting on itself, as it were: pouring out its own melodies for itself to hear. Thus, too, he worshiped God. So, then, let us worship him. In the ear of God the song that Jesus sang is as present now as it ever was: he hears it now as if it were at the first, and our songs blend with his! Praise ye the Lord!—Christian Index.

THE most delicate constitution can safely use Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm: it is a sure remedy for coughs, loss of voice, and all throat and lung diseases.

The duty of the gospel preacher is to seek out acceptable words: but he has no liberty given him to seek out acceptable doctrines. He is bound to take the truths contained in Scripture, in full, as they are given. Scriptural doctrine is not acceptable to the natural heart of man, and only the power of the Holy Spirit can prepare a welcome for it in any human soul. We may trim our sails, therefore, but let us beware of shifting our cargo.—Watchman.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 20, 1881.

DR. A. BRADFIELD: Dear Sir—Some fifteen years ago I examined the recipe of Female Regulator, and carefully studied authorities in regard to its components, and then, as well as now, pronounce it to be the most scientific and skillful combination of the really reliable remedial vegetable agents known to science, to act directly on the womb and uterine organs, and the organs and parts sympathizing directly with these; and, therefore, providing a specific remedy for all diseases of the womb and of the adjacent organs and parts. Yours truly,

JESSE HORING, M. D., D. D.

We feel we must write something of the success of Hop Bitters. Their sale is treble that of any other article of medicine. Hence we feel it but justice to you and your Bitters to say that it is a medicine of real merit and virtue, and doing much good and effecting great cures.

Yours, J. F. & H. B. UTLEY.

HAYESVILLE, OHIO, Feb. 11, 1884.

I am very glad to say I have tried Hop Bitters, and never took anything that did me as much good. I only took two bottles and I would not take $100 for the good they did me. I recommend them to my patients, and get the best of results from their use.

Briefs.

Our preachers are ever on the lookout for something helpful, and we commend to their attention the following:

It is said that the Rev. George Jeffrey, of Glasgow, Scotland, has preached more than forty-six years to the same congregation; and to one of his former parishioners, now a New York merchant, Dr. Jeffrey explained the secret of his being able to interest the same audience so long. "I read every new book that has a bearing upon my special work," he said, "and make extracts from it and index them, so that at any moment I can find them when wanted. In this way I keep myself from moving in a rut. I work as hard as I used to at twenty, and I keep so far ahead with my sermons that there are always ten or fifteen lying in my drawer ready to receive the results of my last readings. I call them sleeping sermons, but it is they that sleep, and not the people that hear them."

In all the great enterprises that are to bless mankind the divine Providence takes the lead, and these leadings ought to be studied. Here is an interesting leading in an enterprise whose influence upon the human race can not be computed.

The first book ever printed was the Bible. The first Bible was printed between the years 1450 and 1455, at Mentz by Guttenberg—the reputed inventor of printing—a native of Strasburg, and Faust, who furnished the funds. It was completed in two folio volumes, 1,280 pages, on good paper, and for a long time after it was offered for sale, none, save printers themselves, knew how different copies could be fac-similies, as no two manuscripts could present such exactness. We marvel not that the Parisians, when Faust offered his copies for sale, were impressed with the horrible idea that he was assisted in his work by the "evil one." Eighteen copies of this first edition are said to be still extant. Four of these are printed on vellum; two in England, one in the Royal Library of Berlin, and one in Paris. Of the other twelve, ten are in England in public libraries, and two in the collections of different noblemen—Dinkersley.

The gain in membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church last year was 100,000. In the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it was 75,000. The former church now numbers over 2,000,000; the latter not quite 1,000,000. Putting both together, they amount to 3,000,000, and if we count their adherents, the number swells to about 15,000,000, which is about one-fourth of the population of the country. What a "huge host" that is! Both these great churches are looking at these hosts and throwing up their hands and boasting of their increasing numbers. But there is a little calculation which reveals a thing not to be boasted of. These churches began 1886 with 2,825,000 members. They closed it with 3,000,000. That simply reveals the awful fact that it took 2,800,000 members and 25,000 preachers and an immense amount of church machinery one whole year to convert 175,000 people. "Where is boasting then? It is excluded." When it requires 10,000 members and two preachers, working steadily for twelve solid months, to convert and bring one person into the church, there doesn't seem to be much room for glorification. And yet the teaching of the Bible is that one soul is worth even all that. So let the work go forward.

Our Church Colleges—A Question.

For quite a number of issues, the ADVOCATE has contained articles from various contributors on some phases of the College Question. This discussion was called forth by Bishop Galloway in an article in the issue of February 10. One object the Bishop had in view has been attained—that is, his communication has started an interesting symposium on this important topic. Nearly all the articles published have, expressly or tacitly, admitted the correctness of the Bishop's statement in regard to the indifference of the church to her schools. He said in that article, "There is a seeming indifference of the church to her own institutions—an indifference both in the way of patronage and moneyed offerings." While nearly all the writers on the subject have admitted the truth of this statement, the Bishop is the only one who has offered an opinion as to the cause of this indifference. He says: "Without considering many minor points, I venture to suggest that the cause of connectional education suffers most from too many colleges." Several writers have strenuously objected to this as being the cause of the indifference of the church to her schools, and yet, while admitting the indifference, have not attempted to account for it.

The indifference to her schools is the malady that seems to be afflicting the church just at this time. That these schools have done as good work in the past, and are doing as good work now as any other schools of like grade, no intelligent man will have the rashness to deny, and yet the general drift of opinion is, that "the church is indifferent to her own institutions." There is a vast deal published in our newspapers and periodicals at this very time about the value and importance of church schools, and every "ready writer" and every "fluent talker" is continually "ringing the changes" on the inestimable worth of a Christian education, and yet there is indifference! With these church schools all about us doing good work, with these effusions of prolific pens pouring out weekly and monthly from the press, and these eloquent appeals of earnest orators sounding from pulpit and rostrum, this indifference of the church to her institutions is marvelous to an extreme degree. To a careful observer, this indifference is real and, therefore, a just cause for anxiety, if not for alarm. If anyone doubts its reality, he has only to consult the catalogues of our schools, and note the fact plainly published to the world that not one of them is full of students, and the very fewest of them have any endowment. That there are thousands of Methodist children in the land is a fact. That there are hundreds of Methodist parents abundantly able to send their children to college is another fact. Now, when we put these facts together, we are forced to the conclusion that if our people were not indifferent in this matter, our schools would be full and running over with Methodist students. There can be doubt about the disease. To cure a disease permanently we must find out and remove the cause. What is the cause of this indifference? The Bishop "suggests," as the cause, "too many colleges." This suggestion has been proved incorrect by one writer, who shows that we have enough Methodist children of the educable age to fill a great many more colleges than we own. Does this indifference arise from the fact that our schools are less thorough in their teaching than other schools? There is not a man who can prove such a proposition. Is it because tuition is cheaper in other schools? The fact is just the opposite. The indifference seems plain to everybody. The cause of it seems mysterious to everybody. If we could call the church to the bar of judgment to give a reason for this indifference, it is doubtful if she could do so. In our experience, as individuals, we sometimes become indifferent to certain things, and we know not why: and all attempts to analyze our feelings and find the cause are futile, and all we can say is, "I don't care for it, and I don't know why."

We have been long pondering over this very question of our church schools, and have come to the conclusion that our chief trouble is fundamental to our whole system (?) of education by the church. The question we had in view when we wrote the caption of this article, and which we now ask our readers, is this: Is not this indifference on the part of our people toward our own schools an indication that, as a church, we occupy a false attitude toward the great subject of Christian education? We shall see.

"A Suggestion:" Dissent and Endorsement.

BY "MARCUS."

If Conference endorsement is not only cheap, but even hurtful, as some of our brethren contend, may we not reasonably conclude that that of an individual, who enters as only one of numerous factors to make up such a body, is proportionately so? If so, then the fact that that "suggestion" still survives and endures endorsement is conclusive evidence of marvelous vitality. Had its author sown with intent to raise a crop of echoes he could not have been more successful. Stone walls have been known to "endorse" very much after the manner of some of these good brethren. By-the-way, does it not appear just a little bit inconsistent for a man to "spread himself most to death," as part of an Annual Conference, in order to "cover" a lot of colleges, and then "spread himself most to death," again, to endorse a suggestion to kill the last one of them? My object, however, is to notice the article by "Barnabas," in your issue of March 17; to dissent from some things therein written, and to "endorse" some others.

Is it not barely possible that more than two of us may be troubled with subjectivity in this matter? Human nature, we know, is rather prone to that sort of thing. Whenever the work of "degradation;" "correlation" and "centralization" commences, it is highly probable that "Barnabas," for instance, will be extremely apt to think that his school, or that which he patronizes, is the fittest—the one, par excellence, for exaltation, endorsement and other suggested favors. Is it not even possible that this thought unwittingly gave color and direction to his article? A little introspection and close analysis will discover the fact that, with most of us, strictly impersonal views are very rare and difficult of entertainment. It is conceivable, to say the least of it, that one might so dwell upon—not to say, brood over—the unfortunate decadence of his favorite institution that, in his perplexed search for remedial expedients, he might be betrayed into an attempt to resuscitate his own at the expense of others. A drowning man, however good and wise and large-minded under other circumstances, has never been regarded a very safe companion: he is apt to see things from only his point of view, and make it unpleasant, if not calamitous, for even the stoutest and most skillful swimmer within reach. Now, it may be a very proper paradox, but has the appearance of a somewhat significant coincidence, that two of the most prominent advocates of the affirmative side of this question are, at the same time with this discussion, laboring most zealously and unfeignedly in the interest of a college. It occurs to me, then, that somewhat of mental obliquity would be required to escape the conviction that solicitude for the success of particular institutions had something to do with forming the decision that our church colleges are too numerous. This conclusion would, at least, be as reasonable a one as that "A. and B. naturally see the subject as it affects the institutions over which they preside."

System. I am prepared to endorse most heartily the cry for an educational system, but not such a system as that suggested. True, we can not at present, for obvious reasons, have a college perfectly equipped in every pastoral charge, nor even in the Southern Methodist Church; but shall we on this account deny our youth instruction in the higher branches of education? Shall we have no collegiate training where a specialist can not be employed to teach each branch, or where there is not an apparatus of regulation value or a library of Alexandrian proportions? Shall we have only primary or preparatory schools for the masses and centralize our higher educational facilities where they can be reached by only a favored few? To all this I am as unalterably opposed as I would be to systematizing our pulpit work upon the same plan. About as well might the Bishop over an Annual Conference say to one of our preachers: "My brother, we are going to correlate your charge with a great central institution for teaching the higher doctrines of religion; so you must be careful to confine yourself to the preaching of the 'principles of the doctrine of Christ,' and say nothing about 'perfection.' If your people should aspire to anything so advanced, they must go up to Nashville, or some other central point, where we shall have a specialist who has given his life to preparation for teaching this doctrine. Should they be unable to go—as some few of them likely will be—or to see the wisdom and economy of this arrangement, that will be their misfortune, and not our fault. The facilities will be there, and can not be supplied in every charge, or even in every Conference."

Federation, upon a proper basis, will find no warmer supporter than this writer; for in this is our hope of deliverance from all the real difficulties in the way of education. Federation will be speedily and naturally followed by uniformity of text books and curriculums, if not methods; and this, with a little quickening of professional zeal, will be at least one step in the solution of the college problem. Let the principals and presidents of church institutions of learning, with one or more trustees of each—say, within the territory of this ADVOCATE's patronizing Conferences—come together in convention at some central point at an early date, and there and then discuss and act; all of which may afterwards be submitted to the proper authorities for approval.

THE OLD-NEW CENTRAL.—This old "stand-by"—the Nashville Advocate—came to us this week in a new dress, neat-fitting and tasteful. It is not only improved in that particular, but we see a steady advance in other lines, and we are glad to see it. May our brethren soon get into the "regions beyond" the fifty-thousand horizon. Indeed, we would like to see that horizon lifted away entirely.

The District Conference of New Orleans district convenes to-day in Carondelet Street Church, Bishop Duncan presiding.

Still They Die—Murdered by the State.

I stood by the grave of a young husband and father of whom friends, as they walked in the funeral procession, said, regretfully: "What a pity that he could not control himself! He was a useful and clever man, and, but for drink, he might have lived much longer." He was consigned to an untimely grave, as his predecessor in office had been just a year before.

I asked myself, Is no one responsible for such premature taking away of worthy men from home and country forever? Thus thousands go who frequent the place of drink. And who are the proprietors of the drinking-houses? The State, the country and the city council. They allow them for a price, and justify them for gain. They permit men to set death-traps at every cross road and at every street corner, by means of which men are brought to ruin and death by the thousand.

How unfortunate that a movement which has for its object the closing of these places of destruction should be even slightly retarded by being somewhat misunderstood, both by its friends and its foes. Its friends expect too much, and its foes too little, of it. Some of both seem to think that prohibitionists would stop people from drinking by force, which is not the case. They would simply stop themselves from setting temptation in the way of others. "Lead us not into temptation," we pray; and it is wicked in us to set it before others. Take the temptation away, and the drinking will grow constantly less. Hence the saying that "prohibition does not prohibit" is the most lying of truths. No one expects all drinking to be stopped by it at once; but all should expect it to be immensely and rapidly diminished by it, as has been the case wherever it has been honestly tried. Those who die of drink are in part murdered by the State and county that furnishes them the means of destruction. The State sets the death-traps; some are too wise to be caught, many are not. Reader, will the blood of any that die be required at your hands?

Thank God, the States of this Union are ablaze with the prohibition sentiment and movement, and the whole Christian world is catching the spirit of the grandest civil reformation, so far, of the nineteenth century!

Letter from Grenada, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am sure that your recent "visit to this thrifty little city" will bear fruit in multiplying the readers of the noble ADVOCATE. Grenada was pleased and profited by that visit, and the family in the parsonage were specially delighted. I am glad that your eyes were on the spot "to find what a magnificent college building the Methodists of North Mississippi have here." If these Methodists could see as you saw, they would not be less surprised. Our people do not yet know what they have in this substantial and ample building, and in the school so well conducted under its roof. "Why is it that 32,000 Methodists and over 100 traveling preachers do not rally immediately to the rescue of this school, free it from debt and start it on an untrammeled course of usefulness for the future women of North Mississippi?" Do our people know that it is their own property, located in one of the most desirable and important sections of the State, and that the enterprise is a vital factor in the work of that Christian education which we must give to the children? There would have been no debt on this school if crushing disasters had not fallen upon the brave men who had pledged themselves for the purchase money, which they intended should secure the school as a gift in fee simple to the North Mississippi Conference. The debt is not the result of any mismanagement or misjudgment either in the purchase or conduct of the school, but of unavoidable disaster to the people of Grenada. Let no one suppose that this people have not already done much for this school; they have, indeed, paid thousands of dollars, and they are still paying out of what is left from fire and pestilence. They recognize the importance of this school to them, and would no doubt in time free it from its present debt; but will that suffice us, as Methodists, in this Conference? Are we prepared to receive and use such a school at the cost of others' sacrifices, when the real needs appeal to our own fidelity and liberality? Is not the cause, as well as the property, our own? Every Methodist, by his membership, by the very doctrinal and spiritual atmosphere he breathes, is a partisan of Christian education in his own denomination. A far greater emphasis of this must be put upon the conscience and effort of our people. Here is an opportunity in Grenada Collegiate Institute to do good and great things. The money and sympathy and prayer put in here will not be lost, but will bear fruit in many ways in the legitimate work of our Conference. The pulses of intellectual and spiritual life sent out from this center will warm and nourish the whole body. Let me earnestly urge our people to make haste and secure each his part in this enterprise and benefit. This appeal is not made because the school is likely to die; on the other hand, it is made because it has shown a surprising power of life and a healthy vigor of progressive activity.

Thank you, Mr. Editor, for your appreciative notice of our Conference school. From the top of its ample dome you saw Grenada and the far hills and valleys around. When these pupils ascend its scholastic dome, they shall see with intellectual eyes a world of far more wonderful and engaging beauties and powers. I feel quite sure you shall have the pleasure of recording great success for our school in the future of its life and work. I trust that the noble example of the "three men," who have "cleared away an obstruction to the progress of Whitworth College," will "stimulate some member or members to do a like service for Grenada Collegiate Institute."

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

Jackson District Conference.

The Jackson District Conference was held in Edwards, Miss., last week. Bishop Galloway presided and preached to the edification of us all. The preachers' reports indicated advance on many important lines of church work. We had a pleasant visit of two days, attending the Conference in the interest of the ADVOCATE; thence to Jackson to spend the Sabbath as the guest of Col. W. L. Nugent, the first recollections of whom are forever associated with these words: Jam primum omnium satis constat, Troja capta, in cæteros sævitum esse Trojanos, etc. The new church in Jackson is nearing completion and will be dedicated some time next month.

Good News.

MR. EDITOR: Please acknowledge in behalf of the ministerial students of the Mississippi Conference the receipt of fifty dollars from L. N. Dantzler, of Moss Point. This makes sixty-five dollars from Moss Point this year. Who will do better?

Twenty-six States and Territories have provided for the instruction of their youth in "scientific temperance."

Notes.

"High license" is in the death struggle, fighting for its life. It has put on the strength of despair. And what is it after all? It is the government voluntarily participating in the cause of the liquor traffic. It is the State insisting that it shall come in for a handsome percentage of the blood-money. But the revolution against the whole iniquitous business is daily acquiring a momentum that in the end will level everything before it. "Revolutions never go backwards."

Do good with your money while you can supervise it yourself. Here is a case to encourage you: Some years before his death Mr. George Peabody established a poor fund in London, and contributed $2,500,000 to it. He directed, and saw the directions carried into effect, that it should be used to provide better houses for the poor. There are now 5,014 separate dwellings, containing 11,150 rooms, and the average rent of each dwelling is $5 per month. In the meantime the $2,500,000, through rent and interest, has grown to $4,513,340. Mr. Peabody started his money and watched it moving in a good direction before he went hence. "Go thou, and do likewise."

We seriously advise some of our contributors to study the Latin language. You may think you are too old; but you are mistaken. One of the old Romans learned the Greek language after he had passed his three-score and ten. The Latin language is admirable for its holding capacity—that is, you can pack a great deal in a few words. An old Latin writer would never think of using five words to say, "He has read the book." He could just use two words—"Librum legit." He would scorn to use eight words when he wanted to say, "He has written the end of the book." He could simply use three—"Librî finem imposuit." Study this language to get the art of brevity, and then, instead of sending us a communication that will run over three columns, you will send us one that will not go much over one. We actually have not the courage to print a three-column article. Verbum sap.

In the April number of the Eclectic Magazine, we find an article taken from the Spectator, on "The Progress of Savage Races," in which the writer, apparently a scientist, presents one or two problems of savage life which weakens his faith in the general theory of progress which has been propounded. He says there is no "unquestioned proof" that the black races are progressed, except under contact. "Left to himself, the Negro remains where he was or retrogrades. We do not see in him the operation of any self-generated law of progress. It seems to us that modern cheerfulness has infected scientific men, and in their eagerness to hope to show that natural science presages a great future for man, they leave out of view some unpleasant facts which militate against their theory." The writer then closes his article in these words:

"We can see a hope for him in the Christian theory, which assigns to the negro as to Newton, two lives: yes; but on the scientific one, we see nothing for him, if he remains unconquered and of unmixed blood, except doubtful probability of advance at a rate which the human mind can scarcely discern, and which, as a factor in history, it is useless even to consider. Judged by Christianity, the savage has a future; but judged by history and science, the best thing that could happen to him would be to disappear as rapidly as possible, and make room for the useful people, who two centuries hence will have scarcely room to breathe."

So then, according to this scientific writer, the only hope of the savages is in Christian missions. Christ loved them and commanded his church to give them the gospel. Science was a long time finding out what Christ knew when he said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Bro. Price, of the Holston Methodist, hits some heavy blows, and he generally hits the nail "plump on the head." Here is what he says about certain church members, "so called:"

"Drinking, dancing, card-playing Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Episcopallans are doing more to bring Christianity into disrepute than Ingersoll and the whole cohort of infidels in the land.

"And yet that very class of church people imagine that by some sort of spiritual legerdemain they will be landed within the gates of glory as soon as they die! The Bible says, 'Except ye repent, ye shall perish.'"

The revival meetings in Felicity Street Church and Carrollton will continue with increasing interest and power. There have been several conversions and accessions during the week, and the meetings will continue.

The charitable gifts of the Broadway Tabernacle Church, New York, of which Dr. William M. Taylor is pastor, during the sixteen years of his pastorate, have amounted to $425,000.

The Missionary Student Accepted.

MR. EDITOR: It affords me great pleasure to be able to announce that Miss L. Elizabeth Hughes, of Daleville, Miss., has been examined and accepted by the Woman's Board of Missions in Nashville, and has been assigned to the work in China, with Miss Gordon, of Columbus, Miss. It will be remembered that Miss Hughes was educated in East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss., where she was supported for two years by contributions from liberal donors in this State and adjoining States. She graduated with highest honor last June, and passed her examination in Nashville with great credit to herself and her alma mater. It gives the writer a peculiar satisfaction to realize that the contributions sent to him to help him educate this young lady have been properly appropriated, and the object for which the money was given accomplished. Miss Hughes is now preparing to leave for China in October next. The Board of Missions will require $200 for her outfit. It will doubtless afford the original contributors to this young lady's education, and others who did not thus contribute, great pleasure to aid at once in making up this amount and thereby relieve the Board. As this young lady goes forth from the Mississippi Conference, each auxiliary society of the Conference also will feel it a privilege to contribute.

All contributions will be thankfully received and acknowledged, and can be sent to Mrs. J. M. Chatfield, of Meridian, Miss., or to

A. B. M'VOY.

MERIDIAN, MISS., April 2, 1887.

Complimentary Resolutions.

Whereas, The Rev. J. W. Lee, D. D., of Atlanta, Ga., delivered a superior lecture on the subject—"The Philosophy of Small Men"—in New Orleans, at Grunewald Opera House, April 1, 1887, for the benefit of repairs to the St. Charles Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we, the Board of Stewards of said church, take great pleasure in giving expression to our gratitude for, and appreciation of, the lecture; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we tender Dr. Lee our sincere thanks for his generous donation.

Resolved, That we most heartily commend his lecture as a masterly argument against the materialistic tendencies of the day, as a powerful appeal for the higher and broader cultivation of the moral, intellectual and esthetic faculties of our nature, and as a literary production of rare merit, abounding with the chastest wit and humor.

Resolved, That the fragrance of the consecrated intellectuality and godly conversation of Dr. Lee will long abide with us as an inspiration to a better life.

Resolved, That our hearts and homes will ever be found open to give a hearty welcome to Dr. Lee.

NEW ORLEANS, April 4, 1887.

Resolutions of the Jackson District Conference in Regard to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Resolved, That we are much gratified at the presence of Dr. C. W. Carter, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, among us.

Resolved, That we regard the present conduct of the paper, editorially and mechanically, as a success, reaching well up to the standard of its distinguished past.

Resolved, That we, as members of this District Conference, lay and clerical, will use more heartily than heretofore earnest effort to put the ADVOCATE in the hands of all our people.

Chronic Coughs and Colds,

And all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, can be cured by the use of Scott's Emulsion, as it contains the healing virtues of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites in their fullest form. Is a beautiful creamy Emulsion, palatable as milk, easily digested, and can be taken by the most delicate. Please read: "I consider Scott's Emulsion the remedy par-excellence in Tuberculous and Strumous Affections, to say nothing of ordinary colds and throat troubles."—W. R. S. CONNELL, M. D., Manchester, O.

Personals.

Dr. Morrison, of Atlanta, about whose transfer so much was said, is reported to have received into his church an average of one member a day since he took charge. And he a transfer!

Rev. John T. Sawyer, presiding elder of the New Orleans district, will preach the commencement sermon at Centenary College, May 29.

W. W. Corcoran, the Washington City banker and philanthropist, is eighty-nine years old, and is said to be rapidly failing.

Mrs. J. J. Astor has been the instrument of procuring homes in the West for 1,413 boys and girls of New York City, and it has cost her the sum of $20,656.

"Three men in Baltimore are so nearly alike that they can not be told apart, and yet they are total strangers to each other." Some modern Shakespeare must be playing a "Comedy of Errors" among the Baltimoreans.

Senator Hoar is said to be giving the finishing touches to a translation of Thucydides. Toying with the classics seems to be a favorite recreation with some statesmen.

Two Princeton students, Messrs. Forman and Wilder, have visited sixty institutions of learning during the past winter, for the purpose of arousing missionary interest, and have secured the names of a thousand persons who are "willing and desirous to enter the foreign missionary work." The meaning of that—who can tell?

Hon. Yung Wing, a native Chinaman, has been elected president of the Connecticut Congregational Club. He has been in this country twenty years, and his wife is a Hartford lady.

Capt. Haines, of the Cunarder "Aurania," on a recent trip, having found out that two gamblers were on his ship plying their trade, warned them that if they played another game, he would put them in irons.

Mr. R. R. Doherty, assistant editor of the New York Christian Advocate, is in our Southland, seeking recuperation and health.

It is due Bro. Singleton to state that his article, recently published, on "Grammatical and Critical," contained a quotation from Prof. Goulet's "Commentary." The quotation marks were overlooked both by the printer and proof-reader. This made the brother appear in a false position.

Items of Interest.

Crime must be running rampant in this land. It is said that in 1850 there were 7,000 prisoners in all our prisons; in 1880 there were 59,000, and in 1886 there were 76,000.

Arrangements are being perfected for the erection in Chicago of a $500,000 Woman's Christian Temperance Union building, to be used as headquarters for the national officers.

There are 50,000 suicides annually in Europe, Paris leading in proportion to population.

The world moves. A Christian has been appointed Minister of Finance to the Sublime Porte, in Constantinople.

Beer brewing is on the increase. In 1885 there 19,642,870 barrels brewed, but in 1886 there were brewed 21,912,422.

The population of Cincinnati has in twenty-six years increased 125,000. Methodism in the same time has increased less than 850. So says the Western Christian Advocate, of March 23.

The pastor of our church in Murfreesboro, Tenn., has a Bible class of thirty-four persons, their ages ranging from twenty years to seventy-seven.

The third Sunday in May was set apart by the General Conference as Children's Day, to be observed throughout our church with appropriate ceremonies.

Our brethren in the empire of Texas have gone into the prohibition campaign with an enthusiasm that will carry all before it. They vote on the question the first Tuesday in August, and we expect to hear that they have won the battle.

A Sunday-school of the Methodist Church in Wilmington, Del., has given to missions $38,000 in twenty-one years.

Fifty-five cottages were burned at Chautauqua recently, loss being estimated at $100,000. No public buildings were burned, and there are 500 cottages remaining.

The average age of the 875 Congregationalist ministers who have died in the last ten years was sixty-six; the average length of service, thirty-five years.

Somebody has made the calculation that a tea-days' drink bill in this country equals all the money contributed for missions in twelve months.

John Wanamaker's store in Philadelphia has fifty-two departments, and covers an area of about fourteen acres of space.

Tulane University graduated fifty-seven in medicine and fourteen in pharmacy last week.

Louisiana Notes.

The governor has appointed R. P. Webb, notary public, parish of Claiborne.

C. B. Thibault, sheriff of Plaquemine, closed his books the first instant, and settled with the auditor for the quarter ending March 31, 1887.

Mr. L. Nampan, a leading druggist of Clinton, died Saturday, the twenty-sixth instant.

A forest fire, originating in Mississippi, recently burned down through St. Helena parish into Livingston, destroying a great deal of fencing and other property en route.

An agricultural association is soon to be organized in West Baton Rouge.

A party of prospectors from Birmingham, Ala., visited Gibbs, last week, and decided to establish a furnace there. They say that the quality of ore is equal to that at Birmingham.

There are 200 pupils attending the colored public school at Smoky Bend, Ascension parish.

An agricultural association has been permanently organized in Assumption parish, with Thomas D. Kent as president.

Mr. F. T. Whited, formerly of Ouachita, is erecting a factory building in Shreveport, where he will manufacture wagon spokes and do general wood work.

Robeline has a publishing company with a capital stock of $1,500.

In Point Coupee parish many of the back fences of fields have been moved from six to ten acres further back. This gives an increase of cultivable land of about twenty-five per cent., and is the result of the building of Morganza levee.

The cotton compress at Bayou Sara seems to be an assured fact. The plant will cost $10,000, $15,000 of which has already been subscribed.

The Police Jury of Point Coupee parish have fixed the Texas Pacific railway assessment at $6,000 per mile, provided the railroad pays the parish taxes in currency.

Attention!

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground, on the grounds, on Friday, the fifteenth instant, at half-past eight A. M. A full attendance of the Board is urgently requested, as business of importance will be taken up.

Parties desiring to build this year, or having lots assigned them, will please make application to the secretary before the meeting. Tenters desiring to sell or rent their tents will please report same in time for approval by the trustees at the approaching meeting. W. H. FOSTER, President.

E. P. MACKIE, Secretary.

Mississippi Notes.

Jackson had a $20,000 fire on the thirtieth ultimo.

Work will be begun at once on the Union depot, at Meridian. It will cost $36,000.

The public hydrants will cost the city of Natchez $4,800 per year.

In addition to the right-of-way, Columbus guarantees the Decatur road $250,000.

The Tombigbee River Stave and Heading Factory shipped last week from Aberdeen, 50,000 oil and whisky barrels to Mobile and St. Louis.

An ice factory and compress will soon be started at Brookhaven.

Since March 16, 562 bushels of green peas have been shipped from Osyka to Northern and Western markets.

The ladies of Coffeeville have organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The Greenville street railway, connecting the wharf boat and hotels with the depot, in all two miles of track, has been completed. Cars have been ordered, and will be received Tuesday.

Farming operations in Tallahatchee county are progressing satisfactorily. Corn is all planted, and cotton land ready. Labor is plentiful, and working well.

The Supreme Court has decided that the ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen of Bay St. Louis, prohibiting the erection of buildings on private property on the water side of the shell-road, is illegal, and the section of the city charter which gives the Board that power is unconstitutional.

The new Methodist Church at Greenwood was dedicated by Bishop Galloway last week.

The State Dental Association will meet at Meridian in May.

Tate county is suffering from the presence of buffalo gnats.

Senator Walthall will address the people of Port Gibson, on "Decoration Day," this year.

There is not a single prisoner in Attala county jail.

Mr. Christian Schwartz sold from his Morrille Plantation, near Natchez, last week, 500 bales of cotton.

MR. EDITOR: I don't know whether you wish to make an item of it or not; but I report to you that things are moving on finely in Baton Rouge. Last night the altar was crowded with mourners, and three joined the church. Before the morning sermon I took the foreign missions' collection. The assessment was $255, and we received in cash and good subscriptions $282 80—considerably over the assessment.

Yours, etc.,

J. T. SAWYER.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 125 Canal Street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

Our Young People.

A CURIOUS CHARACTER.

I'm a curious little curled-up imp,
My back is like a bow;
And, though I've neither legs nor feet,
I'm always on the go.
In wagon and in carriage
I'm always to be found;
I never walk upon the earth,
But burrow in the ground.
I haven't an ounce of sense,
Of wit I've not a pound,
But with knowledge and intelligence
I always do abound.
In everything I have a place,
At beginning and at ending;
And, though I am a little elf,
There's much on me depending.
Without my help none would be gay,
Brave knights would be less knightly,
And every little winsome sprite
Be sure to be less sprightly.
Without my help the grave would rave,
And ghosts in hosts appear,
Bald-headed gents, sedate and grave,
Wigless, be filled with fear,
To lose their wigs and goggles too;
But, much more to be dreaded,
The gay, the grave, the girls and gents,
Would surely be beheaded.
I've told you all I dare to tell
Without to you confessing
My name in full, which, you will find,
Is only got by guessing.

—Presbyterian Observer.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years of age. I go to school to Miss Willie Hart, of Hazlehurst. I love her very much. I joined the church at Rehoboth last year. Bro. Guice is our pastor this year. Dr. Campbell is our Sunday-school superintendent. The Sunday-school has not been doing very well this winter on account of bad weather, as ours is a country church; but we are expecting to have an interesting Sunday-school now, as winter is nearly over. I will now answer Annie Brock's question: Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus buried Jesus. I will close by asking the cousins a question: What king was eaten of worms and gave up the ghost because he gave not God the glory?

Your little friend,

CARRIE GOZA.

MILLSAP, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eleven years old. I have never written a letter to your good paper; but, seeing so many letters from the little people, I thought I would write one. My father takes your paper, and I love to read it. It is always a welcome visitor. I am going to school every day. I think so much of my teacher. He is so kind to me. His name is Mr. Bonnett. We have no Sunday-school now, but it will start soon. Oh, how glad I will be! As this is my first, I will close by asking one question: What king was buried in his father's sepulchre?

Your little friend,

DEBBIE RINEHART.

RESTON, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: This is the first letter I have ever written to the ADVOCATE. My grandfather is Methodist, and he takes this valuable paper. I like to read the little cousins' letters. Bro. Thompson is our pastor. I go to school. My teacher's name is Mrs. Thompson. I love her dearly. I will answer Laura C. King's question: Methuselah was the oldest man that ever lived, whose father was Enoch, who did not die, but was translated. With good wishes to the ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your little friend,

NANNIE L. M'CLURE.

OCEAN SPRINGS, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As it is raining to-day, and as I can not go to school, I will write my first letter to the dear ADVOCATE. I am a little girl going to school. Our teacher's name is W. M. Duke. My pa takes the dear ADVOCATE, and I like to read the nice little letters that the little folks write to you. Our pastor is J. H. Evans. We all love him very much. He preaches for us once a month. I will close by answering Amanda Hollingsworth's question: Moses was buried in the valley of Moab. I am,

Yours truly,

R. F. HOLDER.

HAMLET, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy nine years old. I never have written to any paper; but I see so many letters from the little folks that I will write a short letter to your good paper. My papa takes the ADVOCATE. I go to school to Mr. Collins. We have no Sunday-school now, but will soon. I hope to see my letter in print, as it is my first; and I want to surprise my grandmamma. I will close by asking a question: What king was a shoulder taller than any of the people? Much love to the dear old ADVOCATE. I remain,

Your little friend,

MARVIN P. HODGES.

COTTON VALLEY, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old, and have never written a letter to any paper; but papa takes your good paper, and I like to read the other little cousins' letters. I go to school with my little sister every day; and we like our teacher very much because she is so good and kind to us. And we have Sunday-school once a month. There are four of us in a class together; and we are all members of the church. We have preaching once a month. Bro. A. P. Cox is our pastor, and we all like him very much. I hope that all the little cousins who write to your paper are trying to live Christians. I would like to see this in print.

Your little friend,

LULY P. WALKER.

HE-NO, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy eight years old. I love to read the children's letters in the ADVOCATE, and I thought I would write one. I am going to school to my Uncle Jeff Liddell. He has only one arm; but sometimes he uses that with a small switch. He lost his other arm in the war. I love to go to school. I am studying history, spelling, writing, geography, arithmetic, and reading in fourth reader. I go to Sunday-school. Mr. Ed Hicks is our superintendent, and also teacher of my class. Bro. Bradford is our pastor this year. We love him very much. As this is my first letter to the ADVOCATE, I hope to see it among the letters. I remain,

Your little friend,

Sleeplessness.

Narcotics and sedatives murder sleep; the unnatural stupor is soon followed by ill effects. Simmons Liver Regulator removes the cause of restlessness and sleeplessness by regulating the bowels, establishing good digestion and by quieting the nerves.

"I have been a great sufferer from dyspepsia and loss of sleep. As soon as I feel the least nervous I take a dose of Simmons Liver Regulator, and sleep all night."

MRS. R. BRYANT, Griswoldsville, Ga.

Garfield and His Mother.

There was much in President Garfield's career to make him a popular hero, but no act of his life, probably, struck to the heart of the nation more directly than when, after taking the oath of office, he stepped down from the platform and kissed his old mother.

The same chord is touched when we read in the life of the most successful Scotchman who ever came to the New World to seek his fortune, that upon returning to shower gold and blessings on the little village which he had left a penniless boy, he gave them in the name of his mother. The proudest moment of his life, he declared, was that in which he brought her back in a kind of royal progress to the town where she had been a working-woman.

The tragedy of Lear is based upon a pathos that is real and immediate in the lives of the poorest persons, as well as in that of kings. Not only Lear, but the slave, knows how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child.

"There comes," says a German writer, "a crisis in the relations of every son to his mother and father. It is when he reaches the age when he can intelligently show appreciation of the service they have rendered. He is apt to take all the self-sacrifice, which perhaps has impoverished their lives, as a mere matter of course. There is no drop of misery in life so bitter as that which the mother tastes in the careless indifference of her daughter."

Tourgenieff, in his "Fathers and Sons," a book which revolutionized thought in Russia, draws this commonplace tragedy of domestic life with terrible power. The simple-hearted old father and mother make home ready with tears of delight for the long-absent boy, only to find that home, and father and mother, alike are tedious and ridiculous in his eyes.

Boys, who live nearer to us than the steppes of Russia, sometimes rate the little learning and polish which they have gained above the noble qualities of soul in those to whom they owe all—even life.

There is a story of two brothers from Rhodes who, having been trained by their father, won the victory at the Olympian games. With one impulse, they carried their laurels to the old man, crowned him, and carried him in triumph around the arena. The spectators showered flowers upon them, crying, "Die, now, Dragoras! There is nothing better left for you in life!"—Youth's Companion.

Farm and Home.

HOW TO KEEP THE HANDS SOFT.—A little ammonia or borax in the water you wash your hands with, and that water just lukewarm, will keep the skin clean and soft. A little oatmeal mixed with the water will whiten the hands. Many use glycerine on the hands when they go to bed, wearing gloves to keep the bedding clean; but glycerine makes some skins harsh and red. These people should rub their hands with dry oatmeal, and wear gloves in bed. The best preparation for the hands at night is white of egg with a grain of alum dissolved in it. "Roman toilet paste" is merely white of egg, barley flour and honey. They say it was used by the Romans in olden times. Anyway it is a first-rate thing; but it is a mean sticky sort of stuff to use, and does not do the work any better than oatmeal. The roughest and hardest hands can be made soft and white in a month's time by doctoring them a little at bed-time. All the tools you need are a nail-brush, a bottle of ammonia, a box of powdered borax, and a little fine white sand to rub the stains off, or a cut of lemon, which will do even better, for the acid of the lemon will clean anything. Manicures use acids in the shop; but the lemon is quite as good, and is not poisonous, while the acids are.—New York Analyst.

THE SUCCESSFUL FARMER.—Life on the farm is wholly different in some respects from life in the city. The dweller in the city may not need to get to his business before eight o'clock in the morning, and has no need to be in a hurry. The farmer, on the other hand, finds his dependants, the fowls, the cattle, horses, etc., ready for his attention by the first gleam of morning light. These and other duties must be got out of the way before the regular day's work begins; and the latter must be begun in good time, in order that it may be pushed along; otherwise, it will do the pushing, to the disadvantage of the master, all day.

Some one has said that he never knew a farmer to fail in business who got up regularly at four o'clock A. M. Be this as it may, beyond all question "the morning is the cream of the day." It is in vain, however, to think of getting up early if one remains awake until ten or eleven o'clock at night. The whole—not part—of the old couplet must be kept in mind:

"Early to bed, and early to rise,
Makes a man healthy and wealthy and wise."

HEALTH HINTS FOR CHILDREN.—Let children romp in the dirt out of doors. They need the vigor of the outer world. Don't send children to school, unless they are robust, before they are seven years of age, and then for not more than two or three hours a day. Never deprive a child of sleep or food, as punishment. Always let a child sleep as long as it desires to, if the sleep be natural. Fathers and mothers, as you value the physical, moral and spiritual welfare of your sons and daughters, tell them "what they ought to know" concerning those duties to themselves and others which they do not understand, and, unless you tell them, can not find out except from depraved and demoralizing persons or literature! Secret uncleanliness and self-excitement do infinite injury to health. It is the parent's solemn duty to instruct the child. If he can not do it, then let him hire a physician to do it for him!

Life is a short day, but it is a working day.—Hannah More.

Old Men in Europe and America.

The extent to which the old men of Europe are engaged in the active occupations of life is phenomenal to the American mind. Ferdinand De Lesseps, in his eighty-second year, has just paid a visit to the Emperor William of Germany, aged ninety, to talk over business connected with the Suez and Panama canals. It will be some years before the latter enterprise can be finished at best, but its projector acts as if he would be ready to undertake another work of the same magnitude after its completion. Of course Prime Minister Bismarck, a comparatively young man of seventy-four, had to be called into consultation, and it is fair to suppose that Commander-in-Chief of the German Armies Von Moltke, aged eighty-seven, who recently made such a stirring speech in the Reichstag, had something to say on the subject.

De Lesseps does not appear to have gained much by his visit, from a business point of view, but he was able to carry home to President of the French Republic, Grevy, aged eighty, expressions of friendship, which, it is to be hoped, were sincere. While these old men were thus talking to each other on the Continent, on the other side of the Channel, Gladstone, aged seventy-seven, was girding up his loins to lead the Parliamentary fight in favor of Irish Home Rule. Unfortunately his old friend and co-laborer, John Bright, aged seventy-six, is taking an active interest in opposing him.

It requires but a glance at the public men of this country to see how far we are removed from this state of things. The President of the French Republic might easily be father to a man ten years older than our President, and the German Emperor might be a grandfather to him. The youngest of the men mentioned is old enough to be superannuated and placed on the pension list by our laws as an ex-Supreme Court Justice. It is an extremely rare thing with us for a man of seventy to be busily occupied in political duties. And what is true of public life here is largely true of private activity.

Why this difference between men on the two sides of the Atlantic? Is it climate, early overwork and pressure, manner of living, or all combined, that thus consumes our energies before their time? The question is an interesting one, and worth study.—N. Y. World.

THE DYING MINISTER.—Burdened with years and labor, the old preacher lay upon his couch, waiting the summons of the messenger to call him across the river. Around him were gathered his children and brethren, ministering as far as they could to his every want. He lay silent for a time, when one of the watchers said, "He is going soon." Tears were flowing freely from many eyes. He roused a little, murmuring something none could understand. "His mind wanders in the last hour," said one. He seems to revive a little. "Raise my head," he said. "Is it time for the sermon? The lights are burning, and the song seems to have died away. Well, my text is from Jesus: 'In my Father's house are many mansions'—blessed words of promise. You poor, lowly ones, who dwell in cabins, remember it is a mansion that awaits you; and you poor, waiting ones, remember that there are many of them. I promise my children to come home; but that mansion is my home. I'm too weary to preach long to-night, my brethren. What is that I hear? The music should not begin before the sermon is over. Strange voices, too—no, not strange, 'tis the wife of my early youth leading the choir—yes, and mother too! I can't preach. Let me lie down and rest." He opened his eyes. In them was a far-away look. Raising his head solemnly, he said, "Let us pronounce the benediction. May grace, mercy, and peace abide—" An unintelligible murmur, and the hush of silence came, to be broken by the sighing of the watchers. The old preacher had preached his last sermon!

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Soothes and Heals

the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonic specific.

L. D. Bixby, of Harlonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and, I believe, saved my life."

NORSEWORTHY—WILLIAM W. NORSEWORTHY, eldest son of Prof. William F. and Lizzie Norseworthy, was born July 26, 1865; joined the Methodist Church, in Jackson, La., October, 1884, under Rev. M. C. Calloway; graduated from Centenary College, June, 1885; engaged in business at Wilson, La., two weeks thereafter, and died at Norwood, January 16, 1887, from injuries received in the attempt to board a passing train.

Thus ended the bright young life of one for whom I have always cherished a warm and affectionate esteem. As a citizen, he was upright, conscientious and faithful in the discharge of duty; and these noble qualities, combined with a sunshiny disposition, a tender, sympathetic heart, won for him not only the esteem, but the ardent devotion of his friends. When the funeral train halted at Wilson, the entire community gathered to cast a farewell look at the face of the dead; and old and young, white and black, bewailed the loss of the noble character so suddenly snatched from them. As a class-mate, I knew and loved him well. He was pure, loyal and true. He passed through the trying ordeal of college life as amiable, charitable and unselfish as when he entered. Envy and malice to him were strangers; and whilst he industriously sought the honors of knowledge, he always unselfishly rejoiced in the achievements of his companions. But it was in the hallowed precincts of the home circle that the beauties of his character most brightly shone. An ardently devoted son, a royally tender, loving brother, he adorned these sacred relationships, and was a constant source of pure joy to his loved ones. His great ambition was to win position, when he could minister to those who had done so much for him; and what his hands found to do, he did it with all his might. Uniting with the Knights of Honor, he insured his life in behalf of his mother and sisters, so that even in dying he might accomplish in some degree the fond purposes of his knightly spirit. His mother arrived in time to minister to him in his last hours; and to her he expressed himself as perfectly resigned to the will of God. Tuesday morning, January 19, followed by one of the largest concourses of mourning friends ever seen in Jackson, we bore his body to the cemetery, where, after a farewell address from this writer, his loyal comrades of the Knights of Honor laid him to rest, there to await the realization of the fond hopes of Christian resurrection.

His pastor, J. V. PENN.

LEGETTE—SISTER CHARLOTTE F. LEGETTE was born in Marion district, S. C., April 16, 1816. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church when sixteen years of age, thus obeying her Lord's command—"Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness."

She loved the doctrines, polity and ministry of her church; and in fidelity to its teachings and in innocency of life adorned the doctrine of God, her Savior, being a wholesome example to the flock of God. She lived a devoted, useful Christian life. Wherever known, her influence was as an ointment poured forth. The last few years of her life wore years of intense physical suffering. "How can she bear such pain," would be the exclamation of all who bore witness to her sufferings. Yet she bore her suffering with chastened, Christian humility and submission. In talking to her about her approaching dissolution, she spoke with the calmness and confidence of Christian triumph. She was willing, ready; yea, desirous to be released from excruciating tortures of the body. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord;" "their works do follow them." Her husband, Rev. Jesse W. LeGette, was an honored, useful local preacher, ordained by Bishops Capers and Soule, and died in Georgia while on their way to Kemper county, Miss. Sister LeGette died at the home of her son, Bro. Bascom LeGette, in Kemper county, Miss., March 10, 1887. May they all meet her among the glorified!

W. G. BACKUS.

PROUTY—SISTER FRANCES JANE GORDON was born in Sumter county, S. C., in 1840; was married to J. W. Prouty, in 1870, and died in Kemper county, Miss., March 19, 1887. She emigrated with her parents to Mississippi in early life. When yet young and in tender years, she was happily converted and joined the Presbyterian Church with her parents. Later in life she, with her husband, Bro. Prouty, under the ministry of Rev. D. C. Langford, joined the Methodist Church.

Sister Prouty was one of the purest and best of women. The writer formed her acquaintance about one year ago. She was then gradually wasting away with consumption. She was a great sufferer for months before she died, yet she bore up under the afflicting rod without a murmur. It was my privilege to visit Sister Prouty a few times during her last sickness, and to administer the holy communion to her and to a few Christian friends by her bedside a few weeks before she died. She talked calmly about dying; told me where she wanted to be buried; also requested me to preach her funeral at the grave. She was perfectly happy for weeks before she died. She leaves a husband and four children, a mother and sister to mourn her loss. God help them to follow her as she followed Christ! On the morning of March 21 we assembled at Buckwater Baptist Church, where I, assisted by Bro. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, performed the burial service. H. P. LEWIS.

ROBISON—MRS. ELIZABETH ROBISON, daughter of Moses and Catherine Madden, was born March 10, 1803. She was married to William P. Robison, in 1821. She was living in Claiborne parish, La., when the first Methodist preachers came into that sparsely settled country; and she was among the first fruits of their labors. It was under the ministry of that pioneer preacher, Uncle Billy Stevenson, that she was converted and taken into the Methodist Church in 1827.

For sixty years she battled faithfully for the Master's cause, and proved the genuineness of her profession and the power of Divine grace to save and comfort in sorrow and trouble. She lived an exemplary Christian life. She was the mother of fourteen children—eight daughters and six sons—all of whom lived to be grown, except one; ten are still living, and all are members of the church. She suffered much before she died, being confined to her bed four months. A paralytic stroke not only made her helpless, but almost deprived her of speech. Yet what expressions she could give assured her friends of her confidence in Christ and resignation to his will. With great calmness, and in the full enjoyment of peace, she fell asleep in Jesus on March 19, 1887, at the advanced age of eighty-four years, near Simsboro, Lincoln parish, La. Her funeral took place on Sunday, the twentieth instant. A large congregation of relatives and friends, with many tears, followed her to her last resting-place. We deeply mourn the loss of this mother in Israel.

JNO. A. MILLER.

Ungodly men do not know what kind of a book the Bible is. When they read it, it is as if a blind man should turn up his eyes to the star-lit sky. There is nothing to him but darkness, while to others it is a magnificent revelation of the power, and wisdom, and glory of God. Changing the figure, there is rapturous music in God's blessed words to a believer whose life is controlled by them: but to the ungodly there is no sound of a voice, and all is like the silence of death.—Christian Index.

Occupation and Longevity.

"Woe to them that are at ease!" says Carlyle; but this anathema does not prevent the English village parson from outliving every other class of his countrymen, not excepting the British farmer, whose peace of mind can not always be reconciled with high rents and the low price of American wheat. Where agriculture is what it should be—a contract between man and nature, in the United States, in Australia, and in some parts of Switzerland—the plow-furrow is the straightest road to longevity; in Canada, where nature is rather a hard task-master, the probabilities are in favor of such half-indoor trades as carpentering and certain branches of horticulture—summer farming, as the Germans call it. Cold is an antiseptic, and the best febrifuge, but by no means a panacea, and the warmest climate on earth is out and out preferable even to the border-lands of the polar zone. The average Arab outlives the average Esquimau by twenty-five years.

The hygienic benefit of seavoyages, too, has been amazingly exaggerated. Seafaring is not conducive to longevity; the advantage of the exercise in the rigging is more than outweighed by the effluvia of the cock-pit, by the tiresome pickle-diet, the unnatural motion, and the foul-weather misery; and from a sanitary standpoint, the sea air. The ozone may have been a marine product, but our Pliocene ancestor was probably a forest creature.

"For what length of time would you undertake to warrant the health of a seaman?" Varnhagen asked a Dutch marine doctor. "That depends on the length of his furlough," replied the frank Hollander, and it will require centuries of reform to redeem our cities from the odium of a similar reproach. In victuals and vitality towns consume the hoarded stores of the country, and only the garden suburbs of a few North American cities are hygienically self-supporting. Permanent indoor work is slow suicide, and between the various shop-trades and sedentary occupations the difference in this respect is only one of degree. Factories stand at the bottom of the scale, and the dust and vapor generating ones below zero; the weaver's chances to reach the average age of his species have to be expressed by a negative quantity. In France, where the tabulation of comparative statistics is carried further than anywhere else, the healthfulness of the principal town trades has been ascertained to decrease in the following order: House building, huckstering, hot-bed gardening (florists), carpenter and brick-mason trades, street paving, street cleaning, sewer cleaning, blacksmiths, artisan-smiths (silver, copper, and tin concerns), shoe-making, paper-making, glass blowing, tailor, butcher, house painter, baker, cook, stone masons and lapidaries, operatives of paint and lead factories, weavers, steel grinders—the wide difference between brick and stone masons being due to the lung-infesting dust of lapidary work, which, though an out-door occupation, is nearly as unhealthy as steel grinding. Lead-paint makers have to alternate their work with jobs in the tin shop, and, after all, can rarely stand it for more than fifteen years; needle grinders generally succumb after twelve or fourteen years.

ANTIDOTE FOR POISON.—It is worth knowing that an antidote for poison oak, ivy, etc., is to take a handful of quick-lime, dissolve it in water, let it stand for an hour, then paint the poisoned part with it. Three or four applications will never fail to cure the most aggravated cases. Poison from bees, hornets, spider bites, etc., is instantly arrested by the application of equal parts of common salt and bicarbonate of soda, well rubbed in on the places bitten or stung.

SICK HEADACHE and a sensation of oppression and dullness in the head, are very commonly produced by indigestion: morbid despondency, irritability and over-sensitiveness of the nerves may, in a majority of cases, be traced to the same cause. Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm and Pillets will positively cure.

Heaven begun is the living proof that makes the heaven to come credible. "Christ in you is the hope of glory." It is the eagle eye of faith which penetrates the grave, and sees far into the tranquil things of death. He alone can believe in immortality who feels the resurrection in him already.—Robertson.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and convulsions are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and diners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy (therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

DYSPEPSIA

IS NOT A BLOOD DISEASE, and CANNOT be cured by the so-called blood purifiers, but is caused most commonly by an imperfect condition of the secretions; the food fails to digest properly, the mucous lining of the stomach is weakened, and chronic dyspepsia results, bringing the bad appetite, the faint, gnawing feeling, low spirits, and all the symptoms dyspeptics know so well.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $170 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

News Summary.

MARCH 29.

Gladstone made an eloquent appeal for Ireland in the House of Commons, which is widely commented upon as an effective exposure of the feebleness of the government's reasons for demanding coercion. The Conservatives are strongly inclined to modify the measure.——Irish priests committed to prison for refusing to betray their people.——Carter Harrison has declined the nomination of Mayor of Chicago.——The Medical College of Tulane University graduated fifty-seven M. D.'s and fourteen masters of pharmacy to-day.——Dr. Ray Palmer, the celebrated hymnologist, died at Newark, N. J., yesterday.

MARCH 30.

Another attempt made to assassinate the Czar yesterday.——A wholesale merchant of St. Petersburg, who is reported to be worth millions, has been shot and killed by a man to whom he refused to give 8,000 rubles for the Nihilist fund. Other Russian capitalists are fearful of a similar fate. They are receiving letters to that effect.——Bismarck has abandoned the idea of neutralizing Alsace-Lorraine.——The Interstate Commissioners will take the oath to-morrow.——The will of James B. Eads was probated in New York to-day.

MARCH 31.

The British Cabinet has decided to abandon that clause in the Crimes Act which provides for the changing of venue from Dublin to London in certain classes of criminal trials. The Liberal-Unionists will support the bill.——At a meeting of the Grant Monument Fund Association to-day, it was stated that the fund amounted to $120,845.——The New Jersey Senate has passed the bill giving women the right of suffrage in school elections.——John Godfrey Saxe, the poet, died in Albany to-day.——The loss of the steamer "Sealer Eagle" is reported. It is believed her entire crew of 250 was lost.

APRIL 1.

The first reading of the Crimes Act agreed to by the House of Commons.——Queen Victoria arrived at Cannes to-day.——M. Antoine, Protestant delegate to the Reichstag from Metz, has been expelled by the German government from Alsace-Lorraine and escorted to the frontier.——The Prefect of Bucharest was attacked and wounded by three Bulgarian refugees. Two were captured and imprisoned. The third escaped by taking refuge in the Russian legation.——Paul Tulane was buried at Princeton to-day.——The case of State vs. Wm. A. Strong, ex-Secretary of State, was opened in Baton Rouge to-day.——The President to-day signed the commission of Charles S. Fairchild, as Secretary of Treasury, and Isaac H. Maynard, as Assistant Secretary of Treasury.——The President to-day appointed Martin V. Montgomery, of Michigan, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, to succeed Justice McArthur, retired.

APRIL 2.

Lord Randolph Churchill, in a speech at Paddington to-day, declared his adherence to the Tory policy.——The text of the Coercion Bill, now that it has been made public, intensifies the opposition to the measure. The Parnellites express themselves as sanguine that in an appeal to the country the government would be overthrown.——Tried conspirators against the life of the Czar were executed on Thursday last.——It is reported that there is an outbreak at Rustchuk, and that the Bulgarian War Minister has been attacked.——Another phase of the Sunday law was decided by Judge Roman, of this city, on Saturday last. It is this: Business prohibited by the general provisions can not be carried on in the markets.——James L. Travis, of Tennessee, has been appointed timber agent in the General Land Office.

APRIL 3.

Queen Victoria received the local officials of Cannes and the chief English colonists at the Villa Edelweiss yesterday.——The Commercial Cable Company's second cable has been repaired. It was said to have been injured by ice. The system is now in working order again.——Joseph H. Bradley, of Washington, is dead.——The steamer "Saragossa" foundered at sea 350 miles north of Watling's Island. The crew were saved.

APRIL 4.

Advices from Afghanistan say that the Russian railway is completed to Chardjui, Bokhara.——Lord Salisbury welcomed the delegates to the Colonial Conference at the Foreign Office to-day.——In consequence of the explosion in the doorway of his bureau, the President of the Spanish Cortes has cancelled all cards of admission to Parliament buildings held by journalists.——Capt. John Grant, inventor, engineer, commander, legislator, who gave Grant's Pass to the commerce of the Gulf, died in this city to-day.——Cardinal Taschereau reached New York yesterday, on his return from Rome, and proceeded to Quebec.——The health of Hon. Daniel Manning is improving.——The case of the State of Louisiana vs. W. A. Strong, ex-Secretary of State, resulted in a mistrial.

"The Good Samaritan in our Home."

OUR HOME PHYSICIAN.

By Geo. M. Beard, A. M., M.D., assisted by several departments by ten eminent physicians. This is the most important and thoroughly practical medical guide ever offered to the American public. It gives a comprehensive and accurate knowledge of medical science of the present day in as much detail as can be useful to those not medically educated. It tells the reader what a family physician would tell him if he had the time and occasion to explain the different diseases, their symptoms and treatment. The statements are clear, thorough and exhaustive. It gives causes, symptoms and remedies for every ill.

The Homœopathic Treatment of diseases and their remedies is fully set forth in an appendix by Samuel Lilienthal, M. D., Professor in the New York Homœopathic College

The New York Tribune says: "Whether for the rules of health or the emergencies of illness, this book is a comprehensive, comprehensible and trustworthy vade mecum—the best that we know."

C. F. Deems, D. D., New York, says: "I have put it in my library, having great confidence in the skill of its conscientious editor and associates."

The book contains over 1,500 Royal octavo pages and is illustrated with nearly 300 chromo plates and wood-cuts, in which nothing offensive to good taste is permitted.

The price, $12, is now reduced to $6. Agents wanted by the publisher, E. R. TREAT, 771 Broadway, New York.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

The above cut is a true photograph of a plant of CHILDS' NEW DOUBLE PERPETUAL FLOWERING WEEPING FUCHSIA, "STORM KING," introduced by us and is the finest novelty and grandest flowering plant of the age. It is always in bloom, often as many as 500 buds and flowers on a plant at once. The branches droop most gracefully, and the blossoms are frequently as large as teacups. The buds for two weeks before the flowers are balls of glowing scarlet crimson. When expanded, the enormous double flowers are almost pure white, capped by a calyx of glowing scarlet; when a plant is loaded with buds and blossoms it presents a scene which for true grandeur and beauty no flower can surpass. They are of the easiest culture and will grow and bloom freely with ordinary care in any window or garden. Price of strong plants which will soon bloom, by mail, post-paid, 25 cts. each, 3 for $1.00, 7 for $2.00, 12 for $3.00. We pack securely from frost and warrant them to arrive in good order. Form Clubs for this grand Fuchsia and get them at dozen rates. Remember, we are the sole growers and the only ones in the world who can supply the true Storm King in quantity. Beware of others who are selling inferior varieties as Storm King.

CHILDS' NEW GIANT EXCELSIOR PANSIES are the largest and finest in the world. (See large chromo in Catalogue.) They produce gigantic flowers from May to December, in great profusion. Mixed seed of 50 colors, which are of marvelous beauty, 25 cts. per paper. We will also offer 6 large flowering bulbs of CHILDS' EXCELSIOR DWARF PEARL TUBEROSES for 50 cts. (They are grand for pots.) 7 fine hardy LILIES, including Auratum, $1.00. 12 choice mixed GLADIOLUS, 50 cts. TEA ROSES, red, white, pink and yellow, 50 cts. 5 grand CHRYSANTHEMUMS 50 cts. Any of the above articles will be sent by mail, post-paid, and guaranteed to arrive in good condition. They are exactly as represented, and will more than please those who plant them. Many years of liberal and honest dealings have secured to us our enormous mail business in Seeds, Bulbs and Plants, which is the largest in the world. Orders can be sent at once. ASLEEP IN THE MORNING.

BY REV. HENRY W. TELLER.

What though we found him in the morning, sleeping
The long, deep sleep so sweet to weary eyes?
Tarry no longer at his bedside weeping,
There comes a morning when he will arise.

We laid us down like him to quiet slumber,
Nor wept we at our brief release from toil:
What if the morning calls us forth to number
His hours of labor, and he rests the while?

God smoothed his pillow, and his sleep is dreamless;
No midnight vision breaks his calm repose.
What if his glorious eyes be closed and beamless?
They weep no longer over human woes.

Tarry no longer at his bedside weeping;
Death finds a welcome in an aching heart.
Is it not better to be, like him, sleeping
Than in this bitter strife to bear a part?

We would not falter in the path of duty;
The Lord's appointed way we still would keep;
But this white face is God's own seal of beauty,
"For so he giveth his beloved sleep."

Scraps for a Methodist Quilt.

BY "DORCAS."

No. 1. Picked up in a church on the Sunday night of quarterly meeting, before service:

"How do you do, Sister James? I haven't seen you for a full month."

"Well, I reckon you haint, Sister Lester, cause you haint bin in the right place for to see me. I wus here las' Sunday, an' I wus at prayer meetin' a-Thursday, an' I'm shore I wus a-fillin' my place right on this here bench yisterd'y. Now, whar wus you them same times, an' which on us wus to blame for not meetin' together?"

"Oh, bless your heart, my dear sister; it is just impossible for me to get out to these week-day meetings. I have so much to keep me at home. I do generally try to come Saturday to hear the presiding elder, but this time I was too busy."

"Wall, it 'pears to me folks as is anxious 'bout their souls kin 'range home business so they kin go to the gospel feast if they is a-mind to. Lenstwise I kin, an' I dare any woman in this here town to try for to turn off more jobs in one weeky day than these here ole han's hev to do. Too busy to come to meetin'! I mout of bin, too; but I knowed the preachin' was a-goin to be here yisterday, and you better b'lieve I riz early Monday mornin', an' I riz early ev'ry mornin', an' I kep' on a-sayin' to myself, says I, There ain't goin' to be no six days' work did this week, else it's goin' to be did in five, for that gospel sarmont I'm a-goin' to feast on."

"I reckon you are right, Sister James. You are rested and enjoying the services while I worked hard all day Saturday, and am no better off for this world to-day than you are, and not only missed the sermon yesterday, but am too tired to enjoy the services to-day."

"Thank the Lord for that sayin', Sister Lester, an', I give you my word fur it, them childern wont be half as heady when they sees they mother a-lovin' of the Lord; an' more'n that, all them botherin' works will be got through with a sight less of frettin' an' worryin' when you makes a pint of goin' to prayer meetins, an' sich like. It done my poor ole heart good to set under the sound of the gospel yisterd'y, an' I tell you the fac' is, we gits the best the elder's got Saturdays. I s'pose he feels down in his soul that them as comes out Saturdays an' prayer-meetin' days is a-tryin' to use this here world an' not 'buse it, an' he kin preach ont'n his own soul. I tell you, it do pay, praise God, to be in arnest a-servin' him, an' them as sez it don't, aint more'n half tried it."

No. 2. Found in a city home:

"Mother, we had a delightful evening; I never saw old and young people enjoy themselves together so well before. I think Mrs. P. has some secret charm about her that everybody feels when they go to her house."

"I reckon you have found out the truth about Mrs. P., my darling, if you haven't found out what the secret charm is. Maybe our friend here, Miss K., can explain your enjoyment last evening, and my freedom from anxiety when you and your brother are under Mr. P.'s roof."

"I felt the same sweet social influence, Mrs. R., that Jennie speaks of, at a musical entertainment, the only gathering that I ever attended at Mr. P.'s. I can give you my explanation of the genial spirit that pervaded that occasion. First and foremost, both Mr. and Mrs. P. are thoroughly pious. Duty and love to God are their watchwords, and these imply duty and love to man. They have no children to claim their attention, but are not, like many similarly situated, intolerant of the faults peculiar to young life, and uncomfortable when children and young people are in their houses, lest something be soiled or put out of order. I think that when they look into the bright eyes that love to gather about them they see more than the bright eyes—they see the souls that they represent, and find their chief delight in giving to these young immortals pleasures, from which they can go home full of peaceful joy, kneel and pray before sleeping, and at breakfast next morning can recount, as Jennie will presently do, to give zest to the family meal."

"I wish, Miss K., that there were more people in the Methodist Church like Mr. and Mrs. P. I'm sure that if there were even half a dozen Methodist homes in this city, where the fathers and mothers hadn't forgotten that they used to be young, our preachers wouldn't be distressed by round dances and progressive euchre parties."

"You are right, I am sure, my daughter; and I, for one, shall profit by our morning talk. I shall not be so selfishly forgetful of the desire which our gracious heavenly Father has put into all young people for recreation, but shall think it a high and sacred duty to provide innocent social joys for the young people of our acquaintance. Another good will arise from such a reform, Miss K. (laughingly): Our pastors will have leisure, when we attract the young folks away from sinful amusements, to turn attention to the evil ways of the older Methodists. How we do hide behind young folks, and how keenly they get the lashes!"

Following Capers As He Followed Christ.

BY ATTICUS G. HAYGOOD, D. D.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, owes thanks to Bishop Duncan for his strong appeal in behalf of the congregation of colored Methodists in Columbia, who are so earnestly seeking a dwelling-place. And the church owes thanks to the editor of The Southern Christian Advocate for his strong editorial statement of our duty to the needy ones at our doors—the six or seven millions of people of African descent, our neighbors, close by us, and all about us. The special case that called out the Bishop's appeal and that furnished a text and an instance for the editorial deserves consideration. The people the Bishop pleads for need help, and doubtless deserve it. With that appeal for help to aid these members of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in the capital of South Carolina, thoughtful and benevolent Southern Methodists must feel a profound sympathy.

But the greater question this special case brings to the conscience of the church challenges no ordinary attention and interest. It brings up the whole question of the relation and duty of Southern Methodism to very needy souls, in God's providence related to us of the South as they are related to no people in the world. The events of the late revolution (however the war may have failed in accomplishing the results hoped for by the Southern people, the movement was revolution) did not unrelate us to the colored people. What relations belong to our common humanity, what duties we owe the colored people as our neighbors, who need much that we can give them, and, if we are minded to follow the Spirit, give them better than any other Christian people in the world can give them—these relations and duties the events of the war could not terminate.

It seems to me a happy coincidence that the special need that called out Bishop Duncan's appeal exists in Columbia, S. C., and that it should have found a sympathetic medium in the old Southern Christian Advocate. Hard by our chief church in Columbia rests the body of William Capers, clarum et venerabile nomen! upon whose modest tomb are the significant words: "Founder of Missions to the Slaves." There is no nobler record to be read upon the tombs of kings and priests. And William Capers was wont to voice his great thoughts and heaven-inspired sympathies for the poor and helpless children of Africa in the paper you are called in God's providence to edit at this time. May grace be given to South Carolina Methodists to lead back our great church to a prevailing sense of duty to the posterity of those for whom Capers plead, toiled, labored and prayed. So shall his translated and glorified spirit now "see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied."

OXFORD, Georgia.

Theological Skeptic-Makers.

A few years ago the sun was about the size of a small hillock, maybe a few hundred rods in diameter, and about ten, or maybe a hundred miles distant from us, and rose and set daily—that is, passed round the earth every day, the earth lying still. The Bible read that way, and we all believed it. But the astronomer came along and said this theory would not do at all: the sun was many times multiplied larger than our whole world, and nearly a hundred millions of miles distant, and did not pass round the earth at all.

To these bold innovations religious astronomy would not listen for a moment; for how could men be saved from sin with the sun ninety millions of miles distant and the world rolling over? But the worldly astronomer persisted, and the church, on re-reading and closer examination, found that the Bible did not teach astronomy at all, and concluded that men might be saved though the world did rotate.

And a little later the geologist came along, and said the earth did not spring up out of nothing six thousand years ago, and mature in six days of twenty-four hours each, for the globe itself existed, but in immatured conditions, many millions of years before Adam took charge of it. And the church—some of it—cried, "Heresy, heresy!" And the church reasoned—"How could men be saved and the rocks and water and crawfish and whales be a million years old?" With seas and mountains over six thousand years old, salvation by faith in Christ must be clearly impossible.

But the geologist persisted, declaring it was so, salvation or no salvation. And worse than all that, most of the geologists were themselves eminent and learned Christian men and Christian ministers, and they mixed up salvation and the earth's antiquity in the same lessons.

And then the church re-read the Bible, and inquired—Why could not men believe in Christ and be saved even if the rocks were millions of years old? And in thus inquiring, the whole church soon came to see that the atonement of Christ was not essentially geological, and that men might be saved otherwise than geologically, no matter how old the rocks might be.

And yet, strictly, not yet all the church gives in to either the earth's rotary motion or its antiquity. Some still contend that the earth lies still, despite the teaching of astronomy, and that it is just six thousand years old, despite the teachings of geology. And we have a fresh teacher on tertiary grace, the ink of whose book is hardly dry, and who contends that: "Creation preceded the advent of Christ four thousand years. The logic and proofs adduced in this book in support of the position that the world was created in six liberal days of twenty-four hours each, and in support of the position that there is inspired chronology fixing the date of creation four thousand years before the birth of Christ, will hardly be attacked by the critics."

I fully agree with him, that the critics are not at all likely to attack this "logic."

And still, again, chemistry steps up and says: It is the man, and not the flesh of the man, that is raised with a spiritual body in the resurrection; and he is likely to have it so. There may be some little hesitancy just here, in a small way; but the God of nature must be the God of the Bible.

I do not know whether Paul studied chemistry as a science, or not; but he certainly spoke as a master in chemistry when he declared: "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God: neither doth corruption inherit incorruption."

"That, to say the least, is first-rate chemistry. Munger, in his masterly treatise on "Faith," in defending the fathers in their war against Pantheism, says: "Their philosophy was not yet fine enough to teach them that personal identity consists not in flesh and blood, and so, in their noble zeal for this vital truth (viz., the resurrection), they asserted the resurrection of the flesh." Again, he says, "Teach a thinking man chemistry, and he must be skeptical." That is, under the doctrine that resurrection pertains to the man's flesh rather than to the man himself.

So, it is easily seen how skeptics are sometimes made in the church, and by the church. Let the church insist that "the world is stablished that can not be moved," and that "in six days the Lord made heaven and earth," and, "if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen"; and insist on antiquated constructions of such passages before science showed the impossibility of the correctness of such constructions, and far more natural ones suggested themselves, and how can thinking men be otherwise than skeptical?

For my part, when I listen to a religious teacher who ignores or repudiates the teachings of science, I try to muster grace enough to pity his ignorance, and to appropriate rightly any truths he may chance to blunder upon, and which, by the way, may oftentimes be very valuable. Often a few grains of good wheat may be sifted out of a bushel of chaff and tares. But irreligious men are not likely to make such sifting.

Now, I want next week, or as soon as convenient, if the editor is willing, to make an argument on the supposition that God made the strata of the earth just that way. "Could not God just as easily as not place away down there the fac-simile appearances of bones and animals?" I propose to answer.

ITS CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS—REV. JOHN PIPES.

The year 1887 has opened auspiciously for all the interests of our work in North Louisiana. The Shreveport district was turned over by the late presiding elder to his new successor in good condition. The appointments made by the Bishop at the late Conference have proved eminently satisfactory. Our preacher, the Rev. J. M. Beard, has been favored with large congregations, and is winning golden opinions by his able ministrations in the pulpit. The Mansfield College is more prosperous than for several years, and the town and country are steadily improving. For several weeks past it has been known that Rev. John Pipes, of this community, had made up his mind to break up his home in Louisiana and remove to St. Louis, Mo. This step was brought about by the fact that Bro. and Sister Pipes are getting old, and find themselves physically unable to keep house in the absence of their children, who have all grown up and settled in other States. As one son and two daughters are residing at St. Louis, the old people have concluded to make their home there. According to previous announcement, Bro. Pipes preached here to-day a sort of farewell sermon, which was attended by all classes of people without distinction of churches.

Bro. Pipes was born near Monroe, La., February 21, 1818. He joined the Mississippi Conference, in 1843, and became a member of the Louisiana Conference at its organization in 1847. After traveling forty years, with that prudence which has been a characteristic of his life, he obtained a superannuated relation. He preached first at Mansfield, in 1844, being then in charge of the Caddo circuit, now sub-divided into four or five other circuits and two stations. In 1853 and 1854, he was station-preacher at Mansfield, and again in 1866 and three years following. For seven years he was presiding elder of the Shreveport district. Thus a great portion of his ministerial life has been spent in this vicinity. For the last twenty-one years he has resided at Mansfield. Here his children have been educated; and, by a good Providence, all of these are yet living and engaged in profitable employment. No man has ever lived so long in any community with fewer difficulties or more universal respect than has been accorded Bro. Pipes in the parish of DeSoto. His mild and gentle disposition, his unswerving integrity and simplicity of character, his humble and godly walk as a Christian, his earnest and faithful labors as a preacher, have left an abiding impression throughout the wide circle of his acquaintance. This was attested to-day by the presence of a large congregation gathered from the town and the surrounding country to hear once more the voice that to many of them had been a familiar one from their childhood. Bro. Pipes chose as his text the well-known expression of the patriarch Jacob in the presence of Pharaoh in answer to a question concerning his age: "The days of the years of my pilgrimage have been an hundred and thirty years. Few and evil have been the days of my life, and have not attained to the years of my fathers." After a brief historical sketch of his sojourn in this community, Bro. Pipes remarked that the text contained the well-known contradiction exhibited in the life of man—a confession of the ills of this life, accompanied by a regret for its brevity. He said that if we estimate our lives by the standard of worldly happiness, they must inevitably prove to be failures. For, in the first place, a large proportion of the human race, dying before the age of maturity, are necessarily lost for all the purposes of this world. In the next place, one-third of life must needs be spent in earnest preparation for the remainder. Then, if at twenty years we begin a career unincumbered by a widowed mother or aged parents, we must labor the next twenty years to lay up the means of enjoyment. When the proper period arrives, we find our senses defective, our health impaired, and the shadow of old age gradually creeping across our pathway. To this must be added the loss of many friends and early associates by death, and other discounts upon the sum of human happiness. On the other hand, by the Christian view of life's true value, the death of infants instead of being a total loss was a clear gain in the world to come. Millions of infant souls compose the family above. Nor is the death of an infant without a positive value in its influence upon the lives of others. Many a thoughtless parent has been brought to reflection by the transfer of these treasures to the heavenly world. All our sufferings, all our trials, estimated by the Christian standard, make life nobler and its ends more worthy and blessed. Death itself is completed fruition in the faith of the Christian. All that which to the worldly wise man seems loss and substraction from the sum of human happiness becomes the consummation of bliss and joy when viewed through the telescopic vision of faith in a risen and ascended Savior.

The sermon was a very able one, and, being the evident result of a life-time experience in the service of God, had its weight upon the congregation, who all believed and felt that Bro. Pipes knew that whereof he affirmed. If there is one expression that could sufficiently characterize the impression made by Bro. Pipes' preaching, it would be that of the Apostle James—The meekness of wisdom. After the sermon, the choir sang Hymn 404—"Guide me, O thou great Jehovah"—and Bro. Beard offered a full and fervent petition for the Divine blessing to attend Bro. Pipes and his family through the remainder of life's journey; and then the pastor invited the people to remain after the benediction and participate in an informal leave-taking of their old pastor and friend. Miss Willie Ricks, in behalf of the ladies of DeSoto parish, then presented Bro. Pipes and his wife with a large and costly silver pitcher as a token of esteem. Mr. Hopgood also presented them with a purse of money in behalf of friends at Grand Cane. The congregation slowly dispersed, many taking a tearful leave of their aged friend and his wife, who were both much affected at these unexpected tokens of public estimation.

Before leaving Mansfield, Bro. Pipes made a donation of almost his entire library to the Mansfield Female College, of which he has been so long a patron and trustee. In the collection are many books of permanent value, and our book shelves are now loaded with something better than Patent Office reports and congressional debates. Thus Bro. Pipes appears not only as a beneficiary, but much more largely as the benefactor of the community where he has lived so long.

A DAISY ODE.

BY WALTER KNAPTON LEWIS.

On mossy banks beneath the trees
The violet loves to dwell,
It casts its scent on every breeze
That sweeps its native dell.

The woodland smiles with primrose flowers
When April paints the scene,
Soon bluebells hand the self-same bowers,
And orchids blush between.

The honeysuckle's sweet perfume
Revives the sultry air,
While songsters throng the forest gloom,
And warble everywhere.

But you, my sweet daisy, need no shade
To clothe your sunny form,
You dwell not in the leafy glade,
But breast the rising storm.

Where other flowers would droop and die,
You deck the grassy sod;
And upward glance with golden eye
To meet the gaze of God.

JACOB GOING DOWN INTO EGYPT.

Genesis xlvii. 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Honor thy father and thy mother, which is the first commandment with promise."—Ephesians vi. 2.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

Joseph had sent his brothers away with a present for each and three hundred pieces of silver and five changes of raiment for Benjamin. He sent to his father a munificent gift of twenty asses' burden: he also sent wagons for their transportation and provisions for their journey.

When Jacob heard that his son was still alive and was the governor over all the land of Egypt, his heart fainted and he believed not. The sight of the wagons and all that Joseph had sent assured him, and he said: "It is enough: Joseph, my son, is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die." Once he had rebuked Joseph for predicting that his father, mother and eleven brethren would be dependent upon him: and now that it had literally come to pass, it was too much for his belief. He went to Beersheba and sought counsel of God. He was still in doubt as to the propriety of the step, and was not content until the God of Bethel had said, "Fear not to go down into Egypt, for I will there make of thee a great nation." Emphasis ought to be put upon the word there. Jacob needed the assurance that even there among a heathen people God would fulfill his promise. Also there, or in that land more highly advanced than other lands in progress and refinement, was there a more favorable opportunity to develop Israel into a great nation than amid the rude and uncultured Canaanites. Jacob sent Judah forward to herald his approach, and Joseph met his father and wept on his neck a good while, while Jacob, in the ecstasy of his satisfaction, said, "Now let me die, because I've seen thy face."

I.—JOSEPH ANNOUNCING JACOB'S COMING TO PHARAOH.

Verse 1. "Then Joseph came and told Pharaoh." Pharaoh had given authority to Joseph to settle his father and the family "in the good of the land of Egypt," and any other sixty-six souls would have been provided for without applying again to the king; but Joseph's wisdom and prudence would avoid any room for his enemies to say that he had shown favor to his kindred, so he placed the responsibility of their settlement upon Pharaoh. "Out of the land of Canaan into the land of Goshen." Their route after leaving Beersheba lay in a direction south or west, probably through Rehoboth, the wilderness of Shur, Baal-zephon and Succoth, the distance supposed to be two hundred and fifty miles.

2. "Took some of his brethren, five men." Why Joseph took five of his brothers, and which five he took to present to Pharaoh, are matters of various conjecture. Some have said that he took the five oldest; others, the five youngest; others, the worst-looking; others, the best-looking. While there is no way to settle it definitely, a lawful conjecture would be that he selected five representative men, as it is reasonable that he wanted to make a good impression upon Pharaoh.

3. "What is your occupation? Thy servants are shepherds." Joseph had anticipated this question and had instructed his brothers how to reply. He knew that shepherds were an abomination unto Egyptians because of their nomadic, lawless lives, and because they sacrificed the ox and sheep, which animals were held sacred by the Egyptians. Truth was motive sufficient for Joseph to brave their prejudices; but in addition the welfare of his brethren prompted him, because their wealth lay in cattle and they were fitted for no other calling.

4. "To sojourn in the land are we come." They doubtless remembered the prediction to their great-grandfather, Abram, that his posterity should be strangers in a land not theirs, and that "afterward they should come out with great substance." The famine was more sorely felt in Canaan because it was in a higher region. Goshen was situated in the valley of the Nile, in the north of Egypt, or, rather, beyond the bounds of Egypt, and was a very fertile region and well suited for pasturage.

5, 6. "Pharaoh spake unto Joseph." The brothers made request for themselves of the king direct: but he replied to Joseph, giving them to understand that Joseph was his prime minister as well as the cause of the favor that was shown them. Pharaoh reiterated his instructions to Joseph to make them dwell in the best of the land, and by common understanding Goshen was regarded as the best for them. "Rulers over my cattle." In those days cattle constituted the principal part of property, and the word "cattle" sometimes was given to describe property generally. So probably Pharaoh was deputizing Joseph to appoint the more enterprising of his brothers in charge of the domestic concerns of the kingdom.

II.—THE PATRIARCH INTRODUCED TO THE SOVEREIGN.

Verse 7. "Joseph brought in Jacob his father." The outward seeming of these representative men were very different. The one rejoiced in all the pomp and prestige of his splendid court; the other came up with the smell of the field upon him, and yet upon this latter had God pronounced one of the highest possible encomiums—"As a prince hast thou power with God and hast prevailed." Joseph's filial affection, as well as his reverence for the God of his fathers, caused him to take pleasure in presenting his honored parent. "Jacob blessed Pharaoh"—invoked upon him the Divine benediction. "Whom thou blessest is blessed." "And without all contradiction the less is blessed of the better."

8. "How old art thou?" Old age in patriarchal times was considered most honorable. In many places in the old Bible ages are recorded with great minuteness. Jacob, doubtless, looked older than he really was, owing to the troublous, wandering life he had led. Pharaoh suggested a compliment in asking a question whose answer would imply veneration and respect.

9. "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years." Jacob realized the shortness of his life, and the highly figurative way of expressing it brought it out in stronger relief. "Days of years." If one looks backward, the years seem days; "we are but of yesterday." Jacob was emphatically a pilgrim—an alien, a wanderer. He journeyed to Mesopotamia and back after fourteen years. He sojourned in Succoth, in Shechem, in Bethel, and in Canaan, where his father was a stranger. His last and longest pilgrimage was into Egypt. "Few and evil have the days of my life been." Bitterly had he suffered the consequences of his deception of his father and his robbery of his brother. For fourteen years he had been an alien from his father's house; he never looked upon the face of his mother whose misguided affection had counseled him to wrong. His own sons, following his example, had conspired against their father and, like him, had cruelly wronged their own brother. "The way of the transgressor is hard," even though God showeth mercy. "I have not attained unto the years of my fathers." Jacob lived in all one hundred and forty-seven years; Isaac, his father, lived one hundred and eighty, and Abraham, his grandfather, one hundred and seventy-five. There was a still greater difference between his age and that of some of his more remote ancestors. Noah lived nine hundred and fifty years, and Methuselah nine hundred and sixty-nine.

11. "Joseph gave his father and brethren possession in the best of the land in the land of Rameses." There is a city, as well as a district, which bears the name of Rameses, or Raamses. As a district, it is the same as Goshen. The city is situated in the western part of the district, and is the place whence the memorable journeyings of the children of Israel began.

12. "Joseph nourished his father and brethren." When we read in Isaiah i, 2, "I have nourished and brought up children," it is made plain how completely Joseph's father and brethren were dependent upon him. They looked to him for the daily allowance of bread to sustain life. How often did their abject condition suggest to them the literal fulfillment of his dreams! Yet, with characteristic generosity, Joseph never reverted to the past except to try to quiet the upbraidings of their consciences and to make them overlook their own meanness in the merciful providence of God, who overruled it all for good.

Sam Jones Camp Ground.

MR. EDITOR: At a meeting of the trustees of the Sam Jones Camp Ground the writer was formally requested to give, through the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, some information for the mutual benefit of the camp meeting and the public. This camp ground is situated two miles north of Gloster, Amite county, Miss., and exactly opposite the railroad mile-post denoting 146 miles from New Orleans and 309 miles from Memphis. It lies along the railroad two acres deep and four long. Just outside the southern boundary a magnificent spring, clear, cold, and remarkably bountiful, gushing over its curbing on the hillside, pays its hasty tribute to a crystal stream in the vale, and these waters, blended in a beautiful stream, take their course directly through the grounds. Enhancing this charming feature, about midway on the grounds the waters of another spring, cold, pleasant, and mineral, after running a few paces in abundance, find an exit in the same channel. At the base of a hill, between this stream and the railroad, the builders have utilized a natural auditorium. Here the delighted hearer is strongly impressed that the "groves were God's first temples," and even the experienced attendant upon camp meetings is captivated. Here the worshiper, seated on the same hill through which in a deep gorge the railroad track is laid, is entirely secluded from sight of the busy trains, while the hills and dales far and near, clothed with virgin forest trees, invite him to the freedom of the wild woods. The first and only meeting was held here last year, and already there are claimed for these springs qualities for the cure of the invalid. But, better still, the souls of saints and sinners enjoyed in a wonderful measure the restoration of the Holy Christ. This has been "noised abroad," and we want the multitudes to know when and how to come together here.

The trustees have selected, as a permanent time for their camp meeting to begin, Friday before the first full moon in September, which will be this year August 26. A keeper is living on the grounds for the purpose of improving them and building tents. Three of the trustees—viz., F. C. Huff, Jno. F. Cassels and Dr. J. R. Whittington—compose a committee on building and correspondence. Prompt and satisfactory communication can be held with them at Gloster, Miss. Privilege to select ground for camping is granted to all, and no charges for license are made. But it would be well to remember that the most eligible sites for tenting are constantly being claimed. Accommodations for man and beast, hotel, restaurant, stables, etc., are provided for the convenience of the visitor from a distance and from the surrounding country, at reasonable rates.

This camp meeting held in this picturesque spot, surrounded by a people in whom the camp-meeting spirit abounds, managed by trustworthy, God-fearing men, upon which the seal of success has already been set, so full of promise for usefulness, is freely commended to all for present consideration and practical use, profitable recreation and earnest prayer.

Mr. Editor, we hope you will be one of our happy number this year. After six months more of toil so enriching to your readers, leaving the cares of your office six hours behind you, may you come up, and in turn may you be enlarged. If you seek a change in this unique spot, it will certainly be found. The whistle blows, the bell rings, and one moment more you have "gone into the country." Come, and let everybody get ready to come. J. WILSON BROWN.

Cyclones, Storms, Poundings, etc.

MR. EDITOR: I admire that high degree of Christian civilization which prompts the members and patrons of our church to give their newly appointed pastor a warm reception, accompanied with an ample supply of all that is necessary for the comfort and support of himself and family: but I can not see the appropriateness of designating these purely benevolent and Christian acts by such expletives as "cyclones," "storms," "poundings," "tornadoes," etc.—the ugliest and most destructive phenomena in all nature. I think such expletives in such connection are in bad taste—at least, so it seems to me. I admire and greatly rejoice in the increasing love of our people for their pastors and their increasing liberality in supplying all the wants about the parsonage; but why these works and labors of love should be so uniformly called by the preachers after the most repulsive and dreaded things in the world shows a singular taste. I trust our brethren will find names for this most beautiful and lovely illustration of our holy Christianity that will more appropriately express the thing done than the ugly names so often used to express it. We all have an instinctive horror of cyclones, storms, poundings, etc.; then why use such names in connection with the beautiful parsonage meetings between a pastor and his parishioners? We want our Conference organ to be pure, consistent and elevated, and have nothing inappropriate in it. In the ADVOCATE, of March 24, Bro. Upton, of Lake Providence, has an article that will do to imitate in writing of these parsonage meetings. J. G. JONES.

From the Work.

ANOTHER COPIOUS SHOWER.

MR. EDITOR: "The lines are fallen unto us in pleasant places." In the necessary change of homes—this itinerant family having tabernacled among "mine own people" for four consecutive years—it was our lot to remove nearly three hundred miles. Favored by Providence, we changed our base before the real winter set in. Leaving Fayette after a farewell breakfast with kind friends, December 29, we derailed ourselves at Scranton, next day, at 11:30 A. M., having spent a pleasant night with old friends in your city. Here first began the systematic kindness which has ever since marked the course of our people toward us. Three official members came to greet us, with two family carriages to convey us (we being decidedly plural) to our "new home," which lies four miles north of the railway. This foretold the thankful care that Moss Point has for its preacher's family. At the nicely furnished, well-arranged and beautifully situated parsonage several of the "Earnest Workers" welcomed us in word and deed. A bountiful dinner needed not the sauce of keen appetites to give true relish. A well-stored pantry suggested future dinners numerous.

We were not slow to learn the pleasing and promising fact that all the people were greatly disappointed at losing unexpectedly their former pastor, Bro. R. J. Jones. Only the height of his exaltation could give them comfort concerning these things. We then thought it a good sign—we still believe it. How gratifying to hear only words of love and praise about your predecessors! It inspires the hope that we may, by God's gracious help, so go in and out as to receive the same treatment when we are succeeded. So should it always be. In our grand economy the pastorate is one, though the pastors be many. Our loyal people feel it so, and act accordingly.

Three months have elapsed. Meanwhile much family sickness and the shadow of death have prevented my doing full service in pastoral work. The continued kindness showered upon us through it all has intensified our gratitude and love. The dews of gracious giving have distilled almost daily. But not satisfied with this, about one week ago, Tuesday evening, March 22, two godly women in a few hours' time so opened the windows of liberality among the people generally that a great and acceptable rain fell in the parsonage hall. With unusual judgment and great liberality the presents were chosen. Among other creature comforts we mention a barrel of flour, six hams, sugar, coffee, tea, canned goods and other groceries in bountiful supply and rich variety, besides some dry goods and substantial donations in money. One of the pleasing features of the occasion was that many of the children and young people, and several members of other churches contributed liberally. A number of the kind donors graced the parsonage with their presence during the evening. This coming from a people whose assessments are fully paid up to date, and who have made a free-will offering of fifteen dollars extra to education very lately, speaks well for their practical godliness. The reward for such manifold grace is on high. But its manifestations cheers and strengthens us as we go. May the Lord of the vineyard plentifully water from above those who have thus refreshed us with loving kindness, and help us faithfully to minister to them in spiritual things.

Gratefully,

J. P. DRAKE.

MOSS POINT, Mississippi.

ALONG THE GULF COAST.

MR. EDITOR: I have been on the seashore just three weeks. I have been to church once, twice and sometimes thrice a day ever since I have been here. About forty sermons have been preached from Methodist pulpits in that time along this coast, and there has been a moving among the "dry bones of this valley." I first visited Bro. B. Jones' work. He, assisted by Bros. Bowen and Ahbey, had a splendid meeting at Bay St. Louis. It glowed under the Spirit's influence. The Quarterly Conference was held at Long Beach. Then we went to Pass Christian and, under the guidance of Bro. Jones, we had preaching there every night for nearly a week. Bro. Jones is moving among his people with activity and acceptability.

Dr. Ahbey is making himself useful to this coast. He went with me to Ocean Springs and preached for us two or three times. Bro. Bowen came on Monday. He is a much-honored instrument in the hands of the Lord. The meeting at Ocean Springs was remarkable in spiritual power. A brother, attending, said he had traveled over a large part of this continent, had been in many meetings, had heard our most distinguished preachers, had heard Dr. Cook in Scotland, Chalmers, and Spurgeon in his immense tabernacle; but that he had never seen anything like this. At a service for men alone the house was full. Bro. Bowen preached; he insisted on purity of life in husband, as well as wife; brother, as well as sister. At the close of the service he asked every man present to come up and give us their hands that would try to make Ocean Springs better by their lives and influence. Almost every man and boy in the house came forward and shook the preachers' hands. The Baptists and Presbyterians heartily joined in the service. One preacher, alluding to the increase of brotherly love and good fellowship among the churches, intimated that there might have been a time when the corn grew scattergrained on the denominational cob, and the churchy shuck large and bulky, giving some ground to dispute over it, as it was the main thing; but now we were raising too much corn to quarrel over the shucks. The meeting at Ocean Springs is still continued. There had been twenty-seven accessions up to last Tuesday. Bro. Thompson is growing more and more in favor with his people.

Next I came to Scranton, where Bro. and Sister Hays are winning the hearts of the people. Some of the people here say, "Bro. Hays is one of the best preachers in the Mississippi Conference;" and some of them leave the "one of" out of the sentence. We have had preaching here for about a week; congregations large and attentive. Judging from the way they listen to an almost exhausted and broken-down preacher, I think preaching from a fresh and vigorous man would accomplish much good here. This coast has improved much since I was here four years ago. Many new buildings have been erected, and many others repaired and freshly painted. People from the North are here seeking seaside homes for the winter. I have not space to tell you of the great city to be built here, at this terminus of the Ship Island railroad, when we have thirty feet water from the railroad wharf to the open sea. Yours, etc.,

T. S. WEST.

SCRANTON, Mississippi.

FRANKLINTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: It is a source of comfort and instruction to me to read the early reports from the brethren concerning their charges. It is only by this intelligence that one can ascertain how he is succeeding in the work appointed to him. I am sorry only because all of us are not prepared to report as favorably as some have done; but because we are not, is that any reason why we should be silent? Of course it is very desirable to be able to say: "Every department of church work is flourishing and collections all up," for there is nothing that gives greater pleasure to a true pastor's heart than the prosperity of the work whereunto God has appointed him. Neither is there anything that so wraps his soul in seas of sorrow as do spiritual deadness and indifference on the part of those to whom he is sent to serve.

Mr. Editor, this is a new charge, and I hope it may never be new again, for its frequent changes of relationship have completely paralyzed the spirit of unity between the churches. Therefore, it is impossible to prosper as others do till this is overcome. But, as there are warm hearts and willing hands, it is fully expected that perfect sympathy and unity will be restored soon. Then grand and glorious results will follow—results good to all and honor to the great cause of our dear Jesus. This charge is composed of six appointments and about two hundred and sixty members. We have two Sunday-schools, and each seems to be improving. We expect to have more soon. One prayer meeting and one family altar. We have raised and sent to Dr. Kelley, at Nashville, $40 of our foreign missionary assessment: and, if the rain had not hindered us from having service on Sunday of our quarterly meeting, the entire assessment would have been obtained. There is less prejudice against the collections ordered by the Annual Conference on this charge than any country charge of my knowledge.

Franklinton has the nicest and finest church and parsonage I have seen in any village or town. The church is well finished and furnished, and cost more than $1,600. The parsonage is the gift of that liberal-hearted brother, Robert Babington, and cost more than $1,000. It was also furnished by him. In addition to "the house we live in," which is a model of beauty, is a neat garden and a good barn for our buggy and forage and stalls for "Charlie."

We were kindly received, and have been kindly treated since. We have received nice presents in the way of delicious things to eat, best of wood to burn and valuable additions to baby's wardrobe. We return many sincere thanks for all kindness, and pray God that we may serve this people well.

J. G. SIBLEY, P. C.

MARVIN CIRCUIT, BRANDON DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: We have no great revival in any church work; but I think I see signs of a rising tide. The prayer-meeting goers and the prayers are more spiritual, the Sunday-school better attended and better lessons. Attendance on public preaching and attention, good. We are not getting much cash on collections, but a good subscription. The people of this country hurt every enterprise by having to go on credit; and woe to the preacher who can't preach on credit and stay out of debt! No storms nor cyclones, but precious visits and full hands call in every few days. We are sometimes perplexed, but never in despair. My wife says, "When we need money I give way what we have, and then I get some more." So giving is a necessity. We are now organizing the forces of duy against the powers of darkness, and Rankin county will vote wet or dry April 6. Prohibition is in the air; and, best of all, it is in the hearts of the best men and women of the land. And we are going to plant it deep in the hearts of the rising generations.

"Only after Death."

WHAT WONDERS THE MICROSCOPE HAS DONE FOR US.

NO LONGER OBLIGED TO DIE, TO FIND OUT "WHAT'S KILLING US."

One of the leading scientific publications states that many people are now using the microscope to discover the real cause of disease in the system, and to detect adulterations of food and medicines.

This wonderful instrument has saved many a life. A microscopal test shows, for instance, the presence of albumen, or the life of the blood, in certain derangements of the kidneys, but medicine does not tell us how far advanced the derangement is, or whether it shall prove fatal.

The microscope, however, gives us this knowledge:

Bright's disease, which so many people dread, was not fully known until the microscope revealed its characteristics. It greatly aids the physician, skilled in its use, in determining how far disease has advanced, and gives a fuller idea of the true structure of the kidney.

A noted German scholar recently discovered that by the aid of the microscope, the physician can tell if there is a tumor forming in the system, and if certain appearances are seen in the fluids passed it is proof positive that the tumor is to be a malignant one.

If any derangement of the kidneys is detected by the microscope, the physician looks for the development of almost any disease the system is heir to, and any indication of Bright's disease, which has no symptoms of its own and can not be fully recognized except by the microscope, he looks upon with alarm.

This disease has existed for more than 2,000 years. It is only until recently that the microscope has revealed to us its universal prevalence and fatal character. Persons who formerly died of what was called general debility, nervous breakdown, dropsy, paralysis, heart disease, rheumatism, apoplexy, etc., are now known to have really died of kidney disease, because, had there been no disorder of the kidneys, the chances are that the effects from which they died would never have existed.

As the world becomes better acquainted with the importance of the kidneys in the human economy by the aid of the microscope, there is greater alarm spread through the communities concerning it, and this accounts for the erroneous belief that it is on the increase.

As yet neither homeopathist nor allopathist is prepared with a cure for deranged kidneys, but the world has long since recognized, and many medical gentlemen also recognize and prescribe Warner's safe cure for these derangements, and admit that it is the only specific for the common and advanced forms of kidney disorders.

Formerly the true cause of death was discovered only after death. To-day the microscope shows us, in the water we pass, the dangerous condition of any organ in the body, thus enabling us to treat it promptly and escape premature death.

As the microscope in the hands of laymen has revealed many diseases that the medical men were not aware of, so that preparation, like many other discoveries in medicine and science, was found out by laymen, outside the medical code; consequently it comes very hard for medical men to indorse and prescribe it. Nevertheless, Warner's safe cure continues to grow in popularity and the evidences of its effectiveness are seen on every hand.

Some persons claim that the proprietors should give the medical profession the formula of this remedy, if it is such a "God-send to humanity," and let the physicians and public judge whether or not it be so recognized.

We, however, do not blame them for not publishing the formula, even to get the recognition of the medical profession. The standing of the men who manufacture this great remedy is equal to that of the majority of physicians, and the reason that some doctors give for not adopting and prescribing it—viz.: that they do not know what its ingredients are—is absurd.

Mr. Warner's statement—that many of the ingredients are expensive, and that the desire of the unscrupulous dealer or prescriber to realize a large profit from its manufacture by using cheap or injurious substances for those ingredients would jeopardize its quality and reputation; and that Warner's safe cure can not be made in small quantities on account of the expensive apparatus necessary in compounding these ingredients—seems to us to be a reasonable and sufficient one.

The universal testimony of our friends and neighbors, and the indisputable evidence that it, and it alone, has complete mastery over all diseases of the kidneys, is sufficient explanation of its extraordinary reputation, and conclusive proof that it is, perhaps, the most beneficent discovery known to scientific medicine since the microscope revealed to us the all-important nature of the organs it is designed to reach and benefit.

Earnest Workers.

Every man when he first sets out to achieve success in any work sees innumerable difficulties looming up in every quarter to discourage him by a knowledge of his limitations; and this is the reason so many relax their efforts, moderate their zeal, and finally abandon altogether their undertakings.

It appears like presumption or lack of sense to persist in any scheme or pursuit when upon mature reflection it does seem unattainable; but this discouragement may arise from two sources—either from a false estimate of our abilities, or a lack of courage to confront obstacles and battle with them.

God, however, never stimulated a man to do more for Him or his fellow-man than he has commanded him. All that he demands of us is to be earnest in our life-work, whether great or small, and to perform it to the utmost of our ability.

He whose powers are limited and where range of thought, action, and influence is bounded by insuperable barriers, and yet who is faithful and true to all required of him, is a far more acceptable agent in the sight of God than is he who is dowered with the richest facilities for the accomplishment of all he undertakes, and who looks down disdainfully upon others whose possibilities for good or evil are inferior to his own.

It is impossible for us all to be workers in some broad field or mighty cause, or to have our names and talents the theme of every tongue. This may be what man aspires to, but not what God would accept as the only effective service.

In the great civil contest that desolated our country a quarter of a century in the past our women could not go out to the carnage field and bear their country's ensign amid those leaden tempests dealt out by our foes, nor could they fill up the gaps of the dead and dying; but they did their work of love and duty at home as heroically and faithfully as our soldiers amid the shock of battle. They stood bravely at their posts of danger, and were true to every trust, however grand or lowly, till a life of stint and multiform suffering was closed by the merciful hand of death.

No mother dries her tears, closes her vigils, and ceases to pray for the helpless little creatures of her love and care because her work of sacrifice and hardship is not heralded by every passing breeze to an admiring world, or because it is a small thing of common occurrence the world over for all true mothers to submit uncomplainingly to their lot as a decree of necessity.

Every mother can not give to the world a Luther, a Calvin, a Wesley, a Washington; yet maternal pride and affection are as earnest in their efforts to develop and cultivate the latent powers of each little one as if such noble reward were to crown her efforts.

We must be content to be earnest, hopeful, faithful toilers without the anticipations of man's recognition. The great good deeds live, no longer in grateful hearts than the smaller ones, and in the great day of final reckoning the faithful, patient watcher at the couch of human suffering will be a crowned victor as well as the lauded hero of a score of battle-fields.—Baltimorean.

The Church and Amusements.

The question of amusements is a common one in the Christian mind. It is usually answered by warning the questioner that what is doubtful, what is excessive, if not doubtful, what hinders prayer or hurts zeal or harms others, is unlawful to the Christian. The relation of the church to amusements, is a modern phase of the same question. As the church has to expound the duty of the individual Christian, and to warn him of possible or certain damage in the use of popular amusements, the church itself has been asked to furnish entertainments stamped with the seal of its own approbation, and warranted sure to amuse, and safe from harm. As the church points out the danger to Christian graces that accompany the theatre, the opera, the dance, the card-table, and much else, it is called upon to name pleasures its members may enjoy without criticism and reproof, and certain to be free from the worm in the bud, the serpent in the cup. This plausible appeal has led some churches to recognize the dramatic element in human nature, and to give it a chastened opportunity to express itself in tableaux, charades, and pious amusements in great variety.

The world itself has always been an awful example of the effect of making combinations to do easy things. It has always been a fresh evidence of the depravity of human nature, that societies of men bound together for the easy purpose of pleasure seeking, have never long been restrained by cautious by-laws from exceeding the limits laid down for indulgence. When in the world men combine for intellectual or moral ends, ends that are reached only by paths of pain and effort, woe to these combinations, so far as these ends are concerned, whenever the easy pleasures of the flesh are coupled with the difficult aims of the mind. How many wrecks of lyceums, with their debates and libraries, have been made on this rock of an attempt to do the easy and the hard thing by the same co-operation! Such is human nature, that it should be cautious about combining outside of the lines that are instinctive and necessary, unless it be to secure some worthy end, less difficult to the united power of many, than to the single strength of one. Such is human nature, that when men do combine to cater to each other's natural fondness for pleasure, the worse element of the combination has often an easy triumph over the better, and men vote for indulgences in clubs which individually they would shun.

The church has been formed in part to be to the world a glorious example of the wisdom of uniting to do the hardest things: to worship God, to grow in grace, to lead a holy life, to promulge the gospel, and to go about doing good. All these efforts require omnipotent grace and the strenuous effort of man. They demand a covenant with God, and a compact with all Christ's disciples, that heart may encourage heart, and hand strengthen hand in a mighty resistance to the world, the flesh, and the devil. The moment we add to the church's catalogue of duties the amusement or entertaining of her membership, or of the world that throngs her courts, we introduce an element foreign to her nature, and one that will be sure to damage her character and tend to defeat her mission.

While we would encourage sociability in our churches, and all the safe means that foster it, we urgently warn against a plausible sentiment, the adoption of which would make the Christian brotherhood, contending for truth and life, a company of moral clubs bent on having a good time: would rapidly obscure the word and work of Christ; would gather an audience, but not a church; would entertain the masses, but not save souls.—Evangelist.

Wonderful Popularity of the Renowned Medicine.

THE GREATEST CURATIVE SUCCESS OF THE AGE—A VOICE FROM THE PEOPLE.

No medicine introduced to the public has ever met with the success accorded to Hop Bitters. It stands to-day the best known curative article in the world. Its marvelous renown is not due to the advertising it has received. It is famous by reason of its inherent virtues. It does all that is claimed for it. It is the most powerful, speedy and effective agent known for the building up of debilitated systems. The following witnesses are offered to prove this:

WHAT IT DID FOR AN OLD LADY.

Coshocton Station, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1884.

GENTS:—A number of people have been using your Bitters here, and with marked effect. In fact one case, a lady of over seventy years, had been sick for years, and for the past ten years I have known her she has not been able to be around half the time. About six months ago she got so feeble she was helpless. Herald remedies, or physicians, being of no avail, I sent to Deposit, forty-five miles, and got a bottle of Hop Bitters. It had such a very beneficial effect on her that one bottle improved her so she was able to dress herself and walk about the house. When she had taken the second bottle she was able to take care of her own room and walk out to her neighbor's, and has improved all the time since. My wife and children also have derived great benefit from their use.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC ENDORSEMENT.

Gorham, N. H., July 15, 1886.

GENTS.—Whoever you are, I don't know, but I thank the Lord and feel grateful to you to know that in this world of adulterated medicines there is one compound that proves and does all it advertises to do, and more. Four years ago, I had a slight shock of palsy, which unnerved me to such an extent that the least excitement would make me shake like the ague. Last May I was induced to try Hop Bitters. I used one bottle, but did not see any change; another did so change my nerves that they are now as steady as they ever were. It used to take both hands to write, but now my good right hand writes this. Now, if you continue to manufacture as honest and good an article as you do, you will accumulate an honest fortune, and confer the greatest blessing on your fellow-men that was ever conferred on mankind.

TIM BURCH.

A PHYSICIAN'S TESTIMONY.

My wife was troubled for years with blotches, moth patches and pimples on her face, which nearly annoyed the life out of her. She spent many dollars on the thousand infallible (?) cures, with nothing but injurious effect. A lady friend, of Syracuse, N. Y., who had had similar experience and had been cured with Hop Bitters, induced her to try it. One bottle has made her face as smooth, fair and soft as a child's and given her such health that it seems almost a miracle.

A MEMBER OF CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

A RICH LADY'S EXPERIENCE.

I traveled all over Europe and other foreign countries at a cost of thousands of dollars. In search of health and found it not. I returned discouraged and disheartened, and was restored to good health and spirits with less than two bottles of Hop Bitters. I hope others may profit by my experience and stay at home.

By the help of one of our active pastors we have been able to procure the following statistics of churches and schools in New Orleans: The whole number of churches is 171. Baptist, 50; Roman Catholic, 35; Methodist Episcopal, 26; Presbyterian, 14; Episcopal, 12; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 11; Lutheran, 8; Evangelican Protestant, 6; Jewish, 5; Congregational, 2; Christian, 1; Greek, 1; Unitarian, 1. There are, private schools, 141; public schools, 51. By no sort of ingenuity has our reporter been able to find out the number of saloons; but, as they are doomed, we can afford to do without that knowledge.

Attention is drawn by the British Medical Journal to the extraordinary decrease in the consumption of alcohol in workhouses in the last fifteen years. The total expenditure for England and Wales in 1871 was £82,551. In 1881 it was £60,303; 1885 it was £44,820. This is not due to a decrease in the number of inmates, for since 1881 twenty-five per cent. less drink has been taken by three per cent. more inmates. Fifteen provincial workhouses have reported no expenditure, and several more have reported expenditure varying from 18s. to 5d. for a year's consumption. "This reduction by one-half in fifteen years, and one-quarter in five years," says The British Medical Journal, "is as gratifying as it is remarkable. It is an indication of the radical change of medical opinion in the direction of the exceptional and guarded prescription of alcohol in accurately defined doses for the occasion only."

TO THE SISTERS.—What is the reason that every sister who reads this ADVOCATE is not a subscriber to the Woman's Missionary Advocate, published by our House in Nashville? Is it because she can not raise the small sum of fifty cents a year? If the editor should accuse any sister of being too poor to pay fifty cents a year, his accusation would be resented as downright slander and as an open insult. So the reason for not taking the Missionary Advocate can not be the poverty of the sisters. Is it because the paper is not worth fifty cents a year? Twelve numbers for fifty cents is just four and one-sixth cents per number. Now, if you could see this monthly with its fifteen pages of solid reading on missionary topics, consisting of bright notes by the editor, Mrs. Butler; interesting letters from workers and travelers in our mission fields; its miscellaneous department of news about the work; its Home Department, showing what is being done by the workers at home, and its Juvenile Department, recording what the little ones are doing for the Master's cause, you would say it is the cheapest paper that is published. Sisters, you ought to be ashamed that your names are not on the subscription list of the Woman's Missionary Advocate.

In earthly journeys, he is safest who stops often to inquire the road from others; but in our heavenly journey—our way to the right—the more we inquire from others, the more we err; the light must come from within, not from without.

That I May Know Him.

Paul described his conversion by saying, "God revealed his Son in me." And when he wanted other people to be converted, he "preached Christ unto them." A knowledge of Christ, in the sense in which Paul used the term, is a knowledge essentially different from any and every other knowledge. It has a saving quality, which is imparted to him who obtains that knowledge. This quality gives it a vitality that does not exist in any other knowledge. It is this quality—this saving efficacy—which Paul denominates "the excellency of the knowledge of Christ." For the attainment of this "excellency," he declares that he had "counted all things loss."

Paul had a good measure of knowledge of different sorts. He was learned in language and philosophy and history and all the literature of his day. No doubt he appreciated the benefits which came to him from this acquisition; but when God opened another department of his being, and revealed to him the knowledge of Christ within, "the hope of glory," he exclaimed, "I count all things loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord." This knowledge satisfied, because it saved; and because it saved, he called it "the excellency of the knowledge of Christ." To him it was the best of all knowledge. In comparison with it, everything else was the merest trash. The experience of every true Christian tallies with the experience of Paul on this point. Experimental knowledge of Christ surpasses all other knowledge in breadth and length and sweetness.

To know him as a Savior is the best of all knowledge to a lost sinner! To come to the consciousness, that "I live by the faith of the son of God, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," excels in preciousness all other experiences of the human spirit! To know and feel and realize that "he loved me and gave himself for me," is a rock to which the tempest-tossed soul can fearlessly anchor itself and outride the fiercest storms that blow over the sea of human life. To know Christ in the pardon of sin, to feel the influence of his regenerating Spirit and to realize the sanctifying power of his truth upon the life are the things that satisfy the unrest and calm the agitations of restless souls. The blessed word of our Lord to his disciples was, "In me ye shall have peace." So Paul, having tasted of this blessed knowledge—having experienced its sweetness, ever after found in his heart the yearning, "that I may know him." He looked for clearer revelations, he expected fuller manifestations of that Divine knowledge, and hence he forgot the glorious past and "pressed toward" that goal. The coming vision of the "King in his beauty" had captured all the longings of his earnest soul, and the one aim, the one ambition, the one hope, the one all-absorbing desire of his life is expressed in the words, "that I may know him."

Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston.

April sixth was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the great battle of Shiloh. On that battle-field Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston received his death-wound. In his death, every thoughtful man in the Southern Confederacy felt the blow from which there was never recovery. Gen. Johnston was regarded by many as the ablest military leader on either side of that great contest. Dr. Bledsoe said of him, "He was the simplest, bravest, grandest man we have ever known." Jefferson Davis said, "He was the greatest soldier, the ablest man, civil or military, Federal or Confederate." Looking back twenty-five years, we can now see that the shot that felled Albert Sidney Johnston on the bloody field of Shiloh was the shot that penetrated the heart of the Confederacy. Twenty-five years from that fatal day, in this city, there was unveiled an equestrian statue of this military hero. It was fitting that something should be done of this sort, that our coming people may be led to inquire into "the story of a man who was as good as he was great, and as great as humanity permits a man to be."

It is estimated that fully 15,000 people were present at the unveiling. The various military companies and the veterans of the late war, Federal and Confederate, participated in the ceremonies. Senator Gibson was the orator of the day, and his eloquent address on the life and work and character of the dead hero made a lasting impression upon the vast audience. Mr. Jefferson Davis also spoke tenderly of the memories of his comrade in arms. A poem by Mrs. Mary Ashley Townsend was read by A. J. Lewis, and also one by Mrs. Kate Brownlee Sherwood, of Toledo, Ohio, was read by Gen. William Pierce. The statue is an immense bronze equestrian, and shows the horse and his rider to very great advantage, and is pronounced the best of its kind in any country. It is the work of Mr. Alexander Doyle, the sculptor, who has four other statues in this city. It was cast by the Ames Bronze Company, of Chicopa, Mass.

The day was a delightful one, and the citizens of all grades enjoyed it as a holiday. The whole program of ceremonies, from the reception of the desire to erect a monument to Gen. Johnston to its unveiling amid salvos of artillery and shouts of admiring thousands, was under the admirable management of the Association of the Army of Tennessee.

Regeneration—Its Nature and Extent.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

Although we can not define in the words which man's wisdom teacheth the nature of the invisible, intangible, and spiritual process by which the Holy Spirit renews us in the spirit of our minds, we may from Scripture and our consciousness, at least, in a measure, define its nature and extent. We shall simplify the subject, and make our apprehension of it clearer, by considering first, negatively, what regeneration is not; and, secondly, so far as we may comprehend it, what it is.

Regeneration is not any physical or bodily change. We have the same members, the same senses, and the same bodily appetites after regeneration that we had before. But it is to be observed—God be praised!—that these members, senses, and appetites are no longer the servants of sin, but are the servants of righteousness. The eye is no longer wanton, but sees the glory of God revealed in his works and word; the tongue is no longer a vehicle of profanity or filthy communication, but blesses God and sings aloud of his righteousness and ministers grace to the hearers; the hands are no longer the ministers of violence and wrong, but are consecrated to holy uses; the feet no longer walk in forbidden ways, but walk in the narrow path, the way of holiness; the appetites are indulged in purity and temperance, and all "the passions hold a pleasing reign."

Regeneration makes and necessitates no change in our honest calling—no change in any scriptural relation. Regeneration bestows no new intellectual powers. The regenerated man has, as he had before, perception, understanding, memory and will; but these powers are better and differently directed than in the unregenerate. The regenerate man perceives and conceives of himself quite differently from what he did before. He now sees that in his unregenerate state he was a great sinner—that he had no righteousness. He is now humbled under the mighty hand of God. He thinks of Christ now very differently from what he formerly did. Once he saw no beauty in Christ that he should desire him; now his soul longeth and crieth after him. He is the "chiefest among ten thousand," the one altogether lovely. Once he had thought little and seldom of Christ; but now Christ is the theme of his sweetest and most sacred meditations.

"His name yields the richest perfume,
And sweeter than music his voice."

The regenerate man has the same understanding, but it has been illuminated; he knows the way of the Lord—he has passed from darkness to light. His memory, once heedless of the Lord, remembers his Creator, and remembers to keep his commandments holy. The will of the regenerate man is in harmony with God's will, and he bows in meek and loving submission to the teachings of God's Word and dispensations of his providence.

What, then, is specially new in him in whom old things have passed away? He has a "new heart," or new affections. Once he said, doubting the reality of all happiness, "Who will show me any good?" Once his heart was supremely set on the world, and he sought all his happiness in the things which perish in the using. In some of its good things he sought and expected to realize all his happiness; but now Christ is the chief desire of his soul. "Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire besides thee. He desires Christ for himself, for his family, and for the world; his daily prayer is, Thy kingdom come. The regenerate have new pleasures. The time was when the service of God was a weariness; he shrunk from prayer, and had neither heart nor tongue for praise. His delight was not in the law of the Lord; he did not meditate in it day and night. But now he loves Jerusalem above his chief joy, and is glad when it is said, Let us go into the house of the Lord. He feels that a day in God's courts is better than a thousand, and that he had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of the Lord than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. He finds delight in the law of the Lord that is indeed holy, just and good—altogether adapted to his needs. He finds Jesus in the Scriptures, for they testify of him. The precious promises are worth more to him than thousands of gold and silver, and sweeter than the honey and the droppings of the honeycomb.

The new creature leads a new, a risen, a consecrated life. Take a lively and illustrious example—Saul of Tarsus. See him under the dominion of an unregenerate heart, breathing out slaughter and death, consenting to martyrdoms, and arresting holy men and women, and binding them in chains and casting them into prison, for no other crime than worshiping God differently from himself. See the ferocious bigot that he was, filled with all uncharitableness, going about like the enemy of all good, seeking whom he might destroy, "a persecutor, and injurious." Then look at him as the humbled and regenerated Paul with his new heart. See his meekness, his untiring zeal, his quenchless love. See him in hunger, nakedness and peril, like his blessed Lord, going about doing good; ceasing not day nor night to warn men even with tears of tenderest love, saying, "My heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is that they might be saved." So wholly changed that he exclaims, "God forbid I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Not only many millions of heathens in many lands, ancient and modern times, have turned from dumb idols, and the ferocious habits of cannibals, to lives of purity and love: but the proud are humbled; the unclean have become pure; the fierce, gentle; the profane, prayerful; the drunkard, temperate; and the persecutor loves Jesus and comforts the people of God. Such are some of the evidences of the new creation, the fruits of the new life—a life in harmony with God and the original constitution of the soul.

"A heart in every thought renewed,
And full of love divine;
Perfect, and right, and pure, and good—
A copy, Lord, of thine."

Evils of Concerts or Tableaux.

Music, one of God's best gifts to man, intended to be used for his praise, for the cultivation of devotion and better employment of time, in family and social circles, fails to answer its end when used as an introduction to, or an adjunct of, theatrical amusements. Tableaux are insidious and delusive to the young. Familiarity with them prepares the mind "first to endure, then to embrace," the public theatre, which, though in many of its arrangements it is more objectionable, has this advantage—that the plays of Shakespeare, and some others, have more intellectual merit than the frivolous scenes performed by the young, and even children, in the presence of a promiscuous crowd, whose attendance is solicited that the profit may be greater.

Pollock says of theatres: "They might be made schools of morals, but they never have been." A distinguished author, speaking of the stage in the days of Garrick, as less corrupting than at other times, says, "Whatever it has been or might be, it is now the direct road to everlasting ruin." It is an evil that so much time, abstracted from study and useful employment, is misspent in rehearsals and other preparations necessary to approved acting in the different scenes.

Another evil is that the health is endangered by the thin textures and frequent changes of dress and by coming into the cold atmosphere from a heated room. The evil is greatly enhanced when the expense is considered. Money is produced by the toil of the hands or brains of those who furnish it. God, by giving the capability and favoring providences, enables the toiler to make it. He is God's steward, and will have to give an account to his Lord in the day of reckoning. When the accounts are brought in of the costly costumes (utterly valueless except for such occasions) and the attendant expenses, will not the misused talent bring more condemnation than if laid up in a napkin? Who will be most accountable for this: they who are wearing out their strength with toil to obtain the funds, or they who remotely or directly appropriate them for diversions?

Not the least evil is the risk to the priceless sensibilities which require so much care in the training. A writer of great merit wrote: "Well would it be if the efforts of teacher or parent were directed to better the heart, to fortify it against the attacks of vice and the allurements of fashion and folly. Forgetting this, do we not seem to educate our daughters exclusively for the transient period of youth, when it is for mature life we ought to educate them? Do we not educate them for a crowd, forgetting that they are to live at home? for the world and not for themselves? for time and not for eternity? In training them should we not be careful to cultivate intellect, implant religion and cherish modesty?" Were this advice followed, our young people would develop those qualities which make them most lovely and useful in life and better prepared for immortal joys.

New Orleans District Conference.

In session at Carondelet Street Church, it was one of the largest and most successful gatherings of its sort that has been held in our city for many years. Bishop W. W. Duncan presided with his usual urbanity and close attention to business. Nothing was allowed to escape him, and his wise suggestions were highly appreciated by the brethren. His coming among us has given a strong impetus to the local missionary spirit abroad in our New Orleans Methodism, and we are encouraged to hope for grand results in the energetic pushing of mission work, the building of Parker Memorial Church, the paying of the debt on Carrollton Avenue Church and the establishing of mission schools and the building of chapels in neglected parts of the city.

The reports of the preachers showed that a healthy spiritual condition exists throughout the district, and that every charge is on rising ground. The committees presented thoroughly prepared reports, several of them being worthy of a place in the Review. Bishop Duncan preached in the power of the Spirit three times, and stirred all hearts by his clear-cut presentation of the gospel.

The following brethren were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference: Hon. W. H. Foster, H. Jamieson, Jr., Wm. B. Thomson and Col. J. W. Nicholson; alternates—B. O. L. Rayne and J. H. Keller.

The following were elected as Seashore Camp Meeting trustees: Wm. H. Foster, P. Werlein, Thos. J. Carver, H. Jamieson, Jr., B. O. L. Rayne, J. H. Campman, Henry Haag, E. P. Mackey.

A delightful and deeply spiritual session was it, and we trust all that follow will be like unto it.

Items of Interest.

Maine has fifty-six farmers in her House of Representatives.

During 1886 the American Bible Society circulated 17,946,712 pages of the Scriptures in Japan.

An English paper states that "more than six thousand of the benefices of the English Church are legally saleable." Does that not mean "traffic in human souls?"

The Baltimore Conference contributed last year over $10,000 for foreign missions.

A revival in Charlottesville, Va., of all the churches resulted up to date in 1,000 conversions.

The Holy Spirit is vindicating the truth of his promises, for in many places the revival services are very successful. An exchange says: "The revival spirit is taking hold all over Atlanta, Georgia." So in this great wicked city. The Lord's people are astir, and the Spirit is before them and behind them, and the work is deepening and widening all about us.

The number of Methodists in New York City is published as 16,000, which is one in one hundred of the population. The property held by them is estimated at $4,941,000

The total abstinence movement in England is largely confined to the middle classes. The aristocracy is "conservative" even on the temperance question.

There is a bill before the Pennsylvania Legislature and also one before the Legislature of New Jersey making it unlawful for spiritual mediums to pursue their practices for gain.

It is said that the Mohammedans have ninety-nine names for the Divine Being; but the appellation, "Our Father," is not among them. Christianity alone reveals that relation of God to his creatures.

Quito, in South America, is the only city in the world on the equator, and, of course, the sun always rises and always sets at six o'clock. Now you can locate one part of that "imaginary line, called the equator."

The Stewart collection of pictures was sold recently, and the amount realized was $513,750. Mr. Vanderbilt bought Rosa Bonheur's "Horse Fair" for $53,000, and presented it to the Art Museum in New York City.

The Brookhaven District Conference.

This body met in Brookhaven, Miss., April 7. Bishop Galloway presided. There was a large attendance of ministers and laymen and visitors. The reports of the preachers on the various topics which come before a District Conference indicated gratifying progress along all lines of church work. Every charge reported the whole amount of Conference collections provided for, and some of them have a surplus. Some revival meetings have been held, and many others are being arranged for the coming summer months. The special feature of this Conference was the mass meetings, on Church Extension, Sunday-schools, Education and Missions. These meetings were largely attended, and the speeches were "good to the use of edifying." The Local Preachers' Conference also had its session at the same time. The local brethren of that district are putting themselves in harmony with the pastors in the work of extending the Lord's kingdom. The representative of "our paper" was well received, was feasted and worked and rewarded by a handsome list of subscribers. There was a good work of grace manifested on the Sabbath day. The communion service and experience meeting in the evening was a time of special nearness to heaven. We were glad to find so many ADVOCATES taken by the church in the Brookhaven district. And the presiding elder says that he is working to give us 1,000 more new subscribers by the end of the year. We pray for his success in that line, and that other presiding elders will imitate him in so good a work.

The following resolution was adopted by an unanimous and rising vote:

Whereas, Bishop Charles B. Galloway was born and reared in the State of Mississippi, and is so thoroughly identified with our people in all their interests, and enjoys their confidence to such a degree that he can exercise a commanding influence in the furtherance of the enterprises of the church; and

Whereas, His election to the episcopacy puts him in a position to serve us even more efficiently than before; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we most earnestly request him to make his home in his native State; and, in furtherance of this desire, we hereby express our willingness to co-operate with the Methodists of Mississippi and North Mississippi in taking such steps as may be necessary to secure a residence for Bishop Galloway at such place as he may elect.

Notice.

The Aberdeen District Conference and Sunday-school Convention will meet at Tupelo, Thursday, May 26, at 9 A. M. Rev. John Ritchey will preach a Sunday-school sermon on Thursday, at 11 A. M. Rev. T. W. Dye will preach the opening sermon of the District Conference, Thursday night. Thursday will be devoted to the discussion of Sunday-school interests.

1. "The character of teachers; and how shall we obtain them?" T. B. Sykes, John M. Trice and Rev. H. R. Tucker.

2. "The best way to meet the pecuniary obligation of the Sunday-school." J. C. Burdine, M. C. Shell.

3. "What advantage is there in an Annual Sunday-school Convention, and what are the obligation of Sunday-school delegates to attend?" Eugene Johnson, G. W. Gordon and Jack Fountain.

4. "What is the moral influence of the Sunday-school on the family, the community, the nation?" J. R. Roberson, John Ritchey, W. W. Hoskins, Col. J. A. Blair.

Let us have a full representation. Let pastors see that their Quarterly Conference records are on hand.

Personals.

A writer in the Advance says that Joseph Cook "has not the power in Boston that he once had."

Bro. Futrell says when he counted noses he could only see $25 in sight; but when his collection baskets came back to him they brought $110. It is always safe to take a collection with the faith that Abraham had, which against hope believes in hope.

Rev. Felix R. Hill, of the St. Louis Conference, has a good sermon, on "The Law of the Lord," in the last number of the Southwestern Methodist.

The church papers seem determined to improve their looks. Now comes the "steady and staid" Wesleyan in a new suit, and, with a "merry twinkle in the eye," salutes the public and attracts its delighted attention. We extend our right hand in token of appreciation of its progressiveness.

Richard A. Proctor, the astronomer, has come down from the stars and star-dust and comets et al., and in the last number of the Forum he tackles the sea serpent. The professor is not as clear on this subject as he is on the "fice-mist" of the heavens. Indeed, he seems to be quite careful to keep himself outside the circle of the "big gooseberry season." What an ambitious sprite science is anyhow!

Dr. Ray Palmer, the hymn writer, died recently in Newark, N. J., aged eighty years.

Dr. H. M. Scudder and wife will sail for Japan in June, to engage in missionary work.

Emperor William and Queen Victoria will meet at Weisbaden immediately after Easter.

It is said that Queen Victoria visited Birmingham recently to lay the corner-stone of a court-building, and her visit cost the city $50,000.

It is said that Senator Thurman and President White, of Cornell University, both declined positions on the Interstate Railroad Commission.

Bishop Galloway will dedicate two new churches in Durham, S. C., the fourth Sunday in April.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate, of March 30, published the obituary of a Methodist lady—Mrs. Annie Carpenter—aged 101 years, five months and three days.

Ira D. Sankey, the singing evangelist, has donated to the Methodist Church in New Castle, Penn., a building lot worth $1,000, on condition that the church put a $25,000 house of worship on it.

A private note from Bro. J. P. P. Shepherd says that he is somewhat improved, but is still suffering great pain. We know that he has the sympathies and prayers of his brethren for a speedy recovery.

Rev. R. G. Pearson, the evangelist, is holding interesting revival services in Columbus, Miss.

Bro. T. W. Lewis reports a gracious revival at Carrollton, Miss., there being twenty-seven conversions and fifteen accessions to the church up to April 8.

Bro. J. M. Wynn, at Winona, Miss., has collected and forwarded his full assessment for foreign missions—$94.

The Lake Charles Station Sunday-school—Rev. J. T. Daves, pastor—has sent forward $21 for foreign missions, being fifteen cents per member.

Dr. F. M. Featherston writes us that the prohibition cause in Rankin county, Miss., was triumphant by a vote of three to one. So the cause is gradually gaining ground.

Bro. Isbell, of Robeline, La., gives a good account of his work. Many things are progressing, and the new church is nearly ready for dedication.

Attention!

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground, on the grounds, on Friday, the fifteenth instant, at half-past eight A. M. A full attendance of the Board is urgently requested, as business of importance will be taken up.

Parties desiring to build this year, or having lots assigned them, will please make application to the secretary before the meeting. Tenters desiring to sell or rent their tents will please report same in time for approval by the trustees at the approaching meeting.

W. H. FOSTER, President.
E. P. MACKIE, Secretary.

Notice.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Discipline requires that the Conference Board of Missions shall arrange for holding anniversary meetings within the presiding elders' districts of the Conference, in the interest of missions. (See Art. 13, on missions—page 186.) Will you please see that a meeting be held in accordance with this requirement. Make program to suit yourselves.

There seems to be little doubt at this time that the Volunteer Southrons will go to Washington.

The Annual State Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Mississippi, will meet in Columbus, May 28.

Periodicals.

—The Forum, for April, is as full as usual of able and timely articles. It leads off with Manual Training in the Public Schools, by T. Davidson; and then follow, Washington Gladden, William T. Harris, Amos K. Fiske and others, each in his line contributing to the fund of daily thought. This periodical is one of the best. Forum Publishing Company, 97 Fifth avenue, New York. Price, $5.

—The Eclectic Magazine contains twenty-three articles besides the Literary Notes and Miscellany. There is reading in the April number to suit every grade of intellect and every variety of taste, and the most of it is of the finest quality of foreign thought. E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York. Price, $5.

—The Southern Bivouac is full of reminiscences of the late war, and "fights its battles over;" also other interesting papers. Southern Bivouac, Louisville, Ky. Price, $2.

—Littell's Living Age, No. 2231, has Gladstone's Notes and Queries on the Irish Demand, and other reading of interest. Littell & Co., Boston. Price, $8.

—Building, for April 2, is before us, and is, in the fullest sense, a church number. We note, in looking over the full-page plates, eight different churches from five well-known church architects, suitable for different denominations, together with suggestions for pews, desks and other church fittings. Besides which there are designs for city and country houses which offer excellent suggestions for parsonages. Building has, from time to time, brought out sketches for churches and chapels, and, we understand, proposes in the future giving church work a fair proportion of its attention, and we consider that a subscription to this paper would be a good investment for any church building committee. Mr. Comstock, of New York, the publisher, informs us that school-house architecture will be made the special subject of an early number as church architecture is of this one. Besides the illustrations, each number will contain valuable and interesting articles on architectural and building matters.

—The Century, for April, opens with a portrait of Nathaniel Hawthorne, after which we have a most varied and delightful course of good things. Joel Chandler Harris, Frank R. Stockton, Edward Eggleston, Mark Twain—all appear in their special roles. Gen. D. H. Hill gives a thrilling account of the battle of Chickamauga. The Life of Lincoln continues to grow in interest. Altogether this is one of the best numbers of this popular monthly. Century Company, Union Square, New York City. Price, $1.

—The Brooklyn Magazine, for April, has among its good things an autograph reproduction of Mrs. Rose Hartwick Thorpe's "Curfew Must Not Ring To-Night." The present editor retires from the editorial chair, and the next number will be called the American Magazine. It will be published, at $3 per annum, by R. T. Bush & Son, 130 and 132 Pearl St., New York City.

—Wide Awake, for April, is simply unsurpassable. From its charming frontispiece, entitled "Easter Morning," to the last letter from its Postoffice, in which a little maid of nine years, with a delicious naivete, decides the case for the family doctor, this number is quite ahead of any we have yet seen. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston, Mass. Price, $2 40 per annum.

—The Pulpit Treasury, for April, completes the fourth volume of this valuable magazine. Preachers and Sunday-school workers will find this monthly a good assistant in their work. E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, New York. Price, $2 50. Clergymen, $2.

—Littell's Living Age, No. 2,232, April 2, contains articles from thirteen different English magazines and reviews, besides Poetry and Miscellany. It is one of the finest. Published weekly at $8 per annum, and is cheap at that price.

—Babyhood, for April, is an important number. Nursery Problems and Mother's Parliament are especially good. We have already commended this magazine to parents, and see no reason to withdraw our commendation. Babyhood Publishing Company, 5 Beekman street, New York. Price, $1 50.

—The Gospel in All Lands devotes this month to South America. It is full of all sorts of interesting information—especially missionary intelligence—in regard to our Southern neighbors. 805 Broadway, New York. Price, $2.

—We have received from Henry C. Amos, of this city, the prospectus of a select library of the Ante-Nicene, Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers, edited by Philip Schaff, D. D. This is a republication of the Edinburgh series, and is of special interest to all students of the Bible and church history in this country. The early centuries of the church constitute an era of great interest to the student, and in these volumes he has access to the church-thought of that day. Every one interested in the study of that period should take advantage of Dr. Schaff's work, and make an addition to his library by putting in these volumes. They are published by The Christian Literature Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and sold only by subscription.

—The Book-Buyer, for this month, gives a portrait and sketch of Edward Eggleston, and much of news that will interest literary people. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $1 per annum.

—The following pamphlets have been received:

The Sorghum Hand-Book. Blymyer Iron Works, Cincinnati.

Cotton Bulletin No. 8, of the State Experiment Station, Baton Rouge. W. C. Stubbs, Ph. D., director. Issued by Thompson J. Bird, Baton Rouge, La.

Capt. Glazier and His Lake. An inquiry into the history and progress of exploration at the headwaters of the Mississippi river. Ivison, Blakeman & Company, New York and Chicago.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of sedentary habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy condition, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS, 25c.

FOR

Biliousness, Sick Headache, Constipation, Dyspepsia.

Now when the buds begin to show,
'Tis time for young and old to know
That Fevers, Lassitude and all
The ills at Indigestion's call,
With every trouble, ache or pain,
That follows in the Bilious train,
Will scatter like the thieves at night,
Before a dose of SELTZER bright.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, much in favor for the purpose of pleasing the palate (than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MO.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

DYSPEPSIA

IS NOT A BLOOD DISEASE, and CANNOT be cured by the so-called blood purifiers, but is caused most commonly by an imperfect condition of the secretions; the food fails to digest properly, the mucous lining of the stomach is weakened, and chronic dyspepsia results, bringing the bad appetite, the faint, gnawing feeling, low spirits, and all the symptoms dyspeptics know so well.

DON'T LEAVE THE FARM.

Come, boys, I have something to tell you;
Come near, I would whisper it low—
You are thinking of leaving the homestead,
Don't do it, I pray you, to go.
The great stirring world has inducements,
There is many a gay, busy mart;
But wealth is not made in a day, boys,
Don't be in a hurry to start.

The farm is the safest and surest.
The orchards are yielding to-day;
You're free as the air of the mountains,
And monarch of all you survey;
Better stay on the farm awhile longer,
Though profits should come rather slow;
Remember you've nothing to risk, boys,
Don't be in a hurry to go.

—Christian at Work.

MR. EDITOR: It has been some time since I wrote to the dear old ADVOCATE. As you were so kind as to publish my last, I know you will give space in your excellent paper for this one. I want my dear uncle and aunt in Yazoo to see and read my letter. I am a little boy, but, I tell you, I can do lots of work when I am not at school. Sometimes I think I will take a little rest, and run up to the store; but papa soon presses me into service there. Mamma has only us four boys. She says we keep up such a racket that she has to keep us at work. Sometimes I think if I had a little sister, I could play off; but mamma is a terrible woman to keep folks moving. Our new preacher has been to see us. We like him very much. He caught me in the water fishing, and gave me a nice little chat. I have been waiting some time for some one to answer Annie L. Wilson's puzzle, for I am anxious to know how twenty-five hogs can be killed at four killings, and kill an odd number every time. Papa and grandpa have given it up. Now, I shall call on the little maid to give us the correct answer, and oblige,

Your little friend,

CLIFTON P. THOMPSON.

CANTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Will you kindly give me permission to enter the list in the young people's column? I have never written before. My father is a farmer. We live twelve miles from Baton Rouge. We have Baptist preaching once a month, and Methodist once a month, near us. We have not had Sunday-school now for a year or more. I hope we will have one this spring. Bro. Anderson is our pastor this year. I have not heard him preach yet. Bro. Reid is our Baptist pastor. Papa does not take the ADVOCATE; but my aunt does, and sends it to us. I love to read it. I was ten years old last July. I do not go to school. I study at home, and mother hears my lessons. I love my books. I have got ten pretty little pigs. They are so full of fun. I love to see them play. Dear little cousins, I will ask you one question: What was Jesus' superscription of his accusation? Dear Editor, I will close for fear this will go to the scrap-basket.

DAISY WATTS.

EAST BATON ROUGE PARISH, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen my name in print, I will write you a letter. I go to Sabbath-school every Sunday when the weather is favorable. We have not had much school for some time past, but it has revived up again. My papa is superintendent. Papa and I joined the church last second Sunday. Our pastor is Rev. J. W. Ellison. Annie Wilson will not have to pay for the paper because none of the friends could work her puzzle. I am not prepared to answer any questions this time, but will ask one: Where in the Bible is the word "girl" found? I will close, hoping my first letter will not find its way into the waste-basket. Wishing the ADVOCATE much success, I remain,

Your little friend,

ALICE WARREN.

GRANGEVILLE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy ten years old. Papa takes your valuable paper; and as I have never seen a letter from this part of the country, I thought I would write you one. I would have written sooner, but, like most of the little cousins, I feared that dreadful waste-basket. I go to Sunday-school. Mrs. Carrie Hill is my teacher. I love her very much. She gave me a nice Bible for memorizing the first chapter in the Bible. Bro. P. H. Howard was sent back to us this year. I am also going to school. I have one little sister and brother that go with me. I will close by asking the little cousins, Where is "looking-glass" found in the Bible?

CORNELIUS ALLEN.

GAYDEN, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote my letter on a slate, and got my grandma to copy it on paper. We are living in our new house now; large trees and cane all around us. A wildcat or mink killed a turkey hen last week. We set traps now of a night, but have only caught a mouse. My papa left for Arkansas, Christmas day, to work on the levee. We are looking for him home this or next week. And we will be very happy when he comes. Samuel J. Potter, Moses wrote the first five books in the Bible—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. I will ask the cousins a question: How long after the shipwreck did Paul sail for Rome? I want to tell you about my little sister, Helen. She had just finished her prayer the other night, and she said, "O Lord! bless my sore toe, and make it well." My brother, Gardner, reads in the Aid and Guide, and has prayer, now papa is gone.

Your little friend,

MARY L. CURRIE.

EAST CARROLL PARISH, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am little eight-year-old Marvin's brother. I thought if he could write for the ADVOCATE, I would write too. Whatever one does, we both do—in work or play. I am going to the same school, and am studying grammar, history, geography, arithmetic, and reading from fifth reader. Pa has given us a patch (for cotton) to work together; and we haul fertilizers with a slide and basket with our little oxen every Saturday to put on it. I am learning to cipher, but I have not learned enough to answer Annie Wilson's puzzle about the hogs. I think that it is a catch. If Annie will tell me two odd numbers added together that will make an odd number, perhaps I could tell her how to divide the hogs. With good wishes to the ADVOCATE, I remain, Your little friend,

EVERETT M'DONALD.

FAYETTE, Mississippi.

THE "Life of the flesh is the blood thereof;" pure blood means healthy functional activity and this bears with it the certainty of quick restoration from sickness or accident. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier gives pure rich blood, and vitalizes and strengthens the whole body. $1.00 per bottle.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter from our neighborhood, I will endeavor to write one. I am a little boy thirteen years old. We are raising fruit. We have a nice little orchard. We have a nice strawberry patch; we raise for market. We had a nice time picking them. Oh, how nice they are to eat! I am not going to school. We have no school near at present. I think I can answer Charlton M. Gaughy's questions. I think Esau sold his birthright for a pot of porridge; and Enoch was caught up in a whirlwind. I will ask one: Which is the shortest verse in the Bible? I close, hoping to see my first letter in print. I remain,

Your little friend,

MANNIE WATTS.

EAST BATON ROUGE PARISH, Louisiana.

LIFE will acquire new zest, and cheerfulness return, if you will impel your liver and kidneys to the performance of their functions. Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm will stimulate them to healthful action. $1.00 per bottle.

CONTENTED WITH LITTLE.—When Lord Macaulay entered Parliament, he was a poor man, dependent on a limited college income, and on the fifty or sixty guineas received from his brilliant articles in the Edinburgh Review. But no man was ever more cheerful, or less inclined to repine over his straitened condition.

He was a welcome guest at the table of Lady of Holland, and in the houses of eminent Whig nobles; but his daily letters to his sisters contained not a word of envy at their superior wealth, or of murmuring at his own lot. He never allowed himself to incur any debt, and had no longing for indulgences beyond his income.

When in later life he had accumulated a small fortune from the savings of his lucrative office in India, and from the magnificent returns from his history, he delighted to recall the struggles of his early life.

He would recount to his nephews and nieces the days when, after a fierce debate of twelve or fifteen hours in the House of Commons, he would walk home by daylight to his chambers, and sit down to a cheese sent to him by a constituent from Wiltshire, and a little substantial food, and feel supremely contented.—Youth's Companion.

Farm and Home.

LAUNDRY GLOSS.—Get two ounces of fine white gum arabic, pound it to a powder, put it in a pitcher, and pour on it a pint or more of boiling water, according to the strength desired. Then cover it, and allow it to stand all night. In the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle, cork and keep for use. A tablespoonful of this gum-water stirred into a pint of starch that has been made in the usual manner will give a beautiful gloss to shirt-bosoms, and a look of newness to lawns and similar materials. Laundrymen employ patent irons, which materially help to produce the polish after which so many housekeepers seek. There are several compounds known under the name of "starch-luster," which are intended to serve the same purposes as the above. The principal ingredients in all of these is stearine, colored with a slight addition of ultramarine blue. With or without this coloring matter, the addition of a piece of stearine the size of a copper cent to half a pound of starch will be found to add very much to the beauty of the linen articles to which it is applied.—Peronella.

A HOLIDAY FOR THE WIFE.—Give your wife a vacation. She needs one. Little cares are harder to bear than greater responsibilities, and she has many more cares than her husband, and sometimes as great responsibilities. A woman's work is never done. And modern life has increased and intensified it. Cares have multiplied faster than conveniences. Life is more complex, its demands are greater and more numerous, society more exacting. Who needs a vacation, if she does not? And she can not get it at home. The more quiet and restful the home is to you, the more evidence that it is a care, if not a burden, to her. A housekeeper can no more take a vacation in her home than a merchant in his counting-house. Even though her absence occasions inconvenience, give her an occasional vacation.—Selected.

OLD HORSES.—An equine expert says that for farm purposes a horse is worth more at seven than at any other age. He has nearly as many years of service before him as at a less age, and at seven is past the danger of being strained or injured by overwork. How old he must be before becoming superannuated depends upon circumstances. A horse overworked becomes played out at an age when one well treated is still able to do good service. Feeding moistened cut-feed is less wearing to the teeth than whole grain. Oats especially are apt to be gritty, besides being stimulating. An oat-fed horse will overwork himself and become worthless at a comparatively early age.

TO TAKE OFF INK STAINS.—For a large ink stain, dissolve a teaspoonful of oxalic acid in a teacupful of hot water. Put it into a bowl, and dip into it the part that is stained by the ink, rubbing it well in the solution. If the ink does not come out well, mix some fresh oxalic acid and hot water, and add to the first. Rub the stain a while longer; and when the ink has all come out, dip the part immediately in water that is warm, but not hot. Rub it well in the water, to get the oxalic acid entirely out.

If there is any one fact, or doctrine, or command, or promise in the Bible which has produced no practical effect on your temper, or heart, or conduct, be assured you do not truly believe it.—Payson.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVeuve, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. CHICHESTER—WILLIAM HENRY CHICHESTER was born in Fairfax county, Va., November 22, 1839, and departed this life at his residence in Edwards, Miss., March 9, 1887, at half-past eight o'clock A. M.

If medical science and tender nursing could have stayed the angel of death, he would be living to-day. His death was caused by a stroke of apoplexy. By his untimely death a gloom has fallen over the entire community. The large number of friends who followed his remains to the city of the dead showed how he was loved in life and mourned in death.

Mr. Chichester was a gentleman of the highest type. He was a gentleman not made so by the rules of human society, but his refinement was the expression of the noble heart within. As a private citizen, an officer of the law, and in his many business transactions, no one can point to a single act that ever tarnished his honored name. He carried the flag of honor, and in his hands its pure folds never trailed in the dust. His was an unselfish and sympathetic nature.

To make others happy was his delight; and by his delicate attentions, cheerful words and genial countenance, he made others happy. To the distressed, he brought the oil of human sympathy, and his sympathy was not a mere good wish—it always culminated in generous deeds. Peaceable in his own spirit, he loved to see others dwelling in peace. He was a peace-maker. Friendship was a loving principle with him. To be his friend once was to be his friend always. His friendship was tender, loving and beautiful. Brave, generous and true, he fulfilled every relation of life.

Mr. Chichester was a member of the Methodist Church. In his last illness he spoke of consecrating all to Christ. Our brother, friend and citizen has gone from us, but is not forgotten.

I. W. COOPER.

CLARK—MRS. WINNIE HOWZE CLARK (nee Hand), consort of Mr. Calvin C. Clark, and daughter of Mr. Enoch E. Hand and Mrs. Eliza W. Hand, was born December 22, 1857; was happily married February 24, 1881, and died at Estabuchie, Miss., March 1, 1887.

Another useful life has been closed; another shining light has been extinguished; another pure spirit has gone to live in that "city above." But, alas! a pall of deepest gloom has settled upon many hearts once so bright and so happy, but now so sad and dark; made so by the death of this inestimable Christian woman. "Winnie," as she was very familiarly called, became a member of the Methodist Church when only about eight years of age, and was ever foremost and faithful in all relations to the church. She was a dutiful daughter, a loving sister, a generous friend, and a faithful, devoted wife and mother. Her last hours were those of the most intense pain, but borne by patient, Christian fortitude. Being unconscious, she left no message of farewell; but the serene smile upon the cold lips, and the life-record of her past, told in silent eloquence of the rapture of her departing spirit. She leaves a loving mother, two sisters and brothers, a devoted husband, two precious little ones, and a host of sympathizing friends, to mourn their loss. The blow falls heaviest upon the bereaved husband, whose heart and home she made so radiant with hope and joy. Two precious jewels, Ruth and Edgar Wallace, were taken up to heaven just a few weeks before their mother; and two, Johnnie and Winnie, tarry on earth to comfort the broken hearts. Three in heaven, and three on earth. Oh, that the Comforter would soothe the aching hearts, and reunite the severed ties in the "sweet by-and-by!"

E. F. EDGAR.

RIVES—Death entered the Brandywine community, in Copiah county, Miss., last December, and robbed it of one of its most valuable citizens—ORVILLE B. RIVES. He was born April 26, 1856. He was blessed with Christian parents, who dedicated him to God in infancy; hence it is not surprising that he claimed his place in the church of God in early youth. He was happily converted in August, 1875; though he told the writer, who was his pastor for two years, that he had not been faithful to God in leading a consistent Christian life; but in August, 1885, he was restored, and entered anew upon the discharge of Christian duty. He was happily married to Miss M. J. Boren, November 23, 1883. He was a dutiful son, an affectionate husband, a kind and indulgent father and a good citizen. He left behind him a loving wife, one sweet little boy, a mother, three sisters and a brother, with other relatives, and many friends to mourn; but they sorrow not without hope.

In the home of Bro. Rives the itinerant preacher always found a genuine Christian hospitality and friendly aid in time of need. But he has gone to meet him who has said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me." May Heaven's choicest blessings attend the grief-stricken loved ones and bring them all to a happy reunion in the sweet by-and-by.

IRA B. ROBERTSON.

HOLLINGSWORTH—BRO. I. G. HOLLINGSWORTH was born in Macon, Ga., May 5, 1825, and died at Valley, Yazoo county, Miss., February 24, 1887, at eight P. M. He moved to Mississippi in 1841; first settled in Holmes county, afterwards moved to Yazoo. He was married, October 7, 1852, to Miss Amanda, daughter of Judge R. S. G. Perkins. He joined the church under the ministry of Rev. W. B. Lewis, and lived and died in the triumphs of faith. The writer saw him several times before his death, and he expressed his readiness to go. He said he had no fears. He filled various offices in the church—in fact, was all the time a trusted office bearer, and was steward at his death. His home was and is yet emphatically a Methodist preacher's home. He leaves a wife and eight children behind; but they sorrow not as those who have no hope.

THE FRUIT ARGUMENT.—This was put very effectively by our Savior in his sermon on the Mount. How can we tell whether prophets be true or false; lambs or ravening wolves? By their fruits ye shall know them. And then he goes on to fortify the thought by showing how wide-reaching, and founded in common sense, it is. Men never think of such a thing as picking grapes from bramble-bushes, or plucking figs from thistle-stalks. They never expect to find any good fruit on a bad tree; they do not save such a tree to see if some day it may not bear good fruit; they hew it down and make firewood of it. Even so, and ever so, he says it will be of men: By their fruits ye shall know them. Saying, "Lord, Lord," or ever so many other good words, does not admit their utterer to the kingdom of Heaven—it is doing God's will alone which accomplishes that.

All this is just as true of systems as it is of men. And the experience of almost nineteen centuries has put that truth beyond denial.

This fruit argument is sometimes very convenient as a short cut to a conclusive answer, when somebody has made out a long and plausible plea for something to which it applies in condemnation; as who should marshal many well-sounding reasons to prove that it would be a public benefit to have all restrictions removed from the traffic in intoxicating drinks, and leave it to regulate itself by the natural working of good sense and conscience, as the sale of whale oil is. It would not require a very wide induction of facts, nor a very profound knowledge of history, to satisfy a candid mind that—though he may not instantly detect it—there must be some fatal flaw in such reasoning, because no candid person can deny that the fruits of the free sale of intoxicants are a curse and nuisance to society.—Congregationalist.

In large sections of the country physicians find most of their work in fighting Malaria, because nearly every disorder of the system has its beginning in the presence of this subtle poison in the blood. Dr. Shallenberger's Pills never fail to eradicate every vestige of it, and never do harm. Use them and save time, much suffering and a doctor's bill.

The Liebig Co.'s preparations are not of the cheap, adulterated class, but all of them are made of the purest drugs that can be selected. All their Coca preparations, for example, are made only with directly imported Imperial Crown Sherry, for with no other wine, experience has taught, does Coca blend so well. Their Coca Beef Tonic preparations have the highest endorsements of the leading practitioners of the world.—The Virginia Medical Monthly.

The Imperial Crown Sherry is imported directly from Spain by the Liebig Company, and used by it in their preparations. It is simply superb.—The Southern Clinic. Edited by C. A. Bryce, M. D., LL. D.

BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The full term will begin on Wednesday, September 15th, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils occupying a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

The Canadian police surround Lord Landsdown with safeguards.——The socialistic meeting in Hyde Park yesterday terminated in a collision with a body of police. Nine socialists were arrested, including Williams, the leader.——A riot occurred in Belfast to-day.——The amendment to the Constitution of Michigan, increasing the salaries of State officers, was carried by a good majority. The governor, who has heretofore received $1,000 per annum, will receive $5,000.——Gov. Perry seems to be ahead in the senatorial race of Florida.

APRIL 11.

A monster meeting was held in Hyde Park, London, to protest against the Crimes Act. Lord Mayor Sullivan denied the enmity of Ireland to England. The crowd was very enthusiastic and orderly.——The Portuguese government has concluded a treaty of friendship with China.——The sealing steamer "Eagle," which had been given up for lost, with all on board, arrived at St. Johns, N. F., yesterday.——Mr. Blaine is slowly recovering from his illness.——The Floridians are confident that the Legislature will pass the local option liquor law.——Dr. Eben S. Stearns, president of the Tennessee Normal College, and chancellor of the University of the South, died in Nashville this morning.

Over 100 young men from eighteen States entered the Commercial College of Kentucky University the past month. This College received the highest honor and gold medal at the World's Exposition over all other colleges for system of book-keeping and business education. It is situated in the beautiful, healthy, and renowned city, Lexington, Ky., accessible by the leading railroads. Arrange now to enter this college during the spring or summer months, as students can enter at any time. Read advertisement of this college in another column, and write for particulars to its president, Wilbur R. Smith, Lexington, Ky.

Col. W. H. Sinclair, president Galveston Railway Company, says he believes a man can do an incredible amount of overwork while taking Moxie, and not break down. Mrs. A. Carusteins, proprietress of Washington Hotel, Galveston, speaks of it in the same terms; says it gives her extraordinary powers of endurance.

Mr. Beecher's Biography.

It now appears that the Rev. Mr. Halliday, Mr. Beecher's assistant in Plymouth Church, has been associated with Lyman Abbott, D. D., in the preparation of the biography of the late Mr. Beecher, to which the great preacher, previous to his death, largely contributed. It was not proposed to have either Mr. Halliday's or Mr. Beecher's connection with the book generally known, but the death of Mr. Beecher has removed the objection to the fact being made public, and now the complete book will appear with both Dr. Lyman Abbott's and Rev. S. B. Halliday's name on the title page. They have also been assisted by a corps of over thirty eminent writers, who have contributed reminiscences, etc. As Mr. Beecher did not write a line upon any autobiography of himself, but did contribute to this work, the additional fact is apparent that Dr. Abbott's and Rev. Halliday's book is the nearest approach to an autobiography that Mr. Beecher has left, and with the array of talent employed it looks as if we were to have a biography which is worthy of the man.

The work is to be sold by subscription; it is in the hands of the American Publishing Co., Hartford, Conn., for publication.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

A Valuable Book.

Among the recent publications of E. B. Treat, "Our Home Physician" takes high rank, and will be found an invaluable guide in the household. Being remarkably sensible, and containing nothing to mar the sensibilities of the most refined, it may be kept in sight of the entire household and become a text-book for the family. The homœopathic treatment of diseases, with their remedies, is an additional attraction that will be appreciated by a large following. High authority ventures the assertion that it is the best work of its kind ever published. Agents are wanted for every part of the country, and, as the price for the best binding has been reduced to $6, profitable employment is assured. Address E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, New York.

DOWN BY THE SHORE.

BY J. M. DUNMORE.

Down by the shore at morning
Wearily moans the sea;
The brown wrack clings to the bare grey rocks,
And the wind sighs drearily.
The mist creeps over the waters
From windward on to the lee,
Wrapping the ships in its cold embrace
Sadly and silently.

Down by the shore at evening
The mists are rolling away
In long white wreaths, on the solemn hills
That shelter the lonely bay.
Bright with a rare effulgence,
The golden clouds are furled,
And the fabled isles peaks o'er the distant sea
Seem the dream of another world.

Down by the sea of sorrow
The mists lay cold and grey,
And never a glimpse of the gracious sun
Broke through the gloom that day.
But the clouds were rolled together,
Just ere the daylight died,
And we saw the land of Beulah smile
In the light of eventide.

"Endure Hardness."

BY REV. J. W. SANDELL.

MR. EDITOR: The gospel commission seems to be large enough to include all that man can do or bear as a servant or soldier of Christ. Much is implied in that sentence, "Freely ye have received, freely give;" but followed by that principle in action is signified by the words, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," the leading thought seems to be that the enlarging influence of human agency is to be employed for the spreading of the gospel is the offer of the grace of God to the whole human family, and that it is to be done in the spirit manifested by our Savior and illustrated by the apostles. If this be true, many of the ministers of this generation may not fully recognize the requirements of their calling. God's ministers are required to show that they are not seeking their own profit, but that of others. The Lord knows the heart; but there is need of proof to satisfy men in regard to motives. The spirit of self-denial and consecration must appear in the ministry before it can be conspicuous in the church. God would have all men to be saved, and preaching is principal among means ordained. The solution of the problem of reaching the masses must be, in the main, the work of the ministry. The salvation of souls must be the ruling principle in the arrangement of the work and the distribution of the laborers.

The desire for prominence and applause among men must yield to a willingness to serve in low places and receive the honor that comes from God before the masses can be impressed with the truth. The popular ideal of a gospel minister must not be turned from the salary he can command or the congregation he can draw; but fidelity to the work of the Lord must be considered the true recommendation for the reward of the servant. The policy that keeps the strong men in the strong places, and the weak in the weak places, may not be the best employment of the forces. A strong charge, well developed might thrive for a time under the care of a young, growing minister, or an old scarred soldier who had given the strength of his life to the church. It may not be the best mode of warfare to put the best and strongest men in the fortified places, and send the weak and the young on an aggressive warfare to take and hold new positions in the enemy's country. Men of infirmities may be strong in the Spirit and able to improve in spirituality those whom they can reach. Some men of culture could display a true nobility by turning for awhile from the ease of Christian refinement to brush away the dust that blinds the ignorant, and give them the light of God's Word. There are diversities of gifts and different fields of labor; some more and some less desirable than others. Some laborers succeed, others fail. Strong men sometimes fail in difficult fields of labor, and weak ones are successful where other things are helpful. Some charges sustain their preachers, and others are sustained by their preachers. If the brethren who vote preachers out could change places with them a few years, they might see the matter from another standpoint. Reports appear relatively. To appreciate the labors of those who have seemed to be failures, we must follow them and take in all the environments. High authority says every man finds his level. In the sight of God there is honor in the direction of humility. When the servants of Christ take their places and do their work in the Spirit of their Lord, the gospel will be carried to the poor and maimed and sick and blind, and all will partake in some measure of its benefits. There are unpleasant duties to be performed, uneasy positions to be filled, and there is need of willingness to endure hardness as good soldiers. Perseverance in the work is a condition of final success. All men need the gospel, and it is the duty of the church to give it to all. A long course of training has not yet prepared the world to give and receive its blessings. "From the least to the greatest" seems to be the order. Jesus was not born in Jerusalem, but in that city he endured the cross; and so the work must go on till he calls the laborers to their reward.

Hints and Helps to the Study of God's Word—No. 4.

INSTRUCTION FROM THE DOCTRINES OF SCRIPTURE.

It is a good rule, in studying the doctrines of the Bible, to compare the inferences we make with those made by inspired writers on the same doctrine. Instance—"Him hath God exalted to give repentance." "By grace are you saved through faith, that is the gift of God." "Unto you it is given to believe on him." "Elect, through sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience." In these instances, the doctrines of repentance, faith and obedience are said to be the gifts of God.

It might be inferred that it is needless and useless to exhort men to repent, believe, and obey. But the Scriptures are full of such exhortations. (Mark i, 15; Acts viii, 22; Acts iii, 19.) The guilt of not repenting (Matt. xi, 20, 21), and of unbelief (1 John iii, 23; John iii, 18), and of disobedience, is charged upon men, and they are held to rigid responsibility for such guilt. Hence the correct teaching of the Scriptures is that the gracious ability to repent, believe and obey, is the gift of God; but the exercise and use of this gift, in repentance, faith and obedience, are ours. So the light and the organs of vision are God's natural gifts—the exercise and use of these in seeing, or the refusal to use these gifts and see, and the consequences are ours. (II Chron. xix, 3, and xii, 14; I Sam. vii, 3.) "God works in us to will and to do;" but the willing and doing are ours.

Again, the Scriptures declare that we are freely justified by grace and not by works. (Romans iii, 28, and iv, 5.) It might be inferred that the doctrine of justification by faith alone does away with the obligation to good works. But the Scriptures insist upon the necessity of good works, not as a condition of justification, but as the consequence, the fruit, the evidence. (Romans xii, 1.)

It is of great importance to notice the intimate connection between the great doctrines of the Bible and the duties of practical piety which they suggest and insist upon. Doctrines are the great motives. Often the most mysterious are made the foundation of practical exhortations. The latter chapters of Romans and Ephesians illustrate this view.

The doctrine of a personal and powerful devil, "the god of this world," the "prince of the power of the air," the enemy of God and man, suggests the motive and practical importance of closer intimacy and friendship with the omnipotent Christ, who conquered and triumphed over him, and by whose grace alone we may also triumph over him. In the fifth chapter of Romans we have the doctrine taught, that through the offense of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation. This great and mysterious fact is clearly revealed, that the grace of God, in our redemption, might be magnified. (Romans v, 15, 20.) The deity, incarnation and atonement of Christ are presented not only as the ground of our hope as sinners, but urged as the strongest motives to duty to our fellowmen.

The doctrine of Christ's condescension is the ground of the exhortation—"In lowliness of mind, let each esteem others better than themselves;" and "Let this mind be in you that was also in Christ Jesus, who being in the form of God," etc. (Phil. ii, 3-7.)

The doctrine of God's great love of man, which induced him to give his Son to die for him, is used as the motive and argument why we should love another. (I John iv, 10, 11.) As an argument also for a forgiving spirit (Eph. iv, 32); as an argument for benevolence to the poor (II Cor. viii, 9); and also as an argument for the discharge of the duties of man and wife (Eph. v, 25).

The doctrine that our bodies are temples of the Holy Ghost, is urged as a dissuasion from fornication. (I Cor. vi, 19.) The doctrine of the Trinity is presented not only as the foundation of our faith, but as the fruitful and exhaustless source of all our blessings. (II Cor. xiii, 14.)

So the remark, of some one, is timely and true, that "he who slights the doctrines of Christianity undermines its morality."

H.

The Use of Churches.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read the article from the pen of Dr. C. K. Marshall, "On the Wrong Use of Churches," and, if it would do any good, would give the views therein set forth hearty endorsement; but the gifted author does not need my endorsement. At one part of the Doctor's article I must venture an expression of surprise. I refer to that part under the proposition, "I want to say a word on the manner of obtaining these churches." After the doctor, as pastor, had given his emphatic "No! no! no!" to one who proposed a phrenological lecture in his church, in answer to the question, "If your officers agree to let me have it, will you object?" he answered: "Well, they know their duties. I have nothing to do with their wishes." And with this license the lecturer caught pastor, officers and all in a "trap." Was the Doctor's answer according to the law and the authority it confers? As I understand it, the trustees are simply the custodians of the church property as such. This they hold, and for this only, under certain regulations, are they responsible, and that they have nothing to do with the order of exercises in the house. For this the preacher alone is responsible. But, some one may say, "I am unwilling to take so much responsibility." Let us see how much responsibility there is involved. Under the regulations of the law of the church, the trustees and other officers say to the officiating minister: "We present to you this house, to be set apart from all unhallowed or common uses, for the worship of Almighty God." Thereupon he proceeds to "dedicate it to his service, for the reading and expounding of his holy Word, the administration of his ordinances, and for all other acts of religious worship." Let the lecturer approach these officers for the use of the house in which "to array his skulls and examine heads;" and, if they understand their "rights, privileges and prerogatives," they will tell him they have no jurisdiction over the exercises in the house; the preacher is responsible there. On approaching the preacher, he is asked if the purpose is "the worship of Almighty God." If not, the preacher tells him that the law excludes everything else. And there the matter ends. I see no room for conflict between the pastor and his official Board, and I see no reason for embarrassment with either party. The pastor's "No! no! no!" should be final in all such cases. For this exclusiveness we have Divine precedent: "My house shall be called the house of prayer."

WEST POINT, Miss., April 7, 1887.

Rev. George D. Wade.

Somebody has said, "When a man devotes himself to reminiscences, he becomes one." I do not wish to become one yet; but the announcement of the death of the man of God whose name heads this article brings to mind a little history connected with his ministry that is of surpassing interest to several who survive him.

In the year 1855 Bro. Wade was on the Pearl River circuit, Mississippi Conference. That circuit was situated in Lawrence and Pike counties. There was a small church on Magee's Creek, a few miles below China Grove, known as Pine Grove. The circuit being large, and that being a small society, the pastor preached there on Saturday, once a month. Rev. N. B. Raiford, of precious memory, a local preacher residing at China Grove, had a monthly appointment there also, on Sunday. And sometimes Rev. Stephen Regan, a local preacher, who lived within the bounds of another circuit, would come and preach to that congregation.

My parents lived in that neighborhood in those days, and belonged to that church. I had joined the church some time before that, under the ministry of Bro. Raiford; but, being a very unpromising boy, I was little known and less regarded as a church member. That was a remarkably dry spring, and many people in that country were apprehensive of a famine. I remember, too, that all through that region there was a growing feeling of dependence upon God, and of accountability to him. Some thought the end was drawing nigh. It was in the month of June, and I think Saturday before the first Sabbath. Bro. Wade came to his appointment at Pine Grove as usual. He had a large congregation that day, and he preached the Word with power. After the sermon the doors of the church were opened, and several applied for membership. The whole congregation was moved. An awful solemnity settled upon the audience. "O, what a solemn time is this!" said the preacher, as he stood in the altar looking round on the weeping congregation, with tears flowing from his eyes. After some consultation with the leading members it was decided to protract the meeting. A messenger was dispatched for Rev. A. B. Nicholson, pastor of an adjoining circuit, and Bro. Wade went on to China Grove to preach on Sunday. Monday he returned, and Bro. Nicholson joined him. Then began one of the greatest meetings I ever witnessed. The fruits of that revival are still to be seen. "It was the Lord's doing, and it was marvelous in our eyes." I do not know the number converted, but there were many. Among the number were two of my sisters, my brother, Rev. H. P. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, and myself. We were all converted at the same service on Tuesday night. That was an occasion of great joy to our parents. Father was quiet, as was his custom; but mother, impulsive and emotional as she was, gave vent to her feelings, and made the welkin ring. Who can tell the rapture of a pious mother's heart when her children are converted to God? Many of the older members of that congregation who participated in that work of grace have gone to their reward. And those who were then young are now old, thirty-two years having elapsed. But the Word of the Lord, which then "distilled upon us as the dew," and which came down into our hearts "as the small rain upon the tender herb," and which fell upon us "as the showers upon the grass," is still refreshing to our souls. It never grows old: it is fresh and new every morning.

It was my privilege to visit Bro. Wade during his last illness; but he was too feeble to converse, or to be talked to. I could not even pray with him. But his countenance betokened a purified heart and a soul at rest in Jesus. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace." "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

Children's Day—May 15.

The third Sunday in May has been set apart by the General Conference as Children's Day, to be observed throughout our church with appropriate services. The Sunday-school editor was ordered to prepare a programme for the day. The programme was ready by the first of April. It is simple and suggestive, and may be had at the Southern Methodist Publishing House, in any quantity, at fifty cents per hundred copies.

I hope the pastor of every congregation and the superintendent of every Sunday-school in the Southern Methodist Church will take a deep interest in this new movement. Nearly all the churches in our country have a "Children's Day," and all bear witness to the good results following its observance. Some devote the proceeds of the day to one benevolent object, and some to another. Our General Conference has selected needy Sunday-schools in our Conferences, Mission Conferences, and in our foreign missions, as the beneficiaries of the funds contributed on Children's Day. The object is, therefore, missionary, both home and foreign. The day will furnish a pleasant anniversary for the children, and will also help to train them in systematic benevolence.

Will pastors and superintendents everywhere take the subject in hand immediately, and have ample provision made for observing the day? The programme provides for only one service during the day—the morning—but suggests appropriate exercises for the evening. The whole day has been given to the children by a formal act of the General Conference, and I hope their rights in the matter will be fully recognized and respected.

The collection will be taken up at the morning service, unless those having charge deem some other hour more advisable. Ninety per cent. of all moneys collected (except special donations, which will be applied as the donor wishes) will be placed in the hands of the Conference Sunday-school Board; and the remaining ten per cent. forwarded to L. D. Palmer, treasurer, Nashville, Tenn.

Let us do all we can to make the Children's Day pleasant and profitable not only to the children, but to everybody. It is the holy Sabbath, and all the exercises should be in harmony with the sanctity and associations of the day. May the Lord greatly bless this new institution of the church!

One function of the newspapers is to guide public opinion. This has been called the prophetic function. It covers the education of readers in right principles and their elevation to a higher standard of thinking and doing. We need scarcely say that this function is sadly neglected. It should be attended to, and that without delay. The newspaper should be made a force on the side of righteousness. We do not ask it to preach the gospel—that is the work of the church—but we do ask it to aid the pulpit in promoting the moral welfare of men. The pulpit and the press are not rivals, as those who anxiously inquire whether the press is gaining the ascendency over the pulpit would have us believe; they are twin educators of the human race, and should fulfill their mission in loving harmony. Let newspapers realize their high calling. Let them rise above pandering to depraved tastes and the sordid desire for gain. Let them provide pure and strong reading. Let them dare to be in the right with one or two. Let them strike true blows.

"For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the wrong that needs resistance,
For the future in the distance."

Then they will fulfill their function, and be a blessing in the land.

(Dr. Austin Phelps, Andover.)

"He that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him." Such words, if they mean anything, mean something unutterably great. It is no prerogative of an elect few. The lowliest not less than the loftiest life may have its element of an infinite dignity. A profoundly prayerful life is by that single feature of it lifted into sympathy with God. A mean thing can not be made noble by it, but a small thing can be made great. The work of a laundress or bricklayer may attract the respect of angels. It matters little what may be a man's employment, in life. The whole life is ennobled and adorned by it, if it is done as in a vision of Christ. "In His Name," was the watchword of the Waldenses, and their form of salutation, when they met and when they parted. It expressed their supreme idea of life, and of all that made it worth living. They said it at their weddings, and repeated it at their funerals. It was their formula in baptism, and at the Lord's Supper; and it lifted to the same altitude of dignity their work in their fields and vineyards. What have wise men ever discovered a theory of life more magnificent and inspiring? No being in the universe has a more exalted occasion for self-respect than one who lives in a vision of Christ. The apostle could find no more honorable words in which to depict the life of Moses than to say of it, "He endured, as seeing him who is invisible."

(Dr. John Hall, New York.)

This column will be read by thousands who in God's goodness are well-to-do in the world. Are you doing good? or are you indifferent to the "blackness of darkness" in many a soul about you, to the wail of woe that is so often going up, the inarticulate cry for help that is ringing out from crowds threatening in their numbers, even if unreasonable in their pleas? Can not you do something? The coats and garments Dorcas made seemed of no great account, but they meant something when the weeping wearers showed them with many a grateful tear, by her dead body. We need to inspire love and trust in these struggling ones by our practical sympathy. The Samaritan in the parable did not make great sacrifices. "Two pence" was not a great deal of money to a business man riding on his way. But he gave personal effort; he gave pity; he gave his ready money; he gave the benefit of his credit; and the Master holds him up as an ideal of a good neighbor. Those poor neighbors of yours—what can you do for them with the sympathies, effort, means and credit you can employ? When you love your children, you are always giving to them. God loves you, and you are always getting from him. You are looking to Christ's cross as the means of your salvation. As you gaze, catch from it an inspiration that will make you more like him who hung upon it, and who on earth went about doing good.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

From off the ways like an ow-sped
A bark, of beauty fit to
Nor white-capped waves, nor winds a'-rag,
Could shame the craft or
Anon, as if by magic wand,
A mighty mast
And flapped, as if by zephyrs fanned,
But caught the wind at last.

And now she lay, as I to the risk
The unseen power had lent,
Nor "buzzed the shore," but out upon
The sea of life she went.

Her pennon straightened to the breeze
In graceful lines above,
And e'er it dipped again, I read
Her name, and it was "Love."

Bon voyage, ah! yes; God bless the crew,
That manned the gallant craft.
One—"half" is at the helm, you know,
The other "half" is aft.

And may they weather all the storms,
Nor ever "make a splice;"
And when at last they "heave a lead,"
They'll not need more advice.

The Sunday-School Lesson for May 1, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

ISRAEL IN EGYPT.

Exodus i, 6-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: "He increased His people greatly, and made them stronger than their enemies."—Psalms cv, 24.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

A period of about seventy-one years had elapsed since the events of the last lesson. The famine had ended; Jacob and his sons had lived prosperously in Egypt, and had died. A most interesting account is given of the old patriarch, in his one hundred and forty-seventh year, calling his twelve sons about his bedside and delivering to them a dying charge descriptive of the character of each and prophetic of his destiny. That which was spoken of Joseph was the most beautiful and honorable of all the twelve: "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall: the archers have sorely grieved him and shot at him and hated him: but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob."

Joseph's most remarkable life had ended. No romance furnishes a career more thrilling in incident or varying in fortune. Seventeen years were spent under the immediate care of his father, whose fond attentions were, perhaps, not favorable to the development of a sturdy manhood or of an unyielding integrity. From this life of ease and favoritism he was suddenly sold into the most abject slavery for thirteen years, the last three of which being spent in prison. Just as suddenly were the prison garments changed for robes of royalty, and for eighty years he wielded the destinies of the most populous and powerful empire, the lives of all the people being literally in his own keeping. During these extreme changes of fortune, Joseph changed not. No day was ever so dark as to discourage him from duty, no temptation could entice him, no elevation was so dazzling as to distract him from his steadfast purpose. His dying vision was cheered with the sight of the deliverance of his people from bondage, and he exacted of his brethren an oath to carry up his body with them. This promise was fulfilled one hundred and forty-four years afterwards. "Moses took the bones of Joseph with him," and they were buried in Shechem, a piece of land bought by his father Jacob.

THE EGYPTIANS ALARMED BY THE INCREASE OF ISRAEL.

Verse 6. "Joseph died and all that generation." The generation not only of his own race, but that of the Egyptians who had been cotemporary with him, and who might naturally be supposed to be attached to him and to his people because of the wonderful preservation of life he had secured for them.

7. "The children of Israel increased, and waxed exceeding mighty." Their industry and frugality, coupled with the fruitfulness of the soil of Egypt, their healthfulness and vigor of body, occasioned by the perfect system of hygiene under which they lived, as well as the salubrity of the climate, and, more than all, the temporal blessing of the God of their fathers, made them to grow in numbers and in wealth and in power.

8. "A new king that knew not Joseph." Knew him not in the appreciation of his great deliverance, which was the only reason by which his descendants could expect favor in a strange land.

9. "The children of Israel are more and mightier than we." The Egyptians, as a sovereign nation, had been subjected to wars and losses in keeping up their kingdom, while the Israelites being under subjection had nought to interfere with their increase and power. Their prosperous condition excited fear lest they might be able to rise in successful rebellion.

10. "Let us deal wisely." Shrewd diplomacy very often recoils on those who use it as it did in this case. This wise (?) policy resulted in bringing about the thing feared: "and so get them out of the land." The king feared to lose the revenue brought in by the Israelites, and the cruelty by which he sought to secure it brought to the rescue him who says, "Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord."

MERCILESS TASKMASTERS.

Verse 11. Merciless taskmasters were appointed over the Israelites "to afflict them with their burdens." These same burdens grown more unbearable excited the sympathy of Moses when he came to man's estate, and caused "groaning," which was finally heard by God and caused him "to remember his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac and with Jacob." "They built treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses." Fortified cities on the border of Goshen served the double purpose of preventing invasion, and of furnishing storage for the harvests of the fruitful land.

12. "The more they afflicted them, the more they grew." Doubtless the main reason of this was the direct interposition of Providence on their behalf. The greater their sorrows, the more numerous his blessings. As they suffered for his sake, so his providence rewarded them. Other reasons could be given. Luxurious people are never thrifty nor prolific. As their hardships caused them to labor, so they became healthy and vigorous. The more diligent their labor, the more productive it became. "They were grieved because of the children of Israel." The New Version has it were abhorred. The true meaning probably is, they were vexed and wearied because their oppression had all the time just the effect contrary to their purposes. Had they any conscience left, they must have been abhorred in their own estimation, because of their outrageous oppression, while their fears were excited in the same ratio as the Israelites increased in number and power.

13, 14. "To serve with rigor. Made their lives bitter with hard bondage in brick and mortar." Crude brick baked in the sun was the almost universal building material used in Egypt for private as well as public houses. It is said that "parties of these brick makers are seen depicted on the ancient monuments in Egypt with 'taskmasters,' some standing, some sitting, besides the laborers with uplifted sticks in their hands." Sir John Gardner Wilkinson, the English Egyptologist, is the authority for this sentiment: "Ruins of great brick buildings are found in all parts of Egypt." "It is worthy of remark that more bricks bearing the name of Thothmes III., who is supposed to have been the King of Egypt at the time of the Exodus, have been discovered than of any other period." Egyptian bondage is often used by preachers and writers to typify the bondage of sin. Satan is a harder taskmaster than ever were those of Pharaoh, and his service becomes daily and hourly more rigorous. As God delivered his people from Egyptian bondage, so the Savior of mankind redeems all who come to him from the bondage of sin. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, if ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Every religious sentiment, every act of devotion which does not produce a corresponding elevation of life and practice—which does not, for instance, insist upon the most scrupulous honesty, the most chaste sobriety, the widest charity; which does not, in short, result in some Christian grace of act and conduct—is worse than useless; is simply pernicious and depreciating, as ministering to self-deception, with its consequent trains of ill, intruding an evil under the name of God.

Some Statistics.

MR. EDITOR: I have just received the printed minutes of the North Mississippi Conference, and while studying and comparing for my own information, I concluded I would also compare the progress for the past ten years—i. e., 1876 to 1886. It is as follows:

Number of charges—1876, 102; 1886, 121; increase, 19.

Number of preachers—1876, 114; 1886, 136; increase, 22.

Local preachers—1876, 222; 1886, 154; decrease, 68.

Members—1876, 27,484; 1886, 35,437; increase, 7,953.

Adults baptized—1876, 1,107; 1886, 2,317; increase, 1,210.

Infants baptized—1876, 586; 1886, 781; increase, 195.

Number of churches—1876, 396; 1886, 463; increase, 67.

Value of churches—1876, $369,000; 1886, $417,000; increase, $48,000.

Number of parsonages—1876, 22; 1886, 60; increase, 38.

Value of parsonages—1876, $22,500; 1886, $69,475; increase, $46,975.

Number of Sunday-schools—1876, 232; 1886, 331; increase, 99.

Number of officers and teachers—1876, 1,230; 1886, 1,858.

Number of Sunday-school scholars—1876, 9,066; 1886, 14,625; increase, 5,559.

Expended for Sunday-school literature—1876, $1,367 42; 1886, $2,499 75; increase, $1,132.

Paid nine presiding elders—1876, $6,364 21; paid eight presiding elders—1886, $7,317 95; increase, $953 74.

Paid preachers in charge—1876, $38,897 13; 1886, $49,386 19; increase, $10,489 06.

Paid Bishops—1876, $864 10; 1886, $1,014 50.

Paid Conference claimants—1876, $2,269 95; 1886, $2,132 25; decrease, $137 70.

Paid for domestic missions—1876, $1,143 75; 1886, $1,818 55; increase, $674 80.

Paid for foreign missions—1876, $1,742 88; 1886, $6,018 70; increase, $4,275 98.

Paid for church extension—1886, $1,194 38.

It will be seen there is an increase in everything except the number of local preachers and amount paid for Conference claimants. Why there should be a falling off in this collection I do not understand, as I have always found this the easiest collection of all. Why the decrease in the number of local preachers; and such a large decrease? Has the day of their usefulness or necessity passed?

But there is a very gratifying increase in all else. In 1876 the highest salary paid a presiding elder was $997; lowest, $211 50; average, $709 13. In 1886 the highest was $1,170 50; lowest, $643 90; average, $914 74. In 1876 the highest salary paid preachers was $1,800; lowest—excepting four missions, which paid respectively $37, $42 50, $50 and $76 each—was $112 55; average, $381 34. 1886—Highest, $1,216; lowest—except two missions, $68 and $78 each—$95; average, $405 05. In 1876 there was expended for all purposes $57,571 34, being an average of $2 46 per member. In 1886 it was $98,434 52, or an average of $2 77 per member. Our old members seem to make slow progress in an increase of contributions. We know there are many who pay hundreds. What a host there must be who do nothing at all! The increase in parsonages, being nearly 300 per cent., is quite gratifying. But they average only a fraction over $1,000 each, and, as this includes the furnishing, we need a few more letters from a "preacher's wife." J. L. FUTRELL.

MISTER CITY, Mississippi.

Letter from Rev. John Pipes.

MR. EDITOR: Leaving Mansfield, La., March 28, we arrived here the next evening at half-past five, and found our friends in waiting for us at the Union Depot, to give us a hearty welcome. The snow had already begun to fall, which by next morning was three or four inches deep. Geraniums in full bloom within our room and a carpet of snow covering everything without made a strange contrast for us. We have gone through an acclimating, consisting of bad cold and general indisposition which has kept us mainly indoors. Last Sabbath, being a pleasant day, we ventured out to Centenary Church to hear Dr. Mathews preach. He gave us truly a good gospel sermon, on the "Heroism of David," with a good deal of the John Mathews' peculiarity appended. In the midst of the sermon he gave us a sort of wholesale introduction to his congregation. I suppose he thought it might save time. Centenary has a very large and attentive audience, and, from the very large number of communicants, we judge a very religious one. We think there were two-thirds of the congregation that took the sacrament on the occasion. The Doctor holds that it is right and proper for Christians to shout when they get happy and feel like it. A good sister at the close of the communion, adopting his theory, gave us a regular old-fashioned camp-meeting shout. I was sadly disappointed that I was not able to go to the preachers' meeting on last Monday, as I was anxious to wedge in somewhere and get enough work of some sort to keep me from backsliding.

In leaving our native Louisiana and much-loved friends and Conference, it gave us inward pain; yet circumstances seemed to require it. As the time drew near for us to leave, we were well nigh overwhelmed by the apparent sadness and great kindness of our numerous friends. Bro. Beard, pastor of the church at Mansfield, asked me to preach for him before I left. I did not see how I could, but was not at liberty to refuse. However I kept thinking it might rain, or I might be too unwell to preach; but when the day came I was well, the day pleasant and the congregation large. It was with great effort I could control my emotions sufficient to get through the various exercises; but the result was better than my fears. At the close of the sermon, and the earnest prayer of the pastor that Heaven's richest blessings might go with us, we were requested to take a seat in the altar, when Miss Willie Ricks, of Mansfield, approached the altar bearing a large, beautiful silver ice pitcher and cup, and presented them to us as a token of love from our DeSoto friends. These are her kind words:

To the Rev. John Pipes and His Most Estimable Wife—

Beloved Friends: 'Tis with sorrowful hearts that we have assembled here in the sanctuary of the Lord to hear you expound the Word of God for the last time, and pay you a parting tribute of love and respect. We now realize that day is very near at hand when you are to bid farewell to Louisiana friends and your dear home of more than twenty years, and pitch your tent among those who are nearer and dearer to your heart. While we regret exceedingly to see you leave, we shall ever cherish fond thoughts of both, and often picture you in our midst, walking with the same elastic step up these aisles to join us in worshiping him who gave himself for us. We, your friends of DeSoto, beg you to accept this slight memento as a token of our love and esteem. Take it, use it, and may it serve to gladden you hearts with halcyon memories of those you leave behind; and now shall we utter the words, "Good-bye!" 'Tis sad, for earth affords no solace for those who part, perhaps, forever. We rejoice that our religion teaches that we are only to be separated for a season, and to you, who have for a half a century heralded that religion, we would say, Rest sweetly in your declining years in the full assurance of a reunion in the land beyond where all is joy, peace and love.

Turning from this scene, Mr. C. P. Hopgood, in behalf of the ladies of Grand Cane, presented us with a purse of more than thirty dollars as a token of their love; also a substantial walking cane from Rev. W. Wimberly. Never have we spent a day so full of mingled joy and sadness. Next morning we left with hearts too full for utterance. J. P.

Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Our annual report is now ready, the year having closed. The missionary year begins and ends in March. We think it may encourage the society to know what they have accomplished the past year. Many of the auxiliaries have put forth unusual energy, while the rest have done the best they could. We have several new auxiliaries, and still they come. We feel deeply grateful that God has honored us, as a society, in calling one from our midst to carry the glad tidings to those for whom we are working and praying. Do you not think this is enough to drive away all prejudice or indifference any Methodist may hold towards our glorious work? Let us beg of our pastors to help the women by their presence at their monthly meeting, and with kind words. They may think it is not necessary; but, as a member, I can testify it is necessary; and, oh! we urge you not to slight these earnest, but timid workers. We appreciate every encouraging word. Some of our new auxiliaries have done well. Special mention should be made of the one in E. M. F. College. They began with fourteen members; now they have forty. Dr. McVoy helps them. We are not disposed to complain, for, as a general thing, the preachers are our faithful friends. The whole amount collected during the year is $934. We are now collecting the $200 for the outfit of our candidate, who is to go out in September next. Those who wish to contribute, either auxiliaries or others, will please send the money to Mrs. Annie DeMoss, Vicksburg, Miss.

From the Work.

THE EDWARDS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

While other Southern towns are enjoying a "boom" in real estate, etc., Edwards has also been the grateful recipient of a veritable boom which will, no doubt, result in great good within and around its borders. This boom came in the form of a District Conference, held here from March 31 to April 3, by which religious feeling was greatly strengthened and refreshed throughout the community and the church encouraged by the accession of eight new members. Bishop Galloway, Drs. Carter, of New Orleans; Andrews, of Jackson; Bachman, of North Mississippi Conference; Woodward, of Yazoo City, and Lewis, of Canton, and others, gave us some splendid sermons and Sunday-school talks—to say nothing of many interesting items and useful ideas gleaned from the Conference proceedings proper.

Long will this meeting be remembered by the people of Edwards as a continued "feast of the soul" from the first sermon delivered by the gentle, St. John-like Lewis, of Canton, to the closing one by Rev. Mr. Jones, of Vicksburg, from the thrilling text, "Dost thou believe on the Son of God?" And we trust that many will from this series of meetings date their entrance into the "kingdom of God." By all means let as many towns as possible have District Conferences, or as near their equivalent as practicable, that as many people as possible may be benefited by these pleasant gatherings of godly men. Oh, that such meetings might be held at various places all over the State! How much good they might accomplish! For it matters not how rich a country may be in climate, soil and productions, if the people are wicked, its vast resources are but so many "millstones" to sink it to perdition. With a God-fearing, God-serving people, agriculture, manufactures, commerce—all would receive a substantial "boom," which could but increase as the years pass by.

We like the example of the Kentuckian who attended to his work on the strawberry farm, yet found time to assist the choir and listen attentively to the sermons all through the meeting. To such young men we look for the success of both Church and State when the present generation shall be laid away to their final rest. With such in abundance in our beloved State—natives of the same—we trust the banner of Christ will be borne aloft as long as Mississippi exists; for how true it is that "righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people." E. E. H.

EDWARDS, Mississippi.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR? Since my return to this work for this year, I have had our new church nicely painted, and it is now a thing of beauty. On the third Sabbath in last month (March) the dedicatory sermon was preached by our new presiding elder, Robert Randle, and then "set apart from all unhallowed or common uses, for the worship of Almighty God." The business of the Quarterly Conference was looked into pretty thoroughly, and the assessment for the preacher in charge was raised above that of last year. When the question was asked, "What is doing for the cause of missions?" the presiding elder said, "I suppose the usual answer." Just at that juncture, I replied that I had been preaching and talking upon the subject of missions; and now, while I am on the subject of missions, I would state that I have sent to Dr. D. C. Kelley, Nashville, $40 for foreign missions, and I hope to be able to clear the decks of all the churches of this charge by the third Sabbath in this month.

Haynesville is not as large a city as the one in which you live; but we can boast of a few things. We have three churches hereabouts, viz.: Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist. Two schools which are well attended, to wit: Haynesville Academy, which is presided over by Prof. P. Gibson; the other presided over by Rev. J. M. Davies, whose alma mater is that of yours. We have one Sunday-school (Methodist), one Ladies' Aid Society, one Literary Society, and a very clever set of people. How you would enjoy being up here breathing this pure air and associating with this kind and clever people. Well, we hope to see you at our camp meeting, which will embrace the fourth Sabbath in September next.

Yours truly,

C. R. GODFREY.

EDWARDS, MISS.

I went to Edwards, the place where the Jackson District Conference was held, a few days in advance of the meeting of the Conference to assist the pastor, Rev. I. W. Cooper, in a protracted meeting. Two nights before my arrival thieves entered the pastor's larder and emptied it. The family awoke Sunday morning to find that they had not a morsel to eat. Bro. Cooper had just laid in a supply for District Conference, and it was all gone. He had prepared a sermon for that day on "Heaven," and found it difficult to keep his mind in a heavenly frame as he contemplated the utter emptiness of his pantry. However, there was a good point involved on which he might at least exhort his people to lay up their treasure in heaven, where thieves do not break through and steal. I will venture to say that sermon did not spoil, for kind neighbors soon supplied their needs in abundance. And on Monday they were more than reimbursed by thoughtful gentlemen down town; so that when I arrived they were reinstated and comfortable.

On Tuesday afternoon Bro. Cooper and I walked out to the cemetery. Returning just before sundown, we found the parsonage had been captured by the ladies, who still held possession. The family had surrendered without resistance and seemed happy in the hands of their captors. When the ladies departed they left behind $25 or $30 worth of every imaginable nice thing for the comfort of the pastor's household. This episode was not occasioned by the robbery on Saturday night. It was planned before that occurrence, and was intended to be a complete surprise to the family. Nor did it stop that evening; the next day and the day following, and on as long as I stayed, the stream of good things continued to flow into the home of the preacher until he was overwhelmed. I remarked to one of his members, "You are certainly very kind to your preacher." He replied, "We have a preacher who appreciates it." Happy preacher! Happy people! God bless them all!

W. B. LEWIS.

CANTON, Mississippi.

ALEXANDRIA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We congratulate ourselves in the fact that our police jury has refused to grant an election on the liquor question. All honor to the noble men who stood by the rights of the people in this decision! Undoubtedly the rights of all concerned are sustained by denying to men the privilege of selling ardent spirits as a beverage. By the way, is it not strange that a government, a State, will authorize and receive compensation for the sale of intoxicants, knowing that it injures everyone who buys or drinks, and with an almost absolute certainty that many who use it will, under the influence, become thieves, robbers or murderers, and will then have these law breakers (of their own making) arrested, tried and punished for that they would not do, except that the State has opened the way for it? Every violation of law committed while under the influence of the whisky devil but makes the State (giving license for its sale) the great criminal; the liquor dealer, the second; and the poor drunken culprit, the least of the three. We, the citizens, who elect the law makers, may well think of this awful fact.

My work is promising.

Yours fraternally,

B. F. WHITE.

The truth can not be harmed, beheaded, or crucified. A lie on the throne is a lie still, and truth in a dungeon is truth still; and the lie on the throne is on its way to defeat, and the truth in the dungeon is on the way to victory.—M'Kinley.

Old Maids.

Did you ever notice that the objectionable term "old maid" is seldom applied to women who have an object in life? The common idea of an old maid is that of a woman past her first youth who, having nothing to do, officiously interests herself in other people's business—who is prim, precise, fussy and disagreeable, and who lavishes her affection upon pug dogs, sleek tabby cats, and loquacious parrots.

"As a husband, I will have the best or none," writes a sensible female physician, and it is a pity that more girls do not echo her sentiments.

It is far better to be an unmarried woman all one's days than to become an unhappy, discontented wife. Too many girls are tempted, when the right man does not make his appearance, to accept the wrong one, simply for the sake of a home and a husband. This often proves a sad mistake for which there is no remedy.

When a girl finds that the years are gradually slipping by, and that the ideal husband of her youthful fancy is as far distant as ever, it is wisest to submit gracefully to the inevitable, and endeavor to make the best of life as it is, without dreaming of improbable changes.

At such a period, when the first gray hair appears, and the mirror reveals the fact that girlhood is waning, a woman who has a purpose in life is at a great advantage. Even the fact of a girl having to earn her living is a blessing in disguise.

The freedom a single life gives is to them a great benefit. It has made the career they love a possibility. Many would not exchange this freedom for the most devoted husband in the world.

No doubt the average unmarried woman, good, sensible and industrious, who appreciates the comforts of home, and loves the innocent prattle of little children, would have preferred a different lot. But that is not to be. What is the next best thing to be done?

In the first place, make a home of your own, no matter how humble. Do not remain the butt of boarding-house jokes, or the unpaid and unappreciated dependent of some exacting relative.

If you have money, make your abode as beautiful as possible; entertain company, and constitute yourself a part of the social life of the place in which you live.

Twenty years ago one of the most delightful homes in New York was that of Alice and Phœbe Cary, sister poets and unmarried woman. They made a comfortable livelihood by their pens, and entertained charmingly; the most noted people in the country were often their guests.—Watchman.

RELIGIOUSNESS AND RIGHTEOUSNESS.—The fact that religious revivals are not necessarily revivals of righteousness is becoming every day more apparent. It is quite possible to be as religious as a Hottentot or a Turk, and yet have no Christianity, spurious revivals are what may be expected. A false religion and a false Christ are doubtless among the most efficient means employed by the father of lies to build up his kingdom. In a revival of genuine religion there are conversions to truth, practical as well as theoretical. True conversion is not only a change of heart, but of life—a change from evil practices, habits and opinions to such as are good, and pure, and upright. The world will not be saved through a church that is unsaved—one that affiliates with, and is actuated by a spirit of compromise with evil and wrong-doing. In such churches there may be revivals of religion, but not of Christianity. Where there is pride, fashion, worldly conformity, love of pleasure and amusement indulged in and sanctioned by a church, there will surely be a revival of the same in their religious in-gatherings. On the other hand, where a church is baptized with the Holy Ghost, all moral purity, honesty, truth and love abound, there will be a revival of the same spirit of power, bringing forth the fruits of righteousness and true holiness.—Holiness Era.

Constipation Has Many Victims.

All the endeavor to find relief with the cathartic, the injection, the clyster and laxative are distressing. These are resorted to time and again, until the sufferer is almost in despair, and he gains only a brief respite.

By taking Simmons Liver Regulator, the bowels will be gently moved as naturally as if no medicine had been taken. Regularity in taking the medicine will soon effect a permanent relief.

The Century's Rise of Wages.

In considering the subject of wages a century ago, one finds many facts of curious interest. In 1793 the Schuylkill and Susquehanna Canal Company advertised for workmen, offering $5 a month for the winter months and $6 for summer, with board and lodging. The next year there was a debate in the House of Representatives which brought out the fact that soldiers got but $3 a month. A Vermont member, discussing the proposal to raise it to $4, said that in his State men were hired for £18 a year, or $4 a month, with board and clothing. Mr. Wadsworth, of Pennsylvania, said: "In the States north of Pennsylvania the wages of the common laborer are not, upon the whole, superior to those of the common soldier." In 1797 a Rhode Island farmer hired a good farm hand at $3 a month, and $5 a month was paid to those who got employment for the eight busy months of the farmer's year. A strong boy could be had at that time in Connecticut at $1 a month through those months, and he earned it by working from daybreak until eight or nine o'clock at night. He could buy a coarse cotton shirt with the earnings of three such months. The farmers could pay no better, for the price they got for produce was so very small. Butter sold at eight cents a pound, and when it rose suddenly to ten cents several farmers' wives and daughters went out of their minds with the excitement. Women picked the wool off the bushes and briers, where the sheep had left it, and spun and knit it into mittens to earn $1 a year by this toilsome business. They hired out as help for twenty-five cents a month and their board. By a day's hard work at the spinning-wheel a woman and girl together could earn twelve cents. As late as 1821 the best farm hands could be had for twenty-five cents a day, or twice as much in mowing time. Matthew Cary gives a painful picture of the working classes at that time. Every avenue to employment was choked with applicants. Men left the cities to find work on the canals at from sixty to seventy-five cents a day, and to encounter the malaria, which laid them low in numbers. The highest wages paid to women was twenty-five cents a day, and even the women who made clothes for the arsenal were paid by the government at no higher rates. When the ladies of the city begged for an improvement of this rate the Secretary hesitated, lest it should disarrange the relations of capital and labor throughout the city. Poor people died of cold and want every winter in the city, and the fact seems to have made an impression only on benevolently disposed persons.—Christian at Work.

THE quality of the blood depends much upon good or bad digestion and assimilation; to make the blood rich in life and strength-giving constituents, use Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier; it will nourish the properties of the blood from which the elements of vitality are drawn. $1.00 per bottle.

The Influence of the Saloon.

The people who have not the energy of mind or body to form clear and practical purposes, or to put them in operation if formed, are the easiest victims of the saloon. As a rule they are sensitive, often morbidly so. They brood over their weakness and their failure. Naturally prone to depression, they become jaundiced and despondent. From that state of mind to the craving for any kind of stimulant the transition is natural and swift, and the saloon does the rest. There are thousands of families doomed to indigence, disappointment, misery, through life, that might have lived at least in decent poverty and with self-respect, but to-day are plunged in hopeless ruin by drink, and are sinking out of sight in the quicksand.

The churches lament the alienation of the poor and the working classes. The indifference of these to religion is a standing cause of regret. The clergy say it is almost impossible to get near the hearts of the masses. Perhaps the effort to disseminate Christian doctrine has been less systematic and persistent than it should have been. Perhaps more would have been accomplished if the clergy had gone themselves, instead of waiting for the people to come. No doubt, also, the spread of socialism and of agnosticism has much to do with the present attitude of that element in the labor party which is not in communion with the Church of Rome. But the saloon is not guiltless in the matter, for it represents all the tendencies and influences which make most strongly against religion and morality, and its atmosphere is quite as fatal to spiritual development as the drink it dispenses is to the health of the body. The poor suffer in a thousand ways through their poverty, and one of the abuses practiced most audaciously upon them is the adulteration of all the intoxicants sold to them. Alcoholic drinks made by the most honest processes are bad enough in their consequences, but the drinks of commerce are sophisticated to such an extent that those who use them habitually and freely are exposed to a whole catalogue of diseases from which our ancestors, with all their intemperance, were free. The effect of many of the adulterants commonly employed, moreover, is to excite the nervous system and act toxically upon the cerebral centres,—with the frequent result of inciting to maniacal deeds, which may very easily be ascribed to native savagery of disposition.—George Frederic Parsons, in the Atlantic.

The Outlook.

The coming years of the next quarter of a century are mines of untold wealth for the young men of to-day. Treasures of science, literature, art, and philosophy not dreamed of now by thoughtful minds will be brought from their hiding-places with tools furnished by advanced and enlightened civilization. All these things must tend, under the power of God, toward the establishment of the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ throughout the earth. What varied opportunities do these two facts open to Christian young men!

Walking in paths of knowledge which their fathers never trod, meeting and answering vital questions of life which minds of an earlier day never more than feebly groped for, putting to work the active intellect and the fresh strength of the twentieth century, as a brawny young farmer puts his shoulder to the cart-wheel, they may start, and move, and keep moving greater and grander forces for good than the Old World ever knew.

The young man who has a correct view of life, whose heart is burning with the sacred fire of God's love, whose powers of mind and body are consecrated to God's service—that young man is starting to-day upon what may be a wonderful career. God's wisdom will supplement his human wisdom, God's hand will aid his human strength, God's smile will cheer his heart and nerve his arm, for will he not be doing his Master's will? It matters not what the Christian young man's work may be. There are treasures to be unearthed. There is glory to be gained in every calling on which he can ask God's blessing; the only questions are: Does he intend to keep mentally abreast with the age he lives in, and does his heart belong to Christ? Let the young man settle these two points, and life will yield him, not only earthly treasure of distinction and the good will of men, it will yield him that treasure of treasures—the blessing of the Lord and the hope of immortality.—Exchange.

Women needing renewed strength or who suffer from nervous weakness, will find nothing to help them like Moxie Nerve Food. It is certainly a great invigorator, and will restore a shattered nervous system to a healthful and natural condition in a few days. The physicians say it is the best nerve food yet discovered.

A Bishop of the early church, who was a remarkable example of the virtue of contentment, was asked its secret. The venerable old man replied: "It consists in nothing more than making a right use of my eyes. In whatsoever state I am, I first of all look up to heaven, and remember that my principal business here is to get there; I then look down upon the earth, and call to mind how small a place I shall occupy in it when I die and am buried; I then look abroad in the world and observe what multitudes there are who are in all respects more unhappy than myself: thus I learn where true happiness is placed, where all our cares must end, and what little reason I have to repine or complain."—Foster's Cyclopædia.

TAKE one of Dr. J. H. McLean's Little Liver and Kidney Pillets at night before you go to bed, and you will be surprised how buoyant and vigorous you will feel the next day. Only 25 cents a vial.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

Not only shortens the time of labor and lessens the pain, but it greatly diminishes the danger to life of both mother and child, and leaves the mother in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery, and less liable to Flooding, Convulsions, and other alarming symptoms. Its efficacy in this respect entitles it to be called THE MOTHER'S FRIEND, and to rank as one of the life-saving remedies of the nineteenth century.

We can not publish certificates concerning this remedy without wounding the delicacy of the writers. Yet we have hundreds on file.

Wonderful Popularity of the Renowned Medicine.

THE GREATEST CURATIVE SUCCESS OF THE AGE—A VOICE FROM THE PEOPLE.

No medicine introduced to the public has ever met with the success accorded to Hop Bitters. It stands to-day the best known curative article in the world. Its marvelous renown is not due to the advertising it has received. It is famous by reason of its inherent virtues. It does all that is claimed for it. It is the most powerful, speedy and effective agent known for the building up of debilitated systems. The following witnesses are offered to prove this:

WHAT IT DID FOR AN OLD LADY.

Coshocton Station, N. Y., Dec. 28, 1884.

GENTS:—A number of people have been using your Bitters here, and with marked effect. In fact, one case, a lady of over seventy years, had been sick for years, and for the last ten years I have known her she has not been able to be around half the time. About six months ago she got so feeble she was helpless. Her old remedies, or physicians, being of no avail, I sent to Depeyster, forty-five miles, and got a bottle of Hop Bitters. It had such a very beneficial effect on her that one bottle improved her so she was able to dress herself and walk about the house. When she had taken the second bottle she was able to take care of her own room and walk out to her neighbor's, and has improved all the time since. My wife and children also have derived great benefit from their use.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC ENDORSEMENT.

Gorham, N. H., July 15, 1885.

GENTS,—Whoever you are, I don't know, but I thank the Lord and feel grateful to you to know that in this world of adulterated medicines there is one compound that proves and does all it advertises to do, and more. Four years ago, I had a slight shock of palsy, which unnerved me to such an extent that the least excitement would make me shake like the ague. Last May I was induced to try Hop Bitters. I used one bottle, but did not see any change; another did so change my nerves that they are now as steady as they ever were. It used to take both hands to write, but now my good right hand writes this. Now, if you continue to manufacture as honest and good an article as you do, you will accumulate an honest fortune, and confer the greatest blessing on your fellow-men that was ever conferred on mankind.

TIM BURCH.

A HUSBAND'S TESTIMONY.

My wife was troubled for years with blotches, moth patches and pimples on her face, which nearly ruined the life out of her. She spent many dollars on the thousand infallible (?) cures, with nothing but injurious effect. A lady friend, of Syracuse, N. Y., who had had similar experience and had been cured with Hop Bitters, induced her to try it. One bottle has made her face as smooth, fair and soft as a child's and given her such health that it seems almost a miracle.

A RICH LADY'S EXPERIENCE.

I traveled all over Europe and other foreign countries at a cost of thousands of dollars, in search of health and found it not. I returned discouraged and disheartened, and was restored to real youthful health and spirits with less than two bottles of Hop Bitters. I hope others may profit by my experience and shun all bogus.

Washington advices state that the Navy Department has invited proposals for five more new war vessels. Three of the new vessels will be cruisers and two gunboats. For the cruisers a maximum speed of nineteen knots per hour must be guaranteed. Every quarter knot of speed above or below this limit is to be compensated for or deducted from the contract price at the rate of $50,000 per quarter knot. All the material used must be of domestic manufacture. The vessels must be built where the Department directs. Each proposal must be accompanied by a certified check for five per cent. of the amount of the bid. The cost of one cruiser (the Newark) is not to exceed $1,300,000. The other two cruisers are to cost not more than $3,000,000 for both. The gunboats are to cost not more than $550,000 each. Full plans and specifications will be prepared, and will be on exhibition at the Department on and after June 1. Proposals will be received until noon of August 1.

The Acting Secretary of the Treasury, March 23, issued the one hundred and forty-eighth call for the redemption of bonds. The call is for $10,000,000 of the three per cent. loan of 1882, and notice is given that the principal and accrued interest will be paid at the Treasury on May 1, and that the interest will cease on that day. The bonds called are numbered as follows:

$50—Original number 17 to original number 23, both inclusive.

$100—Original number 157 to original number 351, both inclusive.

$500—Original number 66 to original number 148, both inclusive.

$1,000—Original number 767 to original number 1,221, both inclusive, and original number 23,778 to original number 23,797, both inclusive.

$10,000—Original number 1,612 to original number 2,885, both inclusive.

Total $10,000,000.

All the bonds of this loan will be called by the original numbers only. Persons holding bonds called by this circular can obtain immediate payment, with interest to date of presentation, if desired.

The Washington Gazette says that Col. James H. Marr, chief clerk in the First Assistant Postmaster General's office, and Judge James Lawrenson have been continuously in the service of the Postoffice Department for more than fifty-seven years. "The phenomenal length of service of these two men has been for years appropriately recognized. In Mr. Marr's case the salary has been fixed by special act of Congress at $500 per year more than any other man would get in the same position, his name being every year specifically mentioned in the appropriation." Judge Lawrenson "has served under thirty-one different Postmasters General. He has seen the Department grow from a handful of clerks to its present huge proportions. By virtue of his office as a notary public he has administered the oath of office to all the Postmasters General for the past fifty years. When Mr. Vilas became the head of that department he was sworn in by another notary. The old gentleman felt so badly about it that Mr. Vilas, upon being apprised of the fact, sent for Judge Lawrenson, and a second time took the oath, in order that the record might not be broken."

Church Schools and Christian Education.

It is not possible to conceive of but one purpose in the organization, equipment and administration of a church school. The purpose, and the only purpose, of a school is to afford facilities for the education of the young, and when a church embarks in the business of education, the only sensible reason she can give for that action is that she desires to give her young people a Christian education. The church has in view, not only the development of the individual character in the direction of righteousness and truth, but also she has regard to the highest well-being of the State, which is made up of individuals. The individual stands upon his character alone, not only before the unerring judgment of God, but even before the erring judgment of his fellows. The church has always held that the Christian character is not only the best for the individual and best for the State, but that it is really about the only thing worth having. She has engaged in the work of education in order that, by the inculcation of Christian principles and doctrines and facts and histories, she may give her youth Christian education, and thereby develop Christian character. She is perfectly competent to do this work, though it is truly the grandest work done this side of heaven. She has been equipped by her Lord out of the resources of his grace with every needed appliance. She is the depository of "that body of truth" which was handed down from the Infinite Wisdom, and which is the only foundation upon which the Christian character can be built, and whose principles, pervading the spiritual nature, give symmetry and stability to that character. She has, too, not only the Divine lessons to impart, but she has the perfect interpreter to assist her in the explication of the principles of truth and the perfect model of Christian character to exhibit in clearness the full value and the final outcome of the co-operation of the Divine Spirit with her in the processes of this great work. This very equipment for this special work is the clearest sort of evidence in regard to the mission of the church in the world. These furnishings are of such mighty import as to lay a burden of responsibility upon the church, which is relieved only by being discharged. It is, then, not only the privilege, and the grandest privilege, but it is the duty, and the ever-present duty, of the church to develop the Christian character in her young people by providing schools in which they may have the best facilities for acquiring the Christian education.

The Methodist Church has not only understood this from the beginning of her existence, but she has been faithfully and persistently at work at the problem. In poverty and through discouragement, in spite of opposition and amid reproaches, she has held on her course and has succeeded in educating as many of her children as any other denomination of Christian people. The education she has given them will bear favorable comparison with that given by the State or by any other body of Christians. While this is a gratifying fact, the influence of which upon our modern society can hardly be computed, yet there are abundant evidences all about us, that many times and in many cases she has forgotten her special mission in this direction or failed to accomplish it. Hundreds and hundreds of young men and young women have come out of our schools—"educated and graduated"—who give no evidence either in their life or work that they ever passed through the molding processes of a Christian school. That the church should have the educational supervision of young men and young women for six or ten years of the most impressible period of life, and then turn them out into the world with no more Christian character than those educated by the State, is the sad fact which to-day is operating in the minds of her own members against her educational institutions. As humiliating as it is, it can not be denied that the majority of those who are graduated from our schools are not Christians, and our people say to us, "You are failing." And they become indifferent. We pretend to do what we don't do. That is, we fail. And why do we fail? We shall see.

Religious Literature.

BY REV. T. K. FAINT LEROY.

Some critic upon character has formulated this thought: "Tell me who a man's associates are, and I will give the character of that man." It may be said, with equal truth, "Tell me the books a man reads, the character of the literature found upon his table, and you need be at no loss to determine the subjects that interest him most—that which employs his thoughts by day and colors his dreams by night." Personal association controls by contact, and good or evil comes of external accretion, as when the boy would make his mountain of snow by rolling his ball; while with books, papers, literature—in a word, what a man reads—good or evil comes by infusion. The thing is altered, the color of the substance is changed. As when the pot of blue was overturned into the vat of white paper pulp, a small thing; yet when pressed into paper it was no more white, but blue paper. Personal association, for good or evil, adheres to character; but reading inheres, passes into the mind, becomes a factor of that which goes to make up character. For, when reduced to its last analysis, it is not the man who makes the character, but the character the man.

With this distinction, how important, how vital, that care be exercised, caution displayed in what is read! This necessitates sound judgment in the selection and the production of books, papers, periodicals, that upon which the mind feeds, and which gives the coloring to a man's life. Persons are very particular in what they eat, and to know the food to be clean, sound and pure. As parents, how careful are we that no tainted meat is placed upon our tables upon which the children are to feed. The milk must be sweet, free from water and chalk, the sugar from glucose, the bread from alum, and the water filtered. No lack of vigilance upon this line; an "armed sentinel guards this door." How is it? When we pass from the dining-hall into the parlor or the library, what sort of mind food have we for the children to feed upon? What books? what papers? what magazines? what pictures? what music? Have we exercised vigilance here, and "placed" at this entrance "cherubims with a flaming sword" "to keep the way?" Neglect in the former can only produce bodily disease, which can be cured. Neglect in the latter is criminal, for the mind is contaminated, the spirit stained. Where the soul, the real and the immortal, is infected, and its possibilities for good and eternal joy are lessened, what then becomes the prime duty of the church? and what should be the chief aim of her teachers? Use every effort, employ the best training and the purest thought to formulate truth, and give to our people a literature that will elevate and purify by infusing into the mind the principle of right thinking, the fallow-field of right doing, from which the harvest is garnered, and the fruit gathered in eternity.

Woodville District Conference.

This body convened in Centerville, Miss., April 14. Bishop Duncan presided. The charges were all well represented. There was a larger attendance of laymen than at any of the Conferences we have attended. The progress of the work on the district since the year began has been very gratifying. One brother was so sanguine as to express the opinion that they had about captured the whole country within their borders. There has been much revival interest manifested in various sections of the district, and the preachers are very hopeful of the results of the summer's work. The finances of the district are in better condition than formerly, much of the Conference collection having already been gathered. The ADVOCATE is in favor with the Methodists of the Woodville district, the preachers generally doing faithful work on that line. The editor was well received and came away with the largest list of new subscribers that he has yet secured. We wish to emphasize what one brother said in regard to the work the ADVOCATE is doing. He said that the paper had been a most valuable help in sustaining in his charge the revival spirit which came upon them last year. The idea is: Put the new converts to reading the paper, and all the best results of a revival will be conserved.

During the progress of the Conference the Bishop took occasion to give some deliverances which, if followed, will do much good. Those on dress and diet were especially valuable as teaching the all-important lesson of economy. We will never capture the world for Christ until we learn self-denial for his sake. The hospitality of Centerville was large and generous, and the people showed their appreciation of the Conference by attending its sessions in large numbers. Altogether, the time spent there was pleasant and profitable, and the memory of it will abide many days.

Felicity Street Church Burned.

The many friends of this old church throughout our connection will be pained to learn that it was almost completely destroyed by fire last Saturday. The fire originated from the candle of the organ tuner, and the delay in sending the alarm to the central station was so great that when the engines arrived the house was completely gone. The furniture in the basement was saved. Nothing whatever was saved from the auditorium. The house was insured for $7,500 and the organ for $2,000. Last Sunday the congregation worshiped under an awning in the yard. The career of this church has been exceptionally grand. It numbers among its former pastors three Bishops of our church, and has sent out more young men to preach the gospel than probably any church in our whole connection. It has been sustaining a mission school in China for many years. The good works it has done can not be enumerated. We understand the pastor, Bro. Werlein, and his congregation are determined to go right to work to rebuild on a larger scale, and with all modern improvements. "And the glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former."

There have been many kind words of sympathy expressed to our brethren of Felicity Street Church by sister congregations of this city. Bro. Werlein communicates the thanks of the Felicity Street congregation and official Boards to the churches and ministerial brethren by whom the use of their edifices were so generously offered.

There is one lesson for church officials in the burning of this church. Don't insure a $25,000 church for the sum of $7,500.

Notice to the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood.

The Executive Committee of Mississippi Conference Brotherhood met in Edwards, April 2, 1887. Those present were John A. Ellis, chairman; W. B. Lewis, C. G. Andrews, W. E. Ballard, R. S. Woodward. John W. Chambers was elected secretary for the meeting. The treasurer was instructed to inform the members that Bros. Nicholson and Spillman, though not effective preachers when they joined, yet they joined as charter members under the first temporary Constitution; also to state that assessments Nos. 4 and 5 were paid for Bro. J. Nicholson out of the Peter James' Fund before Bro. Nicholson's death, and the amount has been refunded. The assessments were paid on the promise of two or three brethren that, if it should become necessary, they would refund the money to the Loan Fund. The treasurer was ordered further to say that any member, failing to pay these assessments, would forfeit his membership.

The treasurer has sent to Mrs. J. Nicholson $285; to Dr. J. W. Spillman, $235. The Executive Committee appointed a committee consisting of Bishop Galloway, Col. W. L. Nugent, Dr. C. G. Andrews, Revs. W. B. Lewis and I. W. Cooper to revise the Constitution of the Brotherhood, and report the same at the next annual session.

A Call to Sunday-School Workers in Mississippi.

DEAR FRIENDS: The State Sunday-School Convention is to be reorganized and will meet in Jackson, Miss., May 3 and 4. We desire to have the State well represented in this great work. In every county where there is an organization, we earnestly beg you to send delegates; and where there is no county organization, let every school send a delegate. There will be questions of importance discussed, and great good will result from this convention if you will only come. We want to impress every superintendent of a Sunday-school that his is not only an office of honor, but one of trust and responsibility. We want to impress every teacher, and inspire him or her with the fact that they have in their hands the clay which can be moulded into vessels of honor, both for time and eternity. We want to confer as to the best methods of work, etc.

Now let us beseech you to lay aside business for a couple of days, and come and help to make this convention a success. All who contemplate coming will please notify John T. Buck, chairman Executive Committee, by the thirtieth instant, so that homes may be provided for you.

T. P. BARR.

JACKSON, Mississippi.

Note from Dr. Adams.

Received (per Rev. A. F. Watkins) from Peter James $25—first annual payment of $250 note in favor of the Mississippi Conference Ministerial Aid Society; also $10 from Mrs. James. This cause when presented to the people is sure to bring responses. I have found it so far the most popular one I have ever advocated, provided results be the measure of popularity. Next!

T. A. S. ADAMS,
Treasurer.

JACKSON, LA., April 14, 1887.

Notice.

All persons expecting to bring their wives or other ladies to the District Conference, at Batesville, will please notify me at once, as we want and expect to make ample arrangements for all who come.

BATESVILLE, Mississippi.

Notes.

The "Praying Band," of Troy, N. Y., was organized twenty-seven years ago by twenty-seven Methodist business men. They have labored in one hundred and seventy-four churches in five States, and are believed to have been instrumental in the conversion of twenty-five thousand souls.

A writer in the April Forum makes a very singular argument against prohibition. He says: "We, who oppose prohibition, are convinced that no necessity exists for such a legal measure, that the moral forces of society are abundantly able to cope with this evil; that these forces are, in fact, slowly but surely curing it; that the extending of public education, the refining and purifying of the social habits of the people, and their gradually enlarging interest in the great and absorbing questions that affect their social and political destiny, are all as effectually and as certainly eradicating intemperance as they are destroying, let us say, intolerance and religious bigotry."

He then goes on to show that the cause of temperance has progressed and gained ground, and for that reason there is no need of prohibition. But he does not tell us how the saloon has been gaining ground until it well nigh controls everything in the land, and that control is always and everywhere in the interest of evil. Because temperance is spreading, therefore, we don't need prohibition, is about as good logic, however, as the saloon supporters ever give us. Religion is gaining ground all over the world, therefore, let the devil alone!

In one of our exchanges this sentence occurs: "Every pastor knows that his happy converts die and his working converts live." There is an inexorable law of spiritual life, which if neglected, brings spiritual death. That is work. The Christian life depends upon Christian work for its health and growth. We are "his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which he hath before ordained that we should walk in them." Work is the law of God's kingdom. Our Lord said: "My Father worketh hitherto and I work," and "the disciple is not above his Lord." The times demand and the church needs and Christ calls for working Christians.

A namesake of the editor, in one of the church papers, has an edifying article on "The Model Church Member." We give the points, and the reader can run them out and ponder over them at leisure. The model church member is an imitator of Jesus in personal piety and singleness of purpose and devotion to the church. He stands by his pastor and by all the means of grace in his church. He is a constant and careful reader of the church literature. He is in sympathy with the great benevolences of the church, and recognizes in them the channels through which the gospel is to flow out to all lands and gives them his hearty support. Now, you have a sermon; pause, ponder and "inwardly digest" its weighty contents.

In the repeal of the Tenure of Office act, the last Congress restored "an interpretation of the Constitution in reference to the control of the President over removals which subsisted from the organization of the government until the presidency of Andrew Johnson. The departure from their earlier constitutional practice was the outcome of revolutionary conditions." It has been found that abuses in office are not lessened, but rather increased, by dividing responsibility for removals from office. Hence the act was repealed and the responsibility centered again upon the President.

A "Speak-No-Evil Society" has been formed in London, with branches in most of the principal cities. Every member is pledged to ask three questions before speaking words of censure. The questions are: Is it true? Is it kind? Is it necessary? What a boon to this country would be the successful operation of such a society in our midst! How much wicked gossip would hush its glib tongue! How many domestic broils would die out for lack of fuel! How many heartaches would be eased by such a balm! Won't somebody start that society right away?

At a missionary meeting a venerated man was called upon to pray. He halted and began to feel in his pockets. "Father A., they want you to pray," whispered some one in his ear. "Yes, yes," replied the old man; "but I can not pray until I pay." After he had contributed his quota to spread the gospel, he could, with a good conscience, ask the Lord to give that gospel a wide sweep. If you were to put a letter in the office, you know it would not go unless you prepaid it. Prayers that are prepaid are pretty sure to reach their destination. Free prayers are just as absurd as anything can be. If you are not willing to work for what you pray for, how can you expect your prayer to be answered? There is far too much of "pious prattle" in our prayers, and our laziness of soul finds a comfortable vent in that "pious prattle."

Personals.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, the author of Daniel Quorm, came across the water in the "Britannic." He visits this country in behalf of the London Wesleyan Mission.

Ex-Secretary Manning was thoroughly prostrated by his ocean trip, and was seriously ill at Bournemouth, England, at last accounts.

Prof. B. Starr takes the place, in the Chattanooga University, of the celebrated Prof. Caulkins.

Rev. N. G. Taylor, the father of Gov. R. L. Taylor and Hon. A. A. Taylor, of Tennessee, is dead.

Martin V. Montgomery, of Michigan, has been appointed Associate-Justice of the Supreme Court of Columbia, in place of Justice McArthur, retired.

Miss Catherine Lorillard Wolfe, the richest woman in the United States, died recently in New York City. She had an annual income of $500,000. During recent years her benefactions amounted to $250,000 a year.

Mr. Blaine and wife go to Europe in June for the benefit of Mrs. Blaine's health.

Dr. M. S. Andrews, of the Alabama Conference, has been traveling about in Texas for some weeks, and his health is improving.

The Alabama Advocate will appear soon as an eight-page paper. That is an evidence of progress we rejoice to see. The editor calls for the modest sum of 4,000 more subscribers this year. We hope his brethren will give him double that number before Conference. Why not?

Rev. B. Carradine, of this city, will preach the commencement sermon at Mansfield Female College, in this State, June 19.

Rev. Dr. J. B. Cottrell, of Kentucky, will deliver the commencement address before the same institution, Wednesday, June 23.

Rev. P. A. Peterson, of Virginia Conference, has gone to Hot Springs, Ark., to find relief from rheumatism. We trust he may find it.

Dr. R. A. Young expects to reach home, from his sojournings in Europe and the East, about June 1.

Rev. William Burr, an honored, revered and loved member of the Tennessee Conference, died in Nashville, April 3.

Mr. Joseph Howard, a journalist of New York, is to write a life of Henry Ward Beecher.

According to one of our exchanges, Bishop Galloway will appear in a new role next Sunday in Durham, N. C. He is advertised to "decorate two new churches." We have heard the ladies say that the Bishop was a fine-looking man; but we never dreamed of that use even for a good-looking Bishop.

This is the last notice in regard to communications that are written on both sides of the paper. Hereafter such communications will be tumbled unceremoniously into the waste-basket, no matter by whom written.

Walter T. Taylor, one of Bro. Kimball's most promising young members, graduated in pharmacy at the late commencement of the Medical Department of Vanderbilt University. We congratulate our young brother, and wish him abundant success.

Fifteen persons were converted at Dr. Ahrens' services, last Sunday night.

Rev. W. A. Chandler, assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate, will preach the commencement sermon at McTyeire Institute, McKenzie, Tenn., May 29.

Notice.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Discipline requires that the Conference Board of Missions shall arrange for holding anniversary meetings within the presiding elders' districts of the Conference, in the interest of missions. (See Art. 13, on missions—page 186.) Will you please see that a meeting be held in accordance with this requirement. Make program to suit yourselves.

Prohibition Convention.

MR. EDITOR: Through your columns I wish to urge upon our friends in North Louisiana the importance of rallying to the prohibition convention to be held next month in Arcadia. The people of that thriving town know well how to entertain their friends, and we know whereof we speak when we say that the prohibitionists will be royally cared for by the Arcadians. Let this North Louisiana convention be larger than the one held at Minden, and let no parish in the upper part of the State, neither any church nor temperance organization, be unrepresented there. Let the friends of the cause stir themselves and let the saloon power of Louisiana be again reminded that the sovereign people are awake and moving steadily onward; and that the end is legal prohibition of the liquor traffic.

BREAD IN THE DESERT, AND OTHER SERMONS. By H. H. McKim, D. D. For sale by Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

These sermons are from the rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, in this city. They are seventeen in number, and discuss important subjects; and the thought is clear and the style pleasing, and they will be read with attention.

EPOCHS OF HISTORY: THE EARLY TYRONS. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. For sale in this city by Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street. Price, $1.

The man who first suggested the idea of studying history by epochs did a good service for the students. Several years ago, the Scribners began the publication of Epochs of History: Ancient and Modern. Many volumes of both series have already come before the public. They are carefully prepared by men who are authorities in their respective fields. The present volume gives us the history of the times of Henry VII. and Henry VIII., the first of the Tudors. It embraces one of the most interesting periods of English history.

From Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street, we have received, "From Death to Life," by Charles Kingsley. It is said to be Fragments of Teaching to a Village Congregation. There are six short sermons, with an appendix. For sale by Wharton & Bro. Price, seventy-five cents.

PERIODICALS.

—Outing, for April, has lively reading and vivid illustrations for such as love out-door sports. For sale by Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street, New Orleans. Price, twenty-five cents.

—The American Magazine, May. This is the first number of this new monthly, which takes the place of the Brooklyn Magazine. There has been great improvement in every respect upon the old. The Nation's Law-Makers, and Literary Life in Boston, and Some Experience as an Author, are all good, besides other articles. The supplement is a good afterthought, and contains The American Pulpit, Timely Topics and the Portfolio. Published by R. T. Bush & Son, 130, 132 Pearl street, New-York City. Price, $3 a year.

—The Musical Herald, for April, is a first-rate number, and will find appreciative readers among the lovers of the art of music.

—The Writer is a new applicant for public favor, gotten up to help all literary workers. It is an interesting periodical, and will no doubt win its way. Published at $1 a year. The Writer, Boston, Mass.

—Received—Common School Education, "Sidereal Messenger, The Student Statesman.

—The following pamphlets received: The Latest Studies in the Indian Reservations, by J. B. Harrison. Published by the Indian Rights Association, Philadelphia.

Ingersollism, by Rev. M. Buti. Buffalo Catholic Publication Company, Buffalo, New York.

—A Souvenir of Shiloh, to the Memory of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston. This is a beautiful piece of work. There is a fine colored illustration of the new equestrian statue of Gen. Johnston, with portraits of Davis, Beauregard, Johnston, Bragg and Polk. The Association of the Army of Tennessee is represented by well-executed portraits of its officers. The souvenir contains a brief "Life" of Gen. Johnston, a description of the battle of Shiloh, the oration of Senator Gibson at the unveiling of the statue, April 6, with illustrations and descriptions of the war monuments in New Orleans. Published by E. S. Upton, 91 Camp street.

There is nothing so sightless as the official eye of a policeman that has been closed by a drink.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of destroying the disease, have been manufactured all over the country but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor fully. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and parents in most frequently the result of these hidden tapeworm-like miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and many capriciously, again refusing it, tossing restlessly in sleep, grinding and gnashing the teeth, these are assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for as surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, and suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of Fahnestock is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can best safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

ON THE GIFT OF A CENT.

It is a bright and shining thing,
But some good things 't will buy;
I'll therefore not despise the coin,
This birthday gift—not I.

'T would buy a pen, wherewith to write
A volume for the press;
'T would buy a tract, with truth enough
Some erring soul to bless.

'T would buy a pencil, to work out
Great problems on the slate;
'T would buy an egg, wherewith a boy
Might make a fortune great.

'T would buy a nail, to stop a leak
And save a sinking boat;
'T would buy a stick, by grasping which
Some drowning boy might float.

'T would buy a piece of wholesome bread,
Some starving child to bless;
'T would buy a pin, wherewith to save
Some article of dress.

'T would buy, 't would buy, I can not say
How many things 't would buy;
I'll therefore not despise the gift
Of a bright new cent—not I.

—Well Spring.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been some time since I wrote to your dear ADVOCATE, I thought that I would write. I am going to school now, and have been going ever since November 5; but I do not like to go, for I am tired of studying. My teacher gives me such long lessons that I have to study nearly all the time to keep from missing; and he only gives me but one trial, and that is not fair. I think he ought to give two trials; but, no matter, that does not make me miss. The rest of the little cousins told about Christmas; but I have nothing to tell, for I did not get one present. Can any of you say that you did not get a present? I do not think you were slighted in that way. I will close by asking a few questions: How many books, chapters, verses and words are there in the Old Testament? How many books, chapters, verses and words are there in the New Testament? Which is the middle chapter and the shortest in the Bible?

Your little friend,

J. B. GILLIS.

RAMER, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: As I have seen only one letter from the place where I live, I will write to the dear old ADVOCATE. My papa takes the ADVOCATE, and I am delighted with the little letters you publish every week. Some of the letters I see are from my little cousins sure enough. I have one brother and two sisters. All of us are members of the church. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Mr. Charley Shurburne is our superintendent. We all like him very much. Bro. Healy preached for us last Sunday. Alice Ford, I will send you a name for your little brother: call him George Washington. I will ask one question, and close, as I may make my letter too long: What kind of a pen was the sin of Judah written with? With many good wishes for the dear old ADVOCATE, I will close by saying, Mr. Editor, please let me see my letter in your good paper.

NINA LA BEAMES.

ZACHARY, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. My mamma takes the ADVOCATE, and I like to read the little cousins' letters. I saw that one of my little friends had written a letter to you, so I thought I would write one. This is my first attempt at writing for a newspaper. I will answer Nettie Manning's question: The word "Immanuel" is found in Isaiah vii, 14. I see that Labell Gurry and Wilmer Brothers ask the question: "Who was sold by his brothers?" and I know they expect the answer to be "Joseph"; but if they will turn to Genesis xxxvii, and read from the eighteenth verse to the end of the chapter, they will find all the proof they need that Joseph's brothers did not sell him. Please accept me as another one of your cousins.

LOU E. MERRITT.

COLLINSVILLE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: My father takes your paper, and I like to read the little folks' letters, and I thought I would try and be one among them. I am a little girl ten years old, and have five sisters and one brother. Our baby sister is six months old, and we all are very fond of her. I am not going to school now. My oldest sister was teaching us; but papa took her off to school this morning, so we are idle again. I go to Sunday-school whenever convenient. I like our superintendent very much. I will ask the little folks a question: Where is "Claudin" found in the Bible? As this is my first letter, I will be glad to see it in print. Yours truly,

CLAUDIA L. CHANEY.

ZACHARY, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: We moved last winter from China Grove to Mt. Carmel, a distance of forty-five miles. I came through the country in a wagon, and had a jolly time camping out. We like our new home well. We live in the neat little town of Mt. Carmel. We have a good parsonage, and it is well furnished. The people have been very kind to us since we came here. We have no school here now, but I suppose we will soon. Well, I will try to answer Annie L. Wilson's puzzle. I will give the only answer I can find. I think the puzzle lies in the word "odd," which means unlike or unpaired as well as a number which can not be divided by 2. If this is not it, I have done my best, and leave it for some one else more apt in unraveling puzzles than myself; but I think I am right. So I divide the 25 into four unlike or unpaired numbers as follows: 3, 5, 9, 8—25. Good wishes to you, Mr. Editor, and to all the cousins.

WILLIE W. SIMMONS.

MT. CARMEL, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old, living not far from your city. My mother takes the dear ADVOCATE, and, seeing so many nice little letters from the little folks, I thought it would be so nice to join their number and see how my few lines would look in print. I have only one sister. We go to Sunday-school every Sunday, and delight in learning the truths contained in the best of all books—the Bible. I will close by answering Labell Gurry's question: Joseph was sold by his brothers to a company of merchants going down into Egypt. I will also ask a question: How many times is the word "Jehovah" found in the Bible? And, now, I hope to see this again, as it is my first effort.

Yours sincerely,

ANNIE CARLOS.

ELLISVILLE, Mississippi.

A Good Joke.

Boys are often fond of playing practical jokes. Such things may sometimes be done, but never to anyone's inconvenience.

In one of our colleges, a professor, who made himself very friendly with the students, was walking out with an intelligent scholar, when they saw an old man hoeing in a corn-field. He was advancing slowly with his work toward the road, by the side of which lay his shoes. As it was near sunset, the student proposed to play the old man a joke. "I will hide his shoes; we will conceal ourselves behind the bushes; and see what he will do."

"No," said the professor, "it would not be right. You have money enough; just put a dollar in each of the old man's shoes, then we will hide behind the bushes and see what he will do." The student agreed to the proposal, and they concealed themselves accordingly.

When the laborer had finished his row of corn, he came out of the field to go home. He put on one shoe, felt something hard, took it off and found the dollar. He looked around him, but saw no one, and looked up gratefully toward heaven. He then put on the other shoe, and found another dollar. He looked all around him, but saw no one. He then knelt upon the ground, and returned thanks to God for the blessing which had thus been conferred upon him. The listeners learned from the prayer that the old man's wife and one of his children were sick, and that they were very poor; so that the two dollars were a great relief sent to them from heaven.

"There," said the professor, "how much better this is than to have hid the old man's shoes." The student's eyes filled with tears, and he said he would never play another joke upon anyone, except in kindness.

Fifteen dollars a year for chewing tobacco, ten for smoking tobacco, ten for snuff, thirty or forty for extra dress and living, and then five dollars quarterage, and one for missions, with fifty cents for the widows and orphans, and still you call yourself a Christian. How will you feel when the day of settlement comes. It is going to come, for we are all stewards of our God. He has charged us up with all committed to our care, and he will reckon with us. The use of all of his goods, including the divine right in our own bodies which he fashioned and formed. The account of assets and debits will be shown to the world. Reader, how does it stand now; have you looked at it lately?—Arkansas Methodist.

Farm and Home.

Diligence and Thrift vs. Indolence.

Look at the farm of the man who is diligent in his business and prudent in his concerns. His own spirit is infused into everything around him. Everything is in repair, everything is in its place, everything is in its season, everything evinces that the master's eye has seen and directed all his concerns and that he hath remembered and practiced the adage:

He that by the plough would thrive
Himself must either hold or drive.

On a nearer examination, says the American Cultivator, we find his fields well arranged and productive, his crops clean and secured in season, instead of being exposed to the weather in stacks; we find his cattle well fed and in good condition. Enter his dwelling, it is the habitation of plenty, the store-house of the dairy and the loom, and his fireside that calm and domestic one where the farmer in the bosom of his family finds not only rest from toil, but the richest reward of his labor.

Reverse the picture: the indolent farmer exhibits his own disgrace to every passing traveler, and brings forcibly to the mind, even of a stranger, the words of the wise man: "I went by the field of the slothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding, and lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the stone wall thereof was broken down." How true is the picture which Solomon here gives of what daily falls under our own observation. How often do we see a farm susceptible of a high state of cultivation, and which might, with anything of industry and economy, be a source of wealth to its possessor! How often do we see it grown over with bushes, briers, thistles and every hurtful weed; the fields badly arranged, the fences out of repair, the land half tilled, the barn doors broken from their hinges, and the windows of the house filled with hats, presenting any idea but that of comfort!—Herald.

A FARMER'S TRUCK PATCH.—Popular Gardening thinks a small general farmer can usually make it pay to have a small truck patch from which to sell vegetables in the towns. There are thousands of localities through the country, the writer says, where a general assortment of "truck" or garden vegetables sell well, and especially where one sends out his own wagon and peddler. He has found most of the truck crops that can be raised at little expense of time or manure to be near always in demand, and, by keeping a wagon or two on the road, have taken in a good deal of cash, which helps out on expenses amazingly.

Too many ship to distant markets that are overflooded and hardly pay expenses, while if they sold nearer home, they would do much better. It does not take a large bed of radishes, onions and beets to bring in $50 to $100 from the sale of the product, and that, too, with but little expense out. The fact is, this "castle" building must cease and growers get down to rock-bottom.—Register.

To keep the hinges in order, big or little, and prevent the disagreeable creaking, don't oil them. The oil is sure to soil the hands, the garments, or the carpet, and "the remedy is worse than the disease" when a simpler method lies awaiting us. Rub the hinge that creaks, or the latch that will not slide, with a soft lead pencil, and you will find the application will work like magic.

You Carry

A whole medicine chest in your pocket, with one box of Ayer's Pills. As they operate directly on the stomach and bowels, they indirectly affect every other organ of the body. When the stomach is out of order, the head is affected, digestion fails, the blood becomes impoverished, and you fall an easy victim to any prevalent disease. Miss M. E. Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., puts the whole truth in a nutshell, when she says: "I use no other medicine than Ayer's Pills. They are all that any one needs, and just splendid to save money in doctors' bills."

Here is an instance of

A Physician

who lost his medicine chest, but, having at hand a bottle of Ayer's Pills, found himself fully equipped.—J. Arrisen, M. D., of San José, Cal., writes:

"Some three years ago, by the merest accident, I was forced, so to speak, to prescribe Ayer's Cathartic Pills for several sick men among a party of engineers in the Sierra Nevada mountains, my medicine chest having been lost in crossing a mountain torrent. I was surprised and delighted at the action of the Pills, so much so, indeed, that I was led to a further trial of them, as well as of your Cherry Pectoral and Sarsaparilla. I have nothing but praise to offer in their favor."

John W. Brown, M. D., of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I prescribe Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

T. E. Hastings, M. D., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "That Ayer's Pills do control and cure the complaints for which they are designed, is as conclusively proven to me as anything possibly can be. They are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of the profession."

PARKER—MRS. AURELIA A. PARKER (nee Taylor) was born July 15, 1815; was married to Mr. Socrates Parker, January 11, 1875, and died at Jackson, Clarke county, Ala., October 29, 1886.

My acquaintance with Sister Parker was made when I was but a child. I saw her under those circumstances which test the patience and spirit and evoke the qualties of one's character. And with kindness she moved among us, winning our esteem and admiration. Hers was an exemplary life then, even though a young lady and courted by the gay and frivolous charms of social life. She was above reproach or censure in her religious life. She joined the church when a child, and was reckoned a converted Christian. Her love for the church grew with her advancing years. She loved to plan and work for its prosperity until her health utterly failed. She was a great sufferer, and wrestled long with disease ere she fell under its fatal arrow. Her mind was partially weakened under bodily affliction, and the brilliancy of her young womanhood was impaired; but the one desire of finishing her course according to the will of God remained unto the end. I became her pastor last year, and was kindly received by her. I visited her often, and the conversation was always "our church" and its interests and her own religious needs. She realized that God was with her, and became resigned to his blessed will. The church has lost a devoted member, and the social circle a true friend. The family group have cause to mourn for the absence of a loved daughter and sister. She quietly passed away, and over the river with crown and harp she rejoices before the throne of the Lamb, waiting and watching for those whom she loved. Mother, she is not dead, but sleepeth.

T. Y. ARRENDELL.

MCCLENDON—MRS. LOUISA A. C. MCCLENDON died, of paralysis, at her home, near Lisbon, La., Tuesday, at seven o'clock A. M., March 8, 1887. She was born in Elbert county, Ga., August 25, 1820, and was the daughter of James and Mary Tait. She was married to James McClendon, who survives her, December 11, 1838. She was the mother of twelve children: five of these had gone before her. She attached herself to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1839, and was one of the original members of the Lisbon Church at its organization in 1849, and remained a member until death.

Her house was the welcome home of Methodist preachers. And but few of them who served the church in North Louisiana who have not feasted at her bountifully supplied table. She did not make a great noise or much ado about religion, but lived it every day. She was a strong advocate of the family altar, which, by her assistance, was kept aglow at her house for nearly forty-eight years.

The funeral was attended by a large concourse of sorrowing friends, attesting their appreciation of her worth. Rev. T. B. White, D. D., preached an appropriate and eloquent discourse on the text: "To be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord." Theme: Conscious Immortality in the disembodied state. Lisbon Church was crowded. The body was laid to rest, the minister using the beautiful ritual for the burial of the dead.

Her son, ENOS.

ROBERTS—DREOD ROBERTS was born in South Carolina, December 26, 1805. He was brought by his parents to Franklin county, Miss., in 1806, where he lived until the messenger of death called him to quit the mortal and experience the spiritual world. In 1834 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Mitchell. They were blessed with twelve children, eight of whom are yet alive.

Bro. Roberts did not identify himself with the church until his life was far spent. In 1879 he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and lived until his death a consistent Methodist and devoted Christian. I have been informed by those who were with him that his last days were his happiest. Notwithstanding his trouble physically, he trusted all to a higher power. Like Job, he bore his affliction patiently. All who knew him spoke of him in the highest terms regarding honesty and truthfulness. In paying the last tribute of respect to the deceased brother, we can pray God's blessing on his children and grandchildren, hoping that through the merit of Christ they may prepare to meet their God.

M. L. BURTON.

HARDY—THOMAS FLEETWOOD, son of Thomas H. and Sarah A. Hardy, attended his mother's funeral two weeks ago to-day. Yesterday we deposited his manly form in the same burying-ground. He was about thirty-one years of age. He united with the Methodist Church at Athania, La., seven or eight years ago; and, from his orderly and consistent life, we hope he was prepared to meet his sainted mother on the other shore. May the bereaved ones give their hearts and lives to God's service and meet the dear ones gone before!

J. F. WYNN.

HARDY—SARAH ADELINE JONES was born in Edgefield district, S. C., July 25, 1822; was married to Thomas H. Hardy, in Russell county, Ala., 1843, and departed this life, at Provencal, Natchitoches parish, La., March 23, 1887. Sister Hardy professed religion and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when young. She was for many years a consistent member of the Methodist Church at this place (Montgomery). She exerted a Christian influence in her family; and her children will not forget her godly example and advice. She was kind to all, but devoted to her children. She was afflicted for two years, and yet her death was sudden and unexpected. She expressed a perfect willingness for the change, and passed over the last river without a struggle.

J. F. WYNN.

THE TREATMENT OF DOUBT.—Aside from the removal of specific errors and a clear presentation of Christian truth, I have found the appeal to the soul of the doubter most effective. When Scripture has lost its authority, and nothing but mechanical law is seen in nature, and even in history, nothing is left but this appeal. Then the psychological basis of religion becomes the only foundation on which we can build. The fact that there is doubt, not an absolute rejection of religion, is evidence that the spirit still inclines to spiritual objects. This is the good soil to be cultivated, and here room may be found for planting one seed of Christian truth after another. By thus laying the basis of religion where alone it can be laid, and where there can be no question of its validity, namely, in the soul itself, the work of edification may be carried on successfully and steadily. Jesus welcomes all who have the slightest disposition to inquire and believe. And what power is concentrated in genuine faith, even if it be small as a grain of mustard seed! Those who pass through this epoch of doubt to the progress of which it is the condition, not only grow themselves, but they also know how to sympathize with souls in which the greatest tragedies are enacted. Nothing can be more pathetic than the struggle of a soul with itself for all which makes that soul true, life precious, and hope possible. Whoever has begun his experience with doubters, with a doubter in his own breast, and then passed through the conflict of peace, is usually the best prepared to help others on to victory.—Prof. Stuckenburg.

"JESUS, LOVER OF MY SOUL."—The brothers, John and Charles Wesley, with Richard Pilmore, were one evening holding a twilight meeting on the common, when they were attacked by a mob, and fled from its fury for their lives. The first place of refuge that they found, after having been for some time separated, was a hedge-row near at hand, behind which they hid a few minutes, protecting themselves from serious injury by the missiles that fell like hail about them, by clasping their hands above their heads as they lay with their faces in the dust. As night drew on, the darkness enabled them to leave their temporary retreat for a safer one at some distance. They found their way at last to a spring house, where, in comparative security, they waited for their pursuers to weary of seeking them. Here they struck a light with a flint stone, dusted their soiled and tattered garments, and, after quenching their thirst, bathed their hands and faces in the water that bubbled from the spring and flowed away in a sparkling streamlet. Then it was that Charles Wesley was inspired to write "Jesus, lover of my soul," with a bit of lead which he had hammered into a pencil.

These circumstances beautifully illustrate the hymn, giving to almost every line a reality that makes it peculiarly significant to every loving Christian heart. They had fled before their enemies, and found shelter from danger. He sang—

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly."

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special Vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

News Summary.

APRIL 12.

A settlement of the Afghan question has been effected by the governments of Great Britain and Russia. By the terms of this settlement England assents to the Russian demand for that branch of the Oxus now held by the Afghans in exchange for which concessions will be made of territory on the northwest frontier.——The expedition sent out by the American Consul at Tangier, in furtherance of his effort to break up the infamous usury system which has grown up in Morocco under the protection of foreign Consuls, was completely successful.——The old Spanish Cathedral, and a number of buildings, to the amount of $250,000, were destroyed by fire at St. Augustine, Fla.

APRIL 13.

Mr. Chamberlain made a spooch in favor of coercion at Kilmarnock to-day. He was frequently interrupted in the course of his speech; the hisses of his opponents exceeding the cheers of his supporters.——An important division on the Coercion Bill is expected on Monday.——Le Paris replying to strictures of the Berlin Post on France's attitude toward Germany, denounces the German policy as lying, cynical and brutal.——Mr. Simmons, the Haytien Consul General at Paris, denies that Hayti offered in 1874 to cede Tortugas, in settlement of England's claim.——The Sixth Parliament of Canada was opened to day.——The New York Democrats are delighted because Gov. Hill vetoed the High License Bill.——The new postal treaty with Mexico will soon be ready for the public. It is proposed among other things to have the postage between the two countries reduced to two cents.——Mr. Blaine continues to improve.

APRIL 14.

England has reduced the amount of her claim against Hayti from $1,000,000 to $160,000, and the settlement is considered at hand.——A commission of Bulgarian officers, en route from Knufford to Sofia, with a quantity of war material, has arrived at Vienna, Austria has permitted the passage of the material through the empire.——The Illinois House of Representatives has passed the bill requiring non-resident aliens holding land in the State to dispose of the same within three years after they shall have required title to same, and providing that such lands shall escheat to the State in case of failure so to do.——The remains of President and Mrs. Lincoln were taken from their secret resting-place and interred in the vault of the Lincoln Monument, in Oak Ridge Cemetery, at Springfield, Ill.

APRIL 15.

The House of Commons held a stormy session. Maj. Saunderson, by wholesale charges of crime, created quite an uproar, and the speaker, unable to control the proceedings, appealed for aid. Mr. Healy was suspended by a vote of the House for a week.——The Southern Bivouac, of Louisville, has been sold to the Century Company, of N. Y., and will hereafter be issued from that city.——A cyclone swept over Belmont county, Ohio, destroying a number of buildings. No lives reported lost.——West Virginia villages swept by a wind-storm. Hundreds of buildings destroyed. Loss placed at several hundred thousand dollars.——Birmingham had a $10,000 fire.

APRIL 16.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlin, in an address at Iverness to-day, supported Maj. Saunderson in his attack on the Irish National League.——The Conservative Irish members of the House of Commons and the officials of the House met last night after the adjournment of the House and effected an understanding with the government to have the suspension of Mr. Healy rescinded on Monday next.——The building used as the headquarters of the Salvation Army in London burned to-day.——The President this afternoon made the following appointments: Alex. R. Lawton, of Georgia, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Austria-Hungary; Newman Nicholls, of Tennessee, to be Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Montana Territory.——The Interstate Commissioners have suspended the long and short-haul clause in favor of the Mississippi Valley railroad.

APRIL 17.

The Canadian government has sent out an expedition to locate and make a preliminary survey of the gold fields in Northern British Columbia.——Mr. Bancroft will not visit New Orleans, as has been previously announced.——The laboring men of St. Louis are preparing for a grand demonstration and parade to be held May 1, in commemoration of the establishment of eight hours as a day's labor.——The jury in the case of John Arsendorf, charged with the murder of Rev. George H. Hadlock, in Sioux City, disagreed.——For the first time in ten years the Sunday law has been enforced in Arkansas City.

APRIL 18.

In the House of Commons Saunderson's amendment to the Crimes Act was defeated by a vote of 370 to 263, and the bill passed to a second reading without a division.——The Pope has decided the questions of the Knights of Labor in favor of that organization. If the Knights identify themselves with theories now being disseminated by certain agitators, this decision in their favor will be revoked.——The first brick in the foundation of the cotton factory at Columbus, Miss., was laid to-day.——Furniture for the Federal court-house and postoffice at Oxford, Miss., is received and being put in place.——The Jeanerette, Abbeville and Western railroad commenced grading to-day.——The directors of the Rapides Compress Company met this morning and signed the charter and elected officers.——The memorial meeting held in the Produce Exchange in memory of Paul Tulane, to-night, was addressed by Rev. Dr. Palmer and Senator Gibson.

The Board of Excise of New York City have resolved not to have any more saloons in that little town. Nine thousand are enough.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

In General Debility, Emaciation, Consumption, and Wasting in Children, Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, is a most valuable food and medicine. It creates an appetite for food, strengthens the nervous system, and builds up the body. Please read: "I tried Scott's Emulsion on a young man whom Physicians at times gave up hope. Since he began using the Emulsion his Cough has ceased, gained flesh and strength, and from all appearances his life will be prolonged many years."—JOHN SULLIVAN, Hospital Steward, Morganza, Pa.

"Life and Writings of Bishop Parker."

One copy of this superb work will be given for three new subscribers when accompanied by the cash in full.

Attention!

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground, on the grounds, on Friday, the fifteenth instant, at half-past eight A. M. A full attendance of the Board is urgently requested, as business of importance will be taken up.

Parties desiring to build this year, or having lots assigned them, will please make application to the secretary before the meeting. Tenters desiring to sell or rent their tents will please report same in time for approval by the trustees at the approaching meeting. W. H. FOSTER, President.
E. P. MACKIE, Secretary.

The Methodist Times, of London, has this sentence, which many of our own churches might ponder with great profit: "Nothing is more likely to damage a great and salutary principle than to enforce it mechanically and inflexibly, without the slightest regard to places, circumstances and persons." We have damaged the progress of our church in some instances by that same mechanical enforcement of some of our principles.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

One leading characteristic of the apostolic preaching which gave it its saving power, was its positive and definite character. It is said of our Lord by his evangelist, that "he taught as one having authority, and not as the scribes." The scribes argued, hesitated, suggested, balanced, corrected themselves, explained themselves, retracted what they had said, modified what they had said, as knowing themselves at the very best to be but feeling their way amid uncertainties. Our Lord spoke with his eye fixed on the unchangeable, and this note of conscious authority passed on to the first preachers of the gospel. "As God is true," writes St. Paul to the Corinthians, "our preaching toward you was not yea and nay, for the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus, was not yea and nay, but in him was yea." The gospel was not a balance of probabilities; it was not a speculation about God, but a well-attested message from God to the soul of man.—Canon H. P. Liddon, England.

I have been more and more convinced, the more I think of it, that, in general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes. All the passions do occasional good; but, whenever pride puts in its word, everything goes wrong; and what it might really be desirable to do, quickly and innocently, it is mortally dangerous to do proudly.—Ruskin.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is no exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Biliousness and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

THE ANVIL OF GOD'S WORD.

Last eve I paused beside a blacksmith's door,
And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime;
Then, looking in, saw upon the floor
Old hammers worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I.
"To wear and batter all these hammers so?"
"Just one," he answered; then, with twinkling eye,
"The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

And so, I thought, the anvil of God's Word
For ages skeptic blows have beat upon;
Yet, though the noise of falling blows were heard,
The anvil is unworn—the hammers gone.

Responsibilities of Revivals of Religion.

BY W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

We do not merely mean that there are present upon pastor and flock responsibilities to seek and secure frequent outpourings of the Holy Spirit seen in the edification and enlargement of the church through the conversion of souls; but we refer to the personal religious responsibilities immediately connected with these revivals, as to the permanence and benefit of their fruits. It is a precious occasion to witness the glory of God in the conversion of souls and their enrollment on the records of the church. But there should be excited in pious breasts more than the emotion of joy and grateful praise to God. A sense of profound concern should be felt as to the future religious character and history of these babes in Christ. Nursing fathers and mothers are absolutely necessary. Mental and spiritual direction and development, and correct Christian culture and protection are requisite, and must be given by more experienced Christians—the pastor and his flock. How exposed to misconception of truth and to the reception of errors that prevent proper growth and disfigure the beautiful symmetry of future religious experience and life! A babe needs tender, tireless mother-love to supply proper food, to guard it from danger, to develop muscle and mind by suitable exercise. A neglected infant may become a stunted dwarf or a feeble distortion of the human form.

Young converts need careful, correct, religious instruction, direct and personal, and from consistent pious example. The extremes of too great or too small self-reliance must be avoided. Careful training is necessary to prevent mere feeling, however joyous and elevating, from becoming the standard or substitute for duty as taught in the Scriptures. The evidence of Christian growth and of the life of faith, as well as the utter necessity of entire, humble, religious trust, should be clearly taught, understood and made the basis of religious action. In the glow of the fervor of our "first love," sometimes rash and unscriptural expressions may be made of Christian experience, and the door opened for severe attacks of the tempter. "The blood of Jesus cleanseth from sin—all sin—all unrighteousness," is often quoted as if ignorant of the sad fact that the best are ever liable to sin, and the glorious fact that this cleansing is ever present. "Cleanseth" is the inspired word, and explains its office as ever needed, ever divinely afforded to faith in Jesus.

The young Christian needs to be carefully, tenderly indoctrinated in the truth as it is in Jesus, and held by the church of our choice. While he should be encouraged to expect his peace to flow like a river, he should be guarded against premature and immature views of the atonement. The regular gradations and periods, as distinct in the spiritual as in the physical world, of childhood, manhood and age, should be seen by Christ's young disciples. Religion must appear as a beautiful harmony of claims and duties, human and Divine, and there is, there can be, no conflict in any of the Divine requirements. Religion appears most lovely when constant and steadfast, uniform and ever consecrated in spirit, purpose and effort. Forced hot-house plants will not be most productive of "fruit that shall remain." It is idle to attempt to interfere with the order and office of each of the spiritual seasons, or to make an effort to blend them all into one. Seed-time and time for slow germination and development must precede the ripe grain for the harvest. "First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear," is the Divine order. Let it not be disturbed by zeal, however honest but mistaken. Modesty, humility, courtesy and a teachable spirit are lovely ornaments of the young Christian life, as well as of other religious periods. Yet graces must be developed and gifts must be utilized for the benefit of the church and the glory of its Redeemer.

Bible classes must give religious knowledge, and the class-room, the love-feast, the prayer meeting must be made training-grounds for Christ's "lambs." Proper books and periodicals should be supplied to the young converts. Our church papers should be their teachers as well as the pulpit labors and pastoral visits. The history of our Methodism, its peculiarities, its distinctive features, its founders, the reasons of its grand history and success should be studied, understood, and prized most highly.

Especially must attention be given to the associations of young Christians. New habits have to be formed, new associations secured, new duties performed, new pleasures enjoyed, new trials encountered and overcome; and it will require much personal effort, with the aid of much loving church care, to prevent mere partial heart and life consecration to Christ. The church should be made attractive by every possible means, esthetical as well as religious. Sacred music, familiar study of the Bible, social religious meetings, in which talent should be called out and church power developed and fully utilized, should unite young hearts intelligently and firmly to Christ and his church. Something to do for Christ, and an opportunity for the deed, should be furnished to all as far as practicable.

A revival of religion brings with it untold responsibilities, tireless labor, the exercise of much religious industry and ingenuity to employ and preserve in the fold those brought in by revival influence. Dispositions have to be studied; adaptations made to peculiarities; love must be patiently laborious, and self-sacrificing must know no limits for Christ's sake. The lambs must be saved.

Alas! often with the subsidence of the fervor and glow of the excitement of the revival, too often, Christians forget their increased obligations and neglect their enlarged opportunities afforded by the recent reviving visit of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter. The cry should as honestly and as intensely go up from Christians during revival power as it did from the lips of smitten Saul of Tarsus, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Every one in the church has something to do, and it is his duty to find out what that work is, and do it for Christ's sake. We may have a race of pigmies or of giants as results of revivals—just as we determine it. A brood of small-souled, sectarian bigots may be added to our rolls, feeble in vision, illiberal in spirit as in purse; or we may rear up for God and his church an intelligent band of broad-souled, truly catholic minds, and hearts, and workers, with fixed views and liberal Christian sentiments, who, with lofty purpose and consecrated lives, shall leave their impress on the age in which they live, and on the hymns and joys of heaven. There should be no mutes among God's children. Dignified silence and graceful idleness are out of place. It would be a grand blessing to bring back the power of song and prayer and religious experience which gave such power and glory to other days in the history of our church.

The above views occurred to the writer as, perhaps, worthy of a place before the public, in view of the fact that revivals of religion are widespread all over our favored Zion.

No. 3. Found where two boys were sitting on the ground shooting blow-gun arrows at a scar on a China tree:

"Tom, s'pose we play hooky to-morrow? Mr. L. will think we are at home, and the folks there will think we are at school, and next day we can give in 'sick' for our excuse."

"I'd like mighty well to go fishing. A fellow 'most grows to the bench these long days, and I know the fish are biting, 'cause they always do bite when the dogwood and redbud trees are in bloom. But, I tell you what, Ned, a fellow's got to be as sleek as an eel to get out of a hooky box with all of his skin on him."

"You just trust my luck for that, Mr. Skeery. The old folks and the Mr. Teacher that trap me will have to sleep with one eye open and get up a long while before day. I aint no coward, I tell you."

"Well, what's your plan, Ned? I'm in for going fishing; but there's a heap of lying between here and the creek. I aint used to lying, and Uncle John told me yesterday that when a boy got to telling lies about little things he mighty soon began to tell them about big things, and in little or no time he was about fit to be a jail bird."

"Do pray hush up your Uncle Johning to me. If you're going to preaching, I'm done with you. I tell you what I'm going to do. I'm going fishing to-morrow, and if you choose to go and stick yourself up in that old schoolhouse forever, just because you are afraid to tell a little lie, and afraid that you will get licked, you can do it, for all I care. I know a boy that will go with me. Telling lies—the dog's foot!—what do I care! Don't I hear my father tell lies about his business, and aint he a big Injun in the church? You're a fool, Tom; don't you know everybody says Mr. S. aint honest and don't tell the truth 'bout his business; but they don't turn him out of the church. And Mr. P. stands mighty high, and ma says he's mighty good to the preachers and the missionaries 'cause he thinks that makes people think he's on his way to heaven; but I know I aint in Old Nick's claws by a long jump, if he aint, and I've heard people say they thought he was ready to go to heaven without bein' in the church. I tell you, old boy, you'd better go along and have some fun."

"No, sir. I'm done with lying and playing hooky. I don't care if Mr. S. and Mr. P. and twenty more rich men think they can do wrong and dodge God. I know they can't; and Uncle John says that money that men get in wrong ways does their children harm always. I'm going to stick to what Uncle John tells me; I don't care how many fools you call me."

No. 4. Picked up in a railroad car:

"Dead, is he? Well, its nothing more than I expected. Any poor fool that hangs 'round your corner as much as he did, aint going to show his red nose there many years."

"Hangs 'round my corner! He didn't get his whisky from me any more than from every place in town."

"Oh, yes, old boy (laughing), you know Old Nick is pickin' his bones, and you hear his widow cryin' every time you shut your eyes, and you want to make your brothers help to tote your load of sin, as the preachers say. Stand up to your work, Jim; if you kill a poor devil, do it quick. That's kind, only it don't bring in as many dimes as slow killin' does."

"What makes you such a confounded fool, Joe? The poor dog killed himself. I pay for license to sell liquor, and, if I didn't, you would, and, if you didn't, they'd send off and get a man to sell it if they had to send to Africa. Now, I wonder what business it is of mine if a blamed fool drinks till he can't ride his own horse, and let's him knock his brains out against a tree. You're a precious fellow to be joining in with the hallelujah crowd, and saying I killed him. Blast his soul, he ought to be killed, and his wife's better off without him—a dog!"

"Bah! bah! you needn't get mad. I reckon it is good he's gone; but I tell you the truth, Jim, I do feel mighty bad when I remember what a fine young man he was when he got to goin' with our crowd. I heard him say, 'This is my first drink,' just two years ago in your saloon. He was a Methodist, and a good one, when he moved to town, and the preachers have kept holding on to him; but I reckon we helped the old gentleman down stairs to get him away from them."

Railroad Men and the Sabbath.

"Neither be partaker of other men's sins."—1 Timothy v, 22.

The requiring of employees of railroad agencies and labor to perform their allotted tasks on the Lord's day is to exercise the will of desecrating the Sabbath in each individual case. The order sent out, or a standing order, is borne of the will to have each agent perform his duties, each engineer, conductor and car hand to be in place and make their run, and road or shop-hand to carry on or perform his job. This aggregates many thousand violations of the sacredness of every Sabbath by every such corporation of the land, so completely do they "partake of other men's sins." No manager nor stockholder can escape the imputation of being "partaker of his (their) evil deeds" (II John xi) by referring it to the president or general agents of the companies. Such questions are decided by vote or yielded to by consent. The manager, voting as he may, agrees to be governed by the majority, and backs up the mandate by his support, ignoring the awful mandate of Almighty God. The stockholder who may have no voice in all this endorses it in every particular in retaining his investment and drawing the per cent. declared in his favor. He knowingly reaps "the wages (profits) of unrighteousness" by knowingly violating a command of God as old as the human race, and as sacred as the Divine nature.

There is no rule of division given in the sacred Scriptures, nor is there any recognized in the laws of man, by a crime equally participated in by different ones, that can be so divided among them as to lighten the punishment or lessen the crime with one of them. Five persons were hanged and one was killed in being captured for the murder of Mr. A. Lincoln. Each one was regarded by the law as a murderer. The members of these corporations move together in the violation of the Sabbath. Each one becomes by his own will and acquiescence in the violation of the sacred law equally guilty as though he stood alone in the desecration, and individually "partakes" of the sin of Sabbath breaking with each one of the thousands moved out on that day by orders to run trains, work roads, work in shops and superintend their agencies. Hence the president of a system, with all his associates in office and stockholders, "partake" of the sin of Sabbath desecration with the lowest menial who pushes the hand-car or spades dirt as a section hand. Here is a copartnership in sin, a "partaking in other men's sins," as the Scriptures put it, which is fearful to think of.

But their sin does not stop just there. Men may, can, and some do "honor God with their substance," while many employ their substance to dishonor him. We may suppose that the railroads of the United States aggregate in value one billion dollars. This vast sum is, or may be employed to desecrate every Sabbath given to this generation. To suppose that one thousand dollars is the average salary of those employed in the various industries of the country, that billion of dollars gives a violation of the Sabbath equal to that of one million of laborers. I suppose if such reflections should suddenly cross the mind of the railroad king, or railroad man, in all their truthful force, as he sits in his cushion pew in his well-appointed church, his response of "Amen!" or "Good Lord, deliver us," would send back a recoil of fearful force. Let him meditate thus with the Psalmist: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."

DUCKWORTH.

Rev. G. D. Wade.

IN MEMORIAM.

Rev. George D. Wade, a superannuated member of the North Mississippi Conference, and a native of Virginia, died at the residence of his son-in-law, J. H. Wyse, near Pickens Station, Miss., March 21, 1887, at the good old age of seventy-two years and a few days. For between thirty and forty years he had been an earnest and faithful preacher of the gospel. For many years he was a member of the Mississippi Conference, serving in various fields as pastor and presiding elder. At the re-casting of Conference boundaries in 1870, he fell within the territory of the North Mississippi Conference, with which he became, at once, fully identified, and in which he was loved and trusted by his brethren as few men are loved and trusted.

His health failing a number of years ago, he was placed upon the superannuated list. He retired gracefully, cheerfully from the "effective" ministry; henceforth to become a tower of strength to the church in the community where he spent the remainder of his life.

Bro. Wade's religious experience was deep and abiding, and his life singularly pure and consistent. He made no loud profession of his piety, but his light was constantly, steadily shining; and, by the quiet, gentle influence of his example, men took knowledge of him that he had been with Jesus. Fixedness of purpose was a conspicuous trait in his character. He generally made out what he took in hand. Combining with this trait strong common sense, it is no marvel that what he did was well done. His thoughts were always expressed in plain, simple language. Hence his preaching was effective, instructive, edifying. This community was always glad to hear "Uncle Wade" preach.

Of iron will and unflinching courage, he was yet as gentle as a child, and as tender as a woman. He loved little children, and, as a result, little children loved him. They were always glad to see him, and felt free in his presence. He sincerely sympathized with their little sorrows and entered heartily into their childish enjoyments. Thoroughly Wesleyan in his theological views, and heartily in accord with Methodist usages, he was at the same time possessed of a broad charity, and loved a Christian wherever he found him. He was no croaker. Often have I heard him say, "These are the best times the world has ever seen;" and would point you, as an evidence thereof, to the many noble enterprises of the Church and the State for the betterment of humanity.

He took great interest in whatever looked to the moral and intellectual improvement of the negroes, and gave of his means, his time and his efforts to that end. Consequently, the people of that race greatly respected and loved him.

As a friend and brother, he took you right to his heart and fostered you to himself as with hooks of steel. As a counselor, I have not known a man in whose judgment I more unhesitatingly trusted. He was the soul of honor. His words could always be taken at their full meaning. Without guile and without hypocrisy, firm in his convictions, and fearless in the discharge of his duties, he was indeed a model man and Christian. In prayer he was peculiarly gifted. How unctuous were his appeals at the throne of grace! And how the memory of those prayers, and the thoughts of a friendship that was sweeter than life and stronger than death, linger with me on this bright April day!

Bro. Wade greatly enjoyed the last session of the Conference. Association with his brethren was like manna to his soul, and he came home full of the spirit of that delightful occasion.

But in a few days, on December 16, he was stricken suddenly, on the street, and the disease that had long preyed upon his system now took fast and unrelenting hold upon him, and while all was done that excellent medical skill and tender, loving hearts and hands could do, he lingered on, in great bodily suffering and perfect peace of mind, till the morning of March 21, when he resigned his soul to God and entered into rest. He leaves two daughters, one grandchild, and other relatives and numerous friends to mourn his death.

An appropriate memorial service was conducted at the Methodist Church, in Pickens Station, by Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, after which a host of mourners of both races followed his mortal remains to the cemetery, where they were tearfully, tenderly laid in the grave to await the resurrection of the just.

His faith was triumphant at the last. He was as perfectly resigned as I have ever known anyone to be. He expressed himself as altogether ready for the will of God, whatever that might be. Like Paul, he had "a desire to depart and be with Christ;" and now,

"Life's long warfare closed at last,
His soul is found in peace."

He went forth weeping, "bearing precious seed, and shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

THE [illegible] OF SORROW.

Past in the school of sorrow,
The Master was teaching there;
But my eyes were dim with weeping,
And my heart was full of care.

Instead of looking upward,
And seeing his face divine,
So full of the tenderest pity
For weary hearts like mine,

Dimly thought for the morrow,
The cross to bear today;
So hard, and so heavy to carry,
That it darkened the light of day.

At last in my bitter sorrow,
I looked from the cross above,
And I saw the Master watching
With a look of tender love.

He turned to the cross before me,
And I thought I heard him say:
"My child, thou must bear thy burden,
And learn thy task today."

So I stooped 'neath that weary sorrow;
One look at that face divine
Had given me power to trust Him,
And say, "Thy will, not mine!"

The Sunday-School Lesson for May 8, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

THE CHILD MOSES.

Exodus II, 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Lord is thy keeper."—Psalms cxxi. 5.

Sixty-four years had elapsed since the death of Joseph to the present lesson. Very great changes had taken place. The country was still ruled by a Pharaoh in the eighteenth dynasty of those sovereigns; but he was very different in his character and the manner of his reign from the Pharaoh under whom Joseph was prime minister. The name he bore was different also. It is remarkable, however, that the names of the respective Pharaohs are so completely lost sight of. But for their association with God's people in the unfoldings of Providence, even their existence would have passed out of mind. If the name of Aphophis were written, who is there that would not be utterly ignorant of its history? Very few, except professional Egyptologists, or those who had but recently, for special reasons, dug it up from under the accumulated rubbish of ages. Yet, if Joseph's Pharaoh were mentioned, there would be instantly suggested, even to an unlettered mind, the humane King of Egypt, with his dreams and the seven years of famine and the seven years of plenty. So the name of Thothmes might be pronounced and no impression would be produced upon the mind of the average scholar; but let there be added, by way of description, that he was the king who ruled Egypt in the days of Moses, and there would come up the ten plagues, the hardened heart and the overthrow of the horse and his rider in the Red Sea.

The little band of seventy persons who had come down with Jacob into Egypt had multiplied into a great nation, whose numbers and thrift and power had so excited the jealousy of the reigning monarch that he determined to extirpate them. Cruel oppression and merciless tasks were the means adopted, and, more efficacious still, a bloody edict had been promulgated that all the male infants born to the Israelites should be put to death at their birth. This would certainly have accomplished the purpose had not the great Preserver of his own people espoused the cause of the oppressed and prevented, in more ways than one, the cruel edict from being carried out. This lesson tells of one method by which the life of an infant was preserved, who grew to be one of the grandest, if not the grandest, of men in all the ages. He saw God face to face, and did not die. He stretched out his potent rod, and earth, air, water and animated nature responded. He was the most honored of men, in that he was directed by inspiration to say that the Christ would be like him: "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet like unto me."

THE MOTHER.

Verse 1. "A man of the house of Levi took to wife a daughter of Levi." It was fitting that both Amram, the father, and Jochebed, the mother, of him who was to be the law giver and the high priest, should be of that tribe which was to be selected as the ministers of holy things. Pious parents most generally rear pious children. That this couple were pious is indicated in Hebrews xi, 23. They had "faith" to believe that God would protect them and theirs even though they violated the king's commandment.

THE CHILD.

Verse 2. "Bear a son." This was not the first child. Miriam and Aaron had been born before the infanticidal edict had been promulgated. Aaron was three years old at the birth of Moses, and Miriam ten or twelve. Moses' life was to be of so much more importance that even the birth of the others is not mentioned in this connection. "A goodly child." He is said in Acts vii, 20, to be "exceeding fair"—literally, fair to God. Beauty was regarded by the ancients as a mark of Divine favor. This, added to their natural affection, caused his parents to brave the wrath of the king, and it doubtless caused Pharaoh's daughter to save his life.

3. "An ark of bulrushes; daubed it with slime and pitch, and put the child therein." "Ark" is, in the original, the same as that translated "the ark of Noah." "Noah made an ark to the saving of his house." So an ark was made for the saving of the leader of Israel's hosts. The bulrush was a coarse grass growing in marshy places. Slime was the mud of the Nile, and the pitch was mineral tar. "She laid it in the flags by the river's brink." It has been often said that the ark went floating down the river; but the mother's tender affection shrunk from such exposure, and she placed it close to the bank, as if it had floated up there.

4. "His sister stood afar off." The mother, doubtless, feared that she might be suspected if found watching the child, and commissioned his sister. Sister! mother! what guarantee of sleepless watching! Yet there was Another guarding that little vessel whose affection survives even after a mother should become forgetful.

THE PRINCESS.

Verse 5. "The daughter of Pharaoh." The world is not much interested in the name of this personage. The foster-mother of Moses is name more descriptive. Yet Josephus and others call her Thermuthis. She was probably in the habit of going just to this spot for the purpose of bathing in the sacred stream. "Saw the ark among the flags." Curiosity would naturally prompt her to look into it.

6. "She saw the child." What a sight to touch a womanly heart! "The babe wept." The language of infancy. "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings hast thou perfected praise." Out of the mouth of this babe went forth a wail so plaintive as to elicit the protection of the princess, even though she was braving the wrath of her royal parent by violating his cruel edict.

7, 8. "Shall I call a nurse of the Hebrew women? And the maid went and called the child's mother." It was needful that Moses should be trained in the religion of his fathers; and who so fitted to conduct this training as his own pious mother, actuated by the double motive of affection for her son and loyalty to her people's God? It was at her knee that he imbibed the faith which forty years after enabled him to refuse to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter. It was from her own lips that he learned the prophecy that God's people would be brought out of bondage. Doubtless his own bosom had often thrilled with pure joy as she taught him that probably he himself would be the leader of his people.

10. "The child grew; she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son." Additional qualifications to those imparted by pious rearing were needed to fully equip Israel's deliverer. He had need of wisdom as well as piety. He must be skilled in military tactics as well as in the service of the sanctuary. The very school of all others in that day where one might be fitted to become a grand military leader, a sagacious statesman, a successful sovereign, was at the polished court of the Pharaohs.

St. Stephen, in his dying sermon, bore testimony to Moses' thorough equipment for his divinely appointed mission: "And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds."

A vacillating walk, a backwardness to take a bold and decided line, a readiness to conform to the world, a hesitating witness for Christ, a lingering tone for religion—all these make up a sure recipe for bringing a blight upon the garden of your soul.—Bishop Ryle.

Local Preachers' Conference.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Persuant to adjournment, the Local Preachers' Conference met on April 8, 1887, at nine o'clock. After religious exercises, Rev. J. B. Bowen, president of the Conference, called the body to order and stated for the benefit of those brethren who were not members the object of the organization. The secretary being absent, Rev. E. T. Denson was elected secretary pro tem. The records of the last session not being at hand, the calling of the roll was necessarily dispensed with. The names of the following brethren were ordered to be enrolled as members, to wit: Rev. E. G. Cook, Rev. William Hoover, Rev. N. E. Alfred, Rev. B. A. Beeson, Rev. A. B. Nickelson, Rev. C. B. O'Quin and Rev. T. H. King. On motion Conference took a recess until two o'clock P. M.

The afternoon session was opened with religious exercises by Rev. J. M. Weems, presiding elder of the Brookhaven district, after which the Conference was addressed by Bishop Galloway, Rev. Dr. Carter and Rev. J. M. Weems. Reports were then received and discussed from quite a number of the local preachers. The hour having expired, the Conference was adjourned with benediction.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference was opened at eight o'clock A. M. with religious exercises by Rev. E. G. Cook, after which they proceeded to business. On motion of Rev. E. T. Denson, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the president appoint a committee of three to prepare an address to the local preachers of this Conference, setting forth the necessity for a more united effort among local preachers, and urge upon them to co-operate with us in this effort to organize and sustain a Local Preachers Conference.

The following were appointed as a committee: Rev. E. T. Denson, Rev. E. G. Cook and Rev. A. B. Nickelson.

On motion of Rev. E. T. Denson, Bishop Galloway was requested to have published his address to the local preachers delivered before the District Conference to-day.

At the suggestion of the president, the following preamble and resolution was introduced and adopted:

Whereas, Rev. Dr. Carter, editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, has recognized the local preachers as agents for our church organ, and propose to receive their subscriptions upon the same footing as those from the itinerancy; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do earnestly and industriously work for the interest of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

There being no further business, the Conference adjourned to met in Hazlehurst, Miss., at such time as the president may hereinafter direct.

Woman's Missionary Auxiliary, of Friendship, La.

As workers together with them in their labor of love and mercy, we, the members of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary, of Friendship Church, Louisiana Conference, would give expression to our deep sympathy with Miss Lochie, and regret at the death of Miss Dora Rankin, who, in the providence of an all-wise Father, was taken away in the prime of life from her beloved work. For since the receipt of a beautiful and instructive letter from Miss Lochie, inclosing a photograph of their "Chinese pet," we have felt more nearly allied to, and a deeper interest in their particular portion of the work of evangelizing the world, and of giving to those who are in darkness and the shadow of death that which we also have received—the great and incomprehensible love of God as manifest in Jesus Christ. While we bow in submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, we cry out in our heart-felt interest and sympathy, Who, oh! who will now take up the fallen mantle, and upon whom will fall a double portion of the spirit that was upon Miss Dora, whose self-sacrifice and toil in behalf of the benighted and lost has gained for her an ascent into the realms of ineffable joy and bliss.

Miss Dora is dead; her work is done! Done? Ah! no, the words which convey to our minds the fact of her death are words of inspiration to us, and, as they pass from lip to lip, the eye of faith penetrates the veil that hides her from our view, and we behold her there amid the martyrs of all the ages in the exultations of inexpressible joy, as she proclaims, "China is coming home to God." And we catch up the strains as they float down to us on the stillness of the evening air, and, receiving a fresh impetus, we press onward from conquering to conquer in the name of the Savior of Dora Rankin.

Sister, thou art gone, the first to report in the realms of light the work of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; gone, yet thou art with us, and thy sweet spirit will ever beckon us on to higher aims and nobler ends.

FANNIE E. HENDERSON,
Cor. Sec. Friendship Auxiliary.

To the Members of the Woman's Missionary Conference Society of the North Mississippi Conference.

DEAR SISTERS: Truly God is honoring the North Mississippi Conference Society in that he is calling from her arms two noble young women to foreign fields to help our overtaxed and burdened missionaries. In selecting these devoted girls from our own Conference Society, he speaks very plainly to the women of the North Mississippi Conference to aid in their support, and we will be chargeable with gross neglect if we fail to come up to the requirements thus laid upon us. Other Conference Societies are arranging to defray the expenses of those who go from their bounds. Shall we be less zealous, less appreciative of the dear girls who go from us than our sister Conference Societies? Surely we can not suffer them to make an offering of themselves, and find it in our hearts to let them go, feeling it such a heavy burden to us. This would indeed be a trial to which we must not subject them. We are able and must equip them for this work. Let every member come up with a thank-offering, and I am sure there will be no lack of funds. Let each sister practice self-denial for this special work. Some are able to pay more, some less. Let those who are able give ten or twenty dollars; others may do all they can, and then not exceed the widow's mite; but let all give as the Lord has prospered them.

For information I will state that total expenses for one will be: Outfit, $200; salary, $750; traveling, $400. The amount for two will be double this amount, making $2,700. Let us do all we can to get this amount, and if we fail, the Woman's Board will come to our relief. Some good big-hearted sister or brother may find their hearts so warmed by the love of God that they will donate to this cause $100 or $500. If so, there are rich supplies of grace for such.

Our Woman's Board of Missions will convene on June 11. The North Mississippi Conference Society on the evening of (Thursday) June 30, in Grenada.

Sam Jones Camp Ground.

MR. EDITOR: Ever since I attended the Sam Jones Camp Meeting, last year, I have been anxious to call the attention of our camp meeting-loving people to it as a very suitable location for a great annual camp meeting. It is located a short distance north of Gloster, in Amite county, on the L., N. O. and T. R. R.—very generally called the Valley road south of Memphis. The encampment is bordered on one side by the railroad, which runs on a high ridge, while the tabernacle is in a valley out of sight, so that the worshiping congregation is but little interrupted by passing trains. There is a splendid tabernacle and boarding and sleeping hotel and a few new cottages on the ground; but the most of the encampment is yet in a crude, unfinished state. But the association, after doing the very best they could for a beginning last year, are determined to go on with their improvements as fast as possible until they make it all that is desirable for camp meeting purposes. They propose to remove all rubbish from the surface of the ground; straighten the beautiful little creek of living water that runs through it, lay it off in village form divided into suitable lots, and in all respects make it a desirable place.

Some of its peculiar advantages I will briefly mention. It is in a vast region of country where we have no other camp ground; it is convenient to all who live on or near the Valley road from Memphis to New Orleans; it is very suitably located, especially for the Woodville and Vicksburg districts of the Mississippi Conference. Let all our camp-meeting patrons secure a lot and build, or have built, a substantial cottage, and then all they will have to do will be to put a bale of bedding, a box of provisions, a few chairs and cooking and table furniture on the train and be landed on the camp ground. They will need no teams or wagons to haul their baggage to their cottages. There will be an ample supply of porters to assist them, if needed. When the meeting closes most of the tenters can be at home the night succeeding. There are two springs, one in and the other near the camp ground, overflowing with the best water I ever drank. I would rather be there and drink that pure water than attend any summer watering place in my knowledge. The association charges a moderate gate fee to enable them to keep up the public works in the encampment. Dr. Whittington keeps a well-furnished boarding-house, with sleeping apartments for ladies and gentlemen, with moderate charges. Many who attend board and lodge in their own cottages, which is preferable where it can be done. We had an excellent camp meeting there last year, attended by twenty preachers and large audiences all the time. We look for much enlargement every way this year. There is plenty of lumber at the saw mills near by for building cottages, and we hope to see those old railroad shanties succeeded by neat little home-like houses.

"Spare that Hymn Book!"

MR. EDITOR: Some time since the St. Louis Advocate had an editorial under the above heading. As that Advocate does not circulate extensively in the bounds of your patronizing Conferences, I want to give an exhortation to the presiding elders and pastors. Please, dear brethren, do not turn down the leaves in the pulpit Bible and hymn book. It would seem that this exhortation would not be necessary; but, alas! it is. After putting new Bibles and hymn books in the churches, it is horrifying to have the leaves turned down, doubled, etc. Our preachers are not careful enough in this matter. We had a Conference in our church some time since, and a preacher wrote his name on several pages of one of our song books! This Sunday-school superintendent was hurt, for he constantly exhorts the scholars to take good care of books. Brethren, please spare the books.

SUPERINTENDENT.

From the Work.

OXFORD, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I must, through your columns, be permitted to thank Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, of Grenada, for the interest he has manifested in our Oxford Church, and the full and correct statement made by him in our excellent ADVOCATE with regard to the state of affairs here. While we have not enough money in sight to carry to perfection the much-needed work, we have sufficient means and faith to begin it. Some of the material is already upon the ground, and work upon the vestibule began yesterday. If our plan can be carried out (and it includes nothing that is not badly needed), we will have such a church as surroundings here demand. The cost of such improvements to be made will be between $3,500 and $4,000. The people of this immediate section have made a faithful effort to raise the funds necessary, and are yet considerably short of the amount desired. Will not the Methodists and others of Mississippi help us? We want to have a church that will attract our noble Mississippi boys who come here to be educated. Our membership is comparatively poor and, besides, we have recently lost some of our best paying ones. I have never served a more liberal people. All things considered, they have doubtless raised in the past fifteen months more money than any other church in the Conference.

I feel that God is not going to let us fail in our plans for improving his holy temple. Too many hearts interested and prayers going up for this. From the time this notice appears in "our NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" till the Oxford Church is declared finished and dedicated anew to God; let it be understood that the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Oxford, Miss., will gladly receive contributions to this worthy cause from any person or persons in or outside of the State of Mississippi, and especially do we appeal to those who were once students here. It will afford us pleasure to give you, Mr. Editor, a weekly list of the persons contributing; not the amount given but the person giving. Now, I wonder who will be first. I expect no disappointment in such a work as this. Hearts will move and purses open.

Your brother,

E. H. RAMSEY.

REVIVAL IN CARROLLTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our revival has resulted in fifty-two conversions, twenty-four additions to the Methodist Church, two to the Presbyterian, and two to the Baptist, and more to follow.

The revival has done wonderful things for us. 1. It revived the church by reclaiming the backslidden and helping many others on in the good way. 2. It has resulted in the erection of several family altars. 3. It has drawn the different denominations closer together. 4. It resulted in the conversion of many of the children, the tender lambs, and has brought them into the fold. 5. It was the means of the conversion of many who were considered "hard cases." 6. It has proven to us the efficacy of prayer, that God does answer special prayer. 7. It has demonstrated that the simple gospel is the power of God unto the salvation of sinners. 8. It has developed many useful workers in the church. The young members worked with all their might, and God blessed them abundantly. I might mention other results, but these will suffice.

The community at large are very grateful to Bros. Burroughs and Kilgore for earnest and able sermons preached during the meeting. Bro. Burroughs can dig up all vain excuses and demolish all strange objections and leave the sinner standing on nothing, and Bro. Kilgore can make him jump some way in a proposition. "Bro. Kilgore was a steak of sunshine to us."

T. W. LEWIS.

MANSFIELD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The church here is in a highly prosperous condition; large congregations, deep religious interest, large and growing Sunday-school under superintendency of Bro. Scales. On yesterday, April 17, we cleared the decks of all financial liabilities for the current year, realizing in cash and bona fide pledges $300, or about $60 more than was asked for. This will, perhaps, enable us to pay double our assessment to foreign missions, as many of the best paying members are yet to hear from. The per capita from the Sunday-school has also been provided for, and both the Woman's and Juvenile Missionary Societies are hard at work. This is certainly, for enlightenment and all the attendant virtues, one of the finest communities in the State, and from present indications may at no distant day become one of the richest.

Dr. Grace has been re-elected by the Board of Managers to the college headship for another term. He is held in universal esteem, and the school prospers under his administration. I have not time to write a separate communication, as I leave to-day to assist Bro. Davis in a meeting at Coushatta.

Fraternally, J. M. HEARD.

HOMER DISTRICT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We are having a pleasant and, I trust, a profitable time at each of our meetings. People reasonably cheerful, though the drought is troubling them now, hindering their planting interest. I see a greater desire to meet the demands of a Christian life than at any time during my ministry. True, there is much wickedness and great negligence; but the recognition of God's claims has greatly increased and is still increasing both among pastors and people. The standard of Christian character is being elevated every year all through our country, both in town and country. May God increase the rapidity of this movement until all shall have a correct view of Christian life.

Your brother in Christ,

ROBERT RANDLE, P. E.

P. S.—Bro. Sheppard is up and improving slowly; but will hardly be able to do full work during this year.

I believe that we can not live better than in seeking to become better.—Socrates.

The Heir of Germany.

On March 22, the Emperor William of Germany was ninety years of age. Although he is still hale and sturdy for a man of such advanced age, it can not be anticipated that many more years are in store for him. In view of this fact, it is interesting to note what sort of a sovereign Germany will have as the great Kaiser's successor.

The heir to the German throne is, indeed, no ordinary man. By his career, as well as by his rank, he holds a place of high renown in Europe. The next German Emperor will worthily sustain the fame of his ancestors for warlike tastes and military heroism.

Frederick William, the Crown Prince, has already passed beyond the line of middle age, for he is now in his fifty-sixth year. Like his father, he was only ten years of age when he first donned the uniform of an officer in the Prussian army. The profession of arms has absorbed him ever since. He has worked his way up, by able and valiant service, from the lowest to the highest military grade; and is now a Field Marshal.

The most notable military triumphs of the Crown Prince were won in the war between Prussia and Russia in 1866, and in that between the German States and France in 1870—71.

He played a conspicuous and brilliant part in the battle of Sadowa, which resulted in the overwhelming defeat of the Austrians; and he led the South German forces on the fields of Alsace and Lorraine in the brief struggle which ended in the overthrow of the second French Empire.

His chivalrous bravery, his calmness in presence of the most appalling dangers of the field, his genial ways and cheery good-nature, his fine, stalwart, soldierly frame and bearing, made him the idol of his troops, and he conquered the hearts of all Germans, as well as the legions of France, by his conduct in that terrible conflict.

His popularity is attested by the affectionate name bestowed upon him by his soldiers: "Unser Fritz," or "Our Fredrick." No doubt a part of this popularity was due to his military ability, for in that sharp campaign he won the name of being one of the most brilliant generals of the nineteenth century, and shared with his cousin Prince Frederick Charles, the highest honors of the campaign.

Devoted by genius and taste to the military profession, the Crown Prince has held aloof from the political affairs of his sire's Empire. The old Emperor has borne alone the duties and responsibilities of power. A few years ago, it is true, during an illness of his father, he conducted the affairs of the realm as agent. But he scrupulously followed the rule to act as he thought the Emperor would have acted under the circumstances.

It is, indeed, a rule in the family of Hohenzollern that the heir shall not be active in the government. When Frederick the Great was the heir, he nearly came to the block for interfering in the political affairs of his fierce father's kingdom.

It is, therefore, not possible to foresee what sort of a ruler Frederick William will make when he succeeds to the throne of Germany; yet the interests of the whole European world are involved in the qualities which he may one day display as a sovereign.

The Crown Prince married the Princess Victoria, the oldest child of the Queen of England, and he has a large family of children and grandchildren. In person he is tall, splendidly built, with a long tawny beard, has a noble, military bearing, and is vigorous in every movement. He certainly looks "every inch a king."

He is noted for thoroughly German traits, being fond of good company and of public amusements, and full of hearty, bluff good-humor. Next to his aged father, indeed, he is the most popular man in Germany, and will undoubtedly be welcomed to the throne with the cordial acclamation of his subjects.—Youth's Companion.

For Animals.

Mange, Distemper, Diarrhœa and Worms in dogs quickly cured. Scratches, Sores, Galls, Bruises, Cuts or Wounds of any kind quickly and permanently healed by washing with the Fluid. Dr. J. HOUGH, the distinguished Veterinary Surgeon, says: "I find Darbys Prophylactic Fluid all that it is represented. As a local application I believe it to be without an equal." For Colic and Scours it acts like magic.

Seeming Intoxication.

In no class of people does heredity do a more disastrous work than in the descendants of drinkers, whether excessive or moderate. A morbid appetite for liquor in such cases, with the disadvantage of an inherited nerve degeneration, may manifest itself in many terrible forms. Among these many forms are the ordinary symptoms of intoxication in a person perfectly temperate.

Dr. Crothers, of Hartford, Conn., presents many such cases in a paper read before the American Association for the Cure of Inebriates, and published in the Alienist and Neurologist.

The first cases that attracted his attention were two boys, sons of drunkards, in the Hartford Deaf and Dumb Asylum, who had shown clear signs of intoxication from their birth. He was afterward surprised to find such cases not uncommon. In some persons the symptoms are present all the time, either appearing at birth, or slowly developing with the growth of the child. Most of such cases show other marked indications of physical degeneration—as idiocy, imbecility, or bodily deformity.

In a second class of cases, almost any excitement is sufficient to bring on an attack. This class may include persons of average intellect, and even of genius. In them the neurotic (nerve) degeneration may, at a later date, end in imbecility or insanity. A farmer, fifty-four years old, a man of wealth and character, whose father was a drunkard, but who himself never used any kind of spirits, showed symptoms of intoxication after meeting with an accident from a runaway horse. At the funeral of a child, some months later, his family were greatly mortified at his silly language, staggering gait, and other marked symptoms of intoxication. A year later a similar attack followed the burning of some buildings on his farm.

There are similar cases in which the nerve degeneration is due, not to heredity, but to early habits of intoxication. A noted temperance lecturer, a total abstainer for ten years or more, received while lecturing a dispatch announcing the fatal illness of his daughter. He drank a glass of water, became confused, staggered, and was led from the stage laughing and shouting in a maudlin way. He had drank no spirits, but the audience supposed him intoxicated.—Exchange.

RELIGION—FAST AND LOOSE.—There is an opinion entertained by many who are not pessimists, that the religion of many in the present day is not so deep, tenacious and abiding as that which possessed the professors of former generations. Whatever ground there may be for this view of the case, it is certain that there is a great laxity in the practice of church members, and a sad decrease often in the number of those who unite with the church and continue faithful in their attendance on the sanctuary and in their manifestation of practical piety. How many young people, too, are often diligent in the discharge of the duties as pupils in the Sabbath-school or in the Bible class, until they arrive at what has been called "years of discretion," and then their love for spiritual things waxes cold, their diligence relaxes and they are ultimately absorbed in the world. The restraints of religion do not seem as binding as they once were, the doctrines of the cross do not become so imbedded in the intellect and heart, and the surges of worldliness consequently obliterate the serious impressions. Here certainly is a great work for all who would stem the tide of fashion, frivolity and worldly mindedness—not only to secure pupils for the Bible class and members for the church, but to keep them garnered, housed carefully and skillfully in the courts of the Lord, until they become established in the faith, active in piety, and growing as the cedars in Lebanon.—Pulpit Treasury.

Many a man has never even begun to learn the alphabet of a mother's love until he was taken sick, or lost his property, or was forsaken by his friends, or was in some sort of trouble; then, beholding the constancy of his mother's affection for him, he began to pick out the letters, and for the first time in his life spell the word "love."—Rev. G. R. Robbins.

Coughs and colds come unbidden, but you can quickly get rid of these with a few doses of Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm.

CHRISTIAN GIVING.—O that men would accept the testimony of Christ touching the blessedness of giving! He who sacrifices most, loves most; and he who loves most, is most blessed. Love and sacrifice are related to each other like seed and fruit; each produces the other. The seed of sacrifice brings forth the fragrant fruit of love, and love always has in its heart the seeds of new sacrifice. He who gives but a part, is not made perfect in love. Love rejoices to give all; it does not measure its sacrifice. It was Judas, not Mary, who calculated the value of the alabaster box of ointment. He who is infinitely blessed, is the Infinite Giver; and man, made in His likeness, was intended to find his highest blessedness in the completest self-giving. He who receives, but does not give, is like the Dead Sea. All the fresh floods of Jordan can not sweeten its dead, salt depths. So all the streams of God's bounty can not sweeten a heart that has no outlet; is ever receiving, yet never full and overflowing.

If those whose horizon is as narrow as the bushel under which they hide their light could be induced to come out into a large place and take a worthy view of the kingdom of Christ, and of their relations to it; if they could be persuaded to make the principle of Christian giving regnant in their life, their happiness would be increased as much as their usefulness.—Rev. Josiah Strong.

TAKING A SPIRITUAL INVENTORY.—Occasional retirement, self-inquiry, meditation and secret communion with God are absolutely essential to spiritual health. The man who neglects them is in great danger of a fall. To be always preaching, teaching, speaking and working public works is unquestionably a sign of zeal not according to knowledge. It often leads to untoward consequences. We must take time for sitting down and calmly looking within and examining how matters stand between our souls and Christ. The omission of this practice is the true account of many a backsliding which shocks the church and gives occasion to the world to blaspheme. Many could say, in the words of the Canticles, "They made me a keeper of the vineyards, but my own vineyard have I not kept."—J. C. Ryle.

I have tried it. It is all that is claimed for it, and more. Every hard worker should take it and let quack medicines and liquors alone.—Hon. Robt. Ogden.

THE LAST RECORD.—Josiah Quincy, formerly president of Harvard College, lived to be ninety-two years of age. He had kept a journal for many years. He was accustomed to sit in the morning in a large chair with a broad arm to it, which served as a desk, upon which he wrote his diary. July 1, 1864, he sat down in his chair as usual. His daughter brought his journal. He at first declined to undertake his wonted task, but his daughter urged him not to abandon it. He took the book, and wrote the first verse of that grateful hymn of Addison:

"When all thy mercies, O my God,
My rising soul surveys,
Transported by the view, I'm lost
In wonder, love and praise."

The weary head dropped upon the bosom. The volume was ended. The soul had fled.—Presbyterian.

Besides those common to all men, ministers have their peculiar temptations. The ambition to be popular for popularity's own sake is one of the most common and fatal. It is a Delilah in whose lap many a strong man has been shorn of his strength. Akin to this is the ambition to say sharp things and smart things, and be amusing. But the minister of the gospel is not a peddler nor a showman, to display wares and exhibit curiosities. Another, and not unlike the former, is envy and jealousy, on account of the popularity of others. "But thou, O man of God, flee these things and follow after love, patience and meekness; fight the good fight of faith whereunto thou art called."—Western Christian Advocate.

One Experience of Many.
Having experienced a great deal of "Trouble;" from indigestion, so much so that I came near losing my Life!
My trouble always came after eating any food—
However light,
And digestible,
For two or three hours at a time I had to go through the most
Excruciating pains,
"And I only way I ever got"
"Relief!"
Was by throwing up all my stomach contained ! ! No one can conceive the pains that I had to go through, until
"At last!"
I was taken! "So that for three weeks I lay in bed and
Could eat nothing ! ! !
My sufferings were so that I called two doctors to give me something that would stop the pain.
Their efforts were no good to me.
At last I heard a good deal
"About your Hop Bitters!
And determined to try them."
Got a bottle—in four hours I took the contents of Five ! ! ! !
Next day I was out of bed, and have not seen a
"Stick!"
Hour, from the same cause, since.
I have recommended it to hundreds of others. You have no such "Advocate as I am."

Briefs.

The annual meeting of the Church Extension Board was large, and interesting reports from the officers have been given to the church. From these reports we present some figures, which we hope our readers will study. The amount paid and pledged by the church for church extension during the past year was $52,440; number of churches helped by the General Board, 51; amount paid them, $28,418; number of churches helped by Conference Boards, 181; amount paid them, $18,423. Total number of churches helped, 232; total amount paid them, $47,842. During three and a half years there has been loaned to churches the sum of $38,150, of which $9,548 have been returned in principal and interest. Donations amounting to $14,050 and loans amounting to $15,350 have been made to 40 churches for the ensuing year. The Woman's Department has made encouraging progress in the matter of parsonage building, and the outlook for the future is promising. This feature of our church work is becoming more prominent as our people learn that it is simply a collateral branch of the great missionary streams whose life-giving waters are finding their way into all the earth.

An exchange has this:

It is singular how few rich men in this country devote their money to public objects. Astor founded a library; Stewart built a cathedral; Vanderbilt endowed a medical college and a university; his son is building a club-house for the New York Central employees; in this city Lick founded an observatory, and Stanford is endowing a university; a few others, scattered over the country, have left memorials of their wealth in public buildings. But by far the greater number of our rich men content themselves with leaving a few thousands by their wills to hospitals or asylums and bequeath the bulk of their millions to children who would be much better off without them.

Endowment.

The following plan was adopted by the trustees of Trinity College, N. C., for raising an endowment fund for that institution. It may be that something of this sort would work good for our Centenary College:

In order to secure the endowment fund, we most earnestly recommend that a direct and persistent appeal be made, publicly and privately, to all our people in every pastoral charge—so as to reach all of our churches and Sunday-schools within the bounds of the entire Conference, in order to raise at least one hundred thousand dollars in cash if possible, or in cash, and notes payable in installments of one and two years, and that this public canvass begin the first of June, 1887, and be continued until this matter shall have been effectively brought before all our people. And that each presiding elder and pastor shall labor to bring to the front in this united effort to endow Trinity College, as many of our laymen as possible, in order to interest and arouse all our people to proper effort in behalf of this great work: provided everybody shall be at liberty to give before the first of June, to this object as much as they please.

In order to facilitate the accomplishment of this important object, a sufficient number of printed notes shall be sent to each presiding elder and pastor to be used by such of our brethren and friends as may not have the ready cash, to pay down, the amounts they are willing to donate to this endowment fund.

A Week of Self-Denial.

The following letter from Bishop Galloway, with introductory note by Dr. Kelley, the Treasurer of our Mission Board, is an elaboration and enlargement of a short note which appeared in our ADVOCATE a few weeks since. We wish all our readers to ponder it prayerfully. When we deny ourselves in order to give to the Lord's cause, we make irrefragable proof of the power of our religion upon our own hearts. This was the special point in the benevolence of the woman who gave the two mites. "She gave all her living." Our Lord's commendation of her has brought her action down to us as a model for our imitation. The Treasurer states a fact in his note which ought to humble every Southern Methodist in the dust. "A serious decrease in the contributions to the cause of missions" should send us all to our knees in confessions and supplication. Only a week or so ago, in reference to the large increase of our membership, we told our readers that "boasting was excluded," because of shortcomings; but we had no idea that those shortcomings were in the line of "serious decrease in missionary contributions." Alas! for the church that grows in numbers and decreases in missionary offerings. Here is the letter:

The following letter has been thought over, talked over, and prayed over. It was our first thought to keep it to present to the annual meeting of the Board. Two reasons caused it to be put in print before: 1. That the plan proposed may have time for mature thought before the annual meeting. 2. The serious decrease in contributions to the cause of missions, shown by the final additions at the close of our fiscal year. The question, in the light of open doors such as we have not known before, demands action of the wisest and most energetic nature. Is not the plan Christian? Is it not practical? Think, pray, act!

D. C. KELLEY,
Treasurer.

REV. D. C. KELLEY, D. D.—

MY DEAR DOCTOR: If we are willing to borrow a leaf from the book of a neighbor, I believe a plan can be devised for liquidating "our missionary debt." A happy suggestion comes to me from a little scrap of history written by the Salvation Army in England, and imitated by the New Connection Methodists. In order to discharge a debt on their treasury of £4,500, the Salvation Army authorities suggested "a week of prayer and self-denial." By this scheme the entire amount was realized, with a possible surplus. The Methodist New Connection brethren are now emulating it to rid themselves of a missionary debt. I believe it would take with us and be a grand success, if properly inaugurated and skillfully managed. There is something in it that fascinates—the idea of consecrating our self-denial to a specific purpose.

My thought is this: Let the Board of Missions adopt it in annual session, designate a week, and have the officers of the Board or other persons appointed to issue a ringing address to the connection, indorsed by the Bishops.

I believe there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Methodist families that would consecrate a lenten week to this great cause—would give their morning beefsteaks to save the souls of the heathen. Other luxuries would be denied, and the amount saved devoted to this specific object. Smokers and tobacco-chewers would use fewer cigars and plugs, and turn this amount thus realized from curtailing the daily supply to the missionary treasury. I would have every nickel stand for some real self-denial.

There is inspiration in the thought—a week of self-denial to meet an emergency in the Master's kingdom. And who can calculate the reflex blessing upon each heart? I may be oversanguine, but the conviction takes hold upon me that if cordially indorsed unanimously adopted, and enthusiastically urged by the preachers and press, the "debt" will be a precious memory before the next round of Annual Conferences. Confer with Dr. John, and if all see eye to eye in this matter, let us try it. A week of prayer and self-denial is needed anyway, in view of the gratifying statistics of the past ecclesiastical year.

With assurance of personal regard and undated interest in the cause to which you are specially officially called, I am,

Your friend and brother,
CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

BROOKHAVEN, Mississippi.
—Nashville Advocate.

At a meeting of a number of members of the Methodist Church in Vicksburg, on the twenty-second, steps were taken to build a residence there for Bishop Galloway. The material will be collected as fast as possible, and after the plans and specifications are adopted, the building will be commenced. The residence will be on the vacant lot east of and opposite the Methodist Church.

Seashore District Conference.

This Conference met last Thursday, at Ellisville, Miss. This is a thriving little town, 132 miles from New Orleans, on the Northeastern railroad. Cotton and wool are the chief staples of trade. Wool growing is claiming the attention of many persons, the country along the road being specially favorable to sheep-raising, and wool commands a good price. Lumber is abundant all along the road, and sells at a comparatively low figure. The town is new and bright with paint, and enlarging both in area and in inhabitants. The churches have entered this country with the railroad, and at almost every little town the spires of God's temples point the people the way to heaven. Our church in Ellisville is a neat little structure, and next to it is a comfortable parsonage, and on the other side a Methodist school-house. That is the way it ought to be everywhere. The parsonage and the school-house are necessary adjuncts to the church; and when our people learn this fact, they will have made an important advance movement.

The Conference was presided over by Bishop Duncan. His off-hand, brotherly talks to preachers and stewards are very fine, and must result in good all over the district. The attendance was good, though not as good as that at some other Conferences, from the fact that the district is so arranged as to make some points almost inaccessible from other points. The reports of the preachers showed that good, solid work was being done, and already the fruits of that work are beginning to appear. Parsonage building was going on in several places and church building in several other places. The preaching was well attended, Sunday-schools and prayer meetings were flourishing, and finances as well forward as usual. The ADVOCATE has a fair circulation, which was somewhat increased by special effort during the session. Dr. West, the presiding elder—like all presiding elders ought to be—is one of those who "know what Israel ought to do," and seems to be handling his forces in such a way as to make the largest advances and capture the largest territory for the Master.

The Conference elected Dr. E. G. Griffing, of Moss Point, and Hon. J. P. Carter, of Hattiesburg, trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground Association, and also passed a resolution that, in its judgment, the Seashore district did not have sufficient representation on that Board.

The editor has visited four District Conferences during this month, and he begins to believe that these Conferences can be made of great value to the church. Let the presiding elders arrange programs for mass meetings to discuss the great enterprises of the church and rally the crowds to these meetings, and good will result. There is nothing like agitation and discussion to arouse interest. What we need just now is to interest the people.

Temperance Convention.

The convention of temperance workers in this city, last week, was not as well attended as we hoped it would be. There were only a few delegates from the country. The speaking, however, was of the very first order, and commended itself to an intelligent and select audience. The first evening there were addresses from Dr. McKim, rector of Trinity Church, on "Total Abstinence;" Dr. Black, of Mississippi, on "Prohibition," and Rev. Mr. Mason, of this city, on "Prohibition, the only Remedy." The second day addresses were made by Hon. W. H. Goodale, of Baton Rouge; Hon. J. S. Wilkinson, of this city, and Rev. Mr. Lyon, of this city. The statistics and arguments of these gentlemen were like an array of bristling bayonets against the liquor traffic. Let the good work of molding public sentiment go on in this direction, and we will yet see the yoke of the saloon broken off the neck of our fair State.

A missionary in Boston (!) says that thirty languages are spoken in that city.

A Plan for Church Schools.

BY W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

At this juncture of the discussion of "Our Church Colleges," suppose we introduce a working hypothesis—a proposition that may be amended, adopted or rejected, as it may or not be of use. Let the work of education by our church be co-ordinate with other forms of work, and be under the authoritative supervision of the General Conference. Let this supervision be effected through a General Board of Education, with co-operating auxiliary Boards in the Annual Conferences. Let the components of these Boards embrace the wise and working elements of the school field. Let the schools be graded and correlated under three co-operative heads: (a) the university; (b) the college; (c) the training-school. Let the school of each grade be held to its own proper work. This work shall be fixed as nearly as practicable by the General Board. Let the organization and execution of the scheme be so regulated as to avoid conflicting rivalries between schools.

Something of this kind would reduce our school work to system, conserve our energies and multiply our efficiency. The training-school would be self-sustaining from its regular fees; the college and university would be founded and maintained mainly from gifts. Each Annual Conference could have any proper number of training-schools. Two or more such Conferences could unite upon one college. The university would be under the care of the General Board. The college would be legitimately fed from the training-school, and the university from the college. The General Board and the Board of College Trustees, acting concurrently, could fix the degrees and distinctions to be conferred by a college; or let the General Board and the university faculty, concurring, fix what marks of honor shall be conferred by each class of schools.

There are some real difficulties in the way of putting this scheme into operation; but not greater than such as beset our existing confused educational work. But I do not in this paper discuss either the advantages or the difficulties which seem to belong to what is here proposed. It is evident that there is much dissatisfaction with the existing status of our school work. The earnest and timely paper of Bishop Galloway, while possibly needing modification in some of its statements, yet, as a whole, finds response in the convictions and yearnings of very many, both in and outside the schools. I suspect that he did not mean so much to say that we have now, or have had, too many schools as too many "colleges"—not real ones, but in name and pretence. When there shall be a competent authority, whose criterion shall be applied to all the schools received under our denominational control, then only the real college shall have the name. The paramount need of the hour is the training-school, where the pupil's intellectual growth, during his tenderer and formative years, shall be conducted under legitimate mental discipline, and under such religious care as a church school is supposed to minister.

Notes from Meridian, Miss.

BY W. C. BLACK, D. D.

MR. EDITOR: Our Meridian Woman's Christian Temperance Union celebrated its second anniversary, Friday night, April 15, in the chapel of E. M. F. College. The audience exceeded the capacity of the building. The exercises were exceedingly interesting. Several items in the programme are worthy of mention; but in this brief note I can only mention one, viz.: the address of Mrs. M. M. Snell, of Columbus, editress of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Department of the Sword and Shield. Mrs. Snell was in Meridian from Friday morning until Tuesday morning. During that time she delivered six addresses—two of them to the colored people. Mrs. Snell is a large-brained, highly cultured Christian woman, with rare gifts as a public speaker. Her utterances have the ring of the gospel. Her soul is on fire with love to God and man. Her perfect self-possession, her calm, dignified, womanly bearing, her chaste, lofty, elegant diction, her evident consecration, and her gentle persuasiveness, make her a most effective worker in the great cause. A visit of a few days from her would be a benediction to any community. I say "a few days," because she grows upon you the more frequently you listen to her.

Our saloons have closed except the beer shops. Of course, we have not a fair test of prohibition until these close also. But this much is evident: The predicted ruin has not come. Property is still high. Small grocers have a much better Saturday evening's trade than formerly. We have commenced a fight for the enforcement of law. The Mann Boudoir Car Company has been recently carrying on a lively trade in grog. When the train on the N. O. and N. E. R. R. would get to West End, the thirsty would get aboard and slake their thirst between that point and the depot, one mile distant. Last Saturday a colored porter of this company was tried before Justice Henderson on charges preferred by the Meridian Temperance Reform Club. As the process of guilt were incontestable, the culprit confessed, and was fined and imprisoned. Moreover, the Mann Boudoir Car Company, through its attorney, made a pledge that no such acts of lawlessness should occur again. This shows that the Meridian Reform Club intends that prohibition shall prohibit in Meridian, whether it does in Maine or not.

On June 8 we will celebrate the anniversary of our victory with appropriate exercises. We expect thousands to be present from all parts of the country. Our church moves on smoothly. We have had thirty-eight accessions since Conference.

The total number of churches in Japan is now 193, and of this number 64 are self-supporting. The additions during 1886 were 4,125, and the present membership is 14,815. There are also 4,805 scholars in various schools, and 169 are pursuing the study of theology. The total contributions for the year were $26,866. The increase in 1886 was 3,137 members, and $2,721 in contributions. There have also been 426 baptized during the month of January, 1887. In many parts of Japan there is an especial awakening, and large numbers are inquiring in regard to the way of salvation. This is particularly true in the province of Tosa, where the work, begun in November, 1884, has resulted in a church of 194 members; and the desire to hear the gospel is so great that it is impossible to meet all the demands.

Notes.

Last fall two young men from Princeton went on a tour visiting various colleges to beat up recruits for the foreign mission work. They have visited 9 colleges, and no fewer than 1,525 persons have offered themselves. Of these 1,200 are young men and 300 are young women. Thus the Lord is calling the laborers, and the question for the church is, Will she supply the means to send them out? Would the Lord call these people if the church was not able to send them?

While attending the District Conference at Brookhaven, Miss., this fact came to our knowledge: There is a Baptist Church in Crystal Springs, Miss., which last year contributed for the education of young ministers more money than was contributed in the same time for the same purpose by the 30,000 Methodists of the Mississippi Conference. It is now in order for those same Methodists to appoint a day of fasting and prayer that the Lord may give them "grace enough to be ashamed of themselves." The church that don't educate her ministers as well as they can be educated will soon be out of hearing of even a resurrection trumpet.

There is nothing more certain than that the triumph of prohibition is merely a question of time, and that a very short time. The colleges of this country have entered the lists and are enrolling themselves as members of "The National Inter-Collegiate Prohibition Association." The object of this association is to "promote the co-operation and activity of the temperance men of the colleges and professional schools of the United States, and to enlist the young manhood of the country in the defense of our homes and free institutions against the devastations of the rum power." At the first meeting of the association in Cleveland, Ohio, last January, there were sixty-one delegates representing eleven States and forty institutions. Twenty-nine other institutions were represented by letters and telegrams. So the influence is broadening and the work deepening in every direction. "The crowning day is coming." Postera, quia posse videntur, said a heathen poet.

The West End Mission of the London Wesleyans is attracting the attention of the Methodists all over the world. The appointment of two such men as Hugh Price Hughes and Mark Guy Pearse to conduct the work shows the estimate the Wesleyan Conference puts upon the value of this mission. The committee in charge of the matter have determined to begin work in the neighborhood of St. James' Hall, one of the most populous parts of the great city. The Methodist Times, of London, regards this West End Mission as "the great opportunity" which God has given to modern British Methodism," and says: "If we fail now, when the eyes of all men are upon us, British Methodism is doomed. The young, the ardent, the educated, the Christ-like will take themselves off to the Church of England on the one hand or to the Salvation Army on the other. If we fail to attack the stronghold of sin in the West End of London, they will conclude that British Methodism has lost the spirit of John Wesley, has sold its birthright for a mess of pottage and has no future."

We are not the author of the following lines, but we give them our hearty endorsement—especially the two last, or the last two (which is it?):

"There is a man in our town, and he is wondrous wise;
Whenever he writes the printer-man, he dotteth all his I's.
And when he's dotted all of them, with great 'sang froid' and ease,
He punctuates each paragraph, and crosses all his t's.
Upon one side alone he writes, and never rolls his leaves;
And from the man of ink a smile, and mark 'insert' receives.
And when a question he doth ask (taught wisely he has been)
He doth the goodly two-cent stamp, for postage back, put in."

We notice that there is a disposition and effort on the part of writers, who give accounts of revival meetings, etc., to improve on the "words which the Holy Ghost teacheth," when describing the ministers and their preaching. There is a disposition to indulge in much praise, and sometimes this exhibits the preacher in a ridiculous light. If we had published all that has come to this office about our preachers, some of them would have "taken to the woods" long ago. Judicious words of encouragement are good for the soul of an humble minister; but this blazing abroad of empty compliments is a harmful thing. The Holy Ghost has anticipated all that ought to be said; all that any meek man can desire. Let us all acquiesce in His estimate of the ministers: "They are the glory of Christ and the messengers of the churches."

Notice.

The Brandon District Conference will meet on Thursday, June 2, instead of May 26.

Personals.

Prof. J. W. Nicholson, of the State University at Baton Rouge, has been elected president pro tem of that institution.

Senator Reagan, of Texas, is in favor of prohibition.

Kwang Su, the present Emperor of China, who began nominally to reign in 1875, came to his majority February 7, when his mother resigned the throne in his favor.

Rev. James Jones, a superannuate of the Georgia Conference, died at White Sulphur Springs, Ga., April 6, full of years and good works.

Rev. John F. Crowell, a graduate of distinction from Yale University, a man thirty years of age, has been elected president of Trinity College, North Carolina.

John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, has introduced profit-sharing into his establishment. He has 4,500 employees.

Gen. Thomas W. Conway, once State Superintendent of Education for Louisiana, died in Brooklyn, a few weeks ago.

Rev. Edward G. Taylor, D. D., at one time pastor of Coliseum Place Baptist Church, in this city, died recently in Buffalo. He was the author of several gospel hymns.

There are seventeen Japanese students in the Michigan University at Ann Arbor.

Twelve missionaries sailed from New York, last week, for the Congo country, where they will join Bishop Taylor's Colony, in Central Africa.

Twenty-two persons were converted at the revival meeting in St. Charles Avenue Church, last week. Dr. Evans is continuing the services during the present week.

The editor left on the twenty-fifth for Nashville to attend the meeting of the Hymn Book Revision Committee, and will be absent from the office several days. Correspondents must be patient with the pro tem.

Charles Briscoe Carter, son of the editor, and John Frederick Foster, son of W. H. Foster, Esq., of this city, were licensed to preach last Monday evening by the Felicity Street Quarterly Conference. This church, though houseless, continues its good work.

The Alabama Christian Advocate comes in its new form this week. It is now an eight-page paper, filled with choice matter, which is easy to read because of the clear type. Our brethren over there will please accept our congratulations. We are pained to learn of the severe illness of Dr. Rush, and hope for his speedy recovery.

Mr. Francis Murphy has been nine weeks engaged in gospel temperance work in Chicago, speaking twice a day in Farwell Hall. Twelve thousand persons, it is said, have signed the pledge.

Miss Alice E. Freeman, president of Wellesley College, was made "doctor of letters," and Miss Maria Mitchell, astronomer in Vassar College, was made doctor of laws, at the last centennial celebration of Columbia College, New York.

Mrs. Fred Vanderbilt's special benevolence is a sewing-school for poor girls. She maintains a house and a corps of competent needlewomen, who fit poor girls for domestic service or shopwork.

The Wesleyan Society of the Dryades Street Methodist Church will give a sociable at the church, next Friday evening, for the benefit of the parsonage. Music, recitations and refreshments. Admission, ten cents.

Bishop Duncan passed through the city Tuesday en route from Ellisville to Greenville, Miss., where he holds the District Conference. From thence he goes to Nashville to attend the meeting of the Board of Missions, to be held on the sixth of May.

State Sunday-School Convention.

The State Sunday-school Convention will meet in Jackson, Miss., on May 3 and 4, 1887. In order to obtain the benefit of reduced rates on the railways, persons intending to be present must send in their names at once, so that the necessary certificate can be sent to them. The Committee on Hospitality also wish the names of all intending to be present.

JOHN T. BUCK,
Chair'n Executive Com.
JACKSON, Mississippi.

The forty-first anniversary of the New Orleans District Sunday-schools will be celebrated next Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, at Carondelet Street Methodist Church. A cordial invitation to attend is extended to everyone.

PHILIP WERLEIN,
President.

Parsonages for Indian Territory.

There is gratifying growth in our church in Indian Territory and an increasing demand for missionaries; but our progress is hindered by the lack of comfortable homes for our brethren already in the field who labor on small salaries, out of which they pay a large per cent. for "hired houses." It would greatly relieve the Board of Missions and add efficiency to the work if these parsonages could be procured.

The Indians are not only a heathen people in the center of a Christian country, but have a peculiar and well-known claim upon American Christians. We have taken from them their homes, their hopes, treating them more like wild beasts than human beings, and now wholly predict for them annihilation. Shall we also quietly resign them to eternal death? "A ruined people, they appeal to us for the Word of life. Shall we refuse it? Shall we not at least aid in procuring homes for those who are giving their lives to a work that is our's as well as their's? If we can render this assistance, the Board of Missions will be freer to send missionaries—as it sees the urgent need of doing at this time—to other parts of the Territory to rescue those poor souls dying without hope. Let every reader of this call forward a contribution for this purpose to Rev. David Morton, 520 West Chestnut, Louisville, Ky.

BOOKS.

PULPIT TREES AND HOMILETIC UNDERGROWTH, being Discourses, Sermonic Saplings, Outlines and Germs, by Rev. Thomas Kelly, of Philadelphia. Publishers, Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

There are some good sermons in this book, and some excellent outlines; but here and there we find words and expressions which are not at all after our taste. Our opinion is that a preacher should clothe his thoughts in the clearest and purest words.

THE EUREKA COLLECTIONS OF RECITATIONS AND READINGS. Compiled by Mrs. Anna B. Diehl. Publishers, J. S. Ogilvie & Co., New York. Price, twelve cents in stamps.

This is No. 9 of the series, and contains about 100 selections: Prose and Poetry, Serious, Humorous, Pathetic, Comic, Temperance and Patriotic.

THE BIBLE-WORK. The Old Testament. Vol. I. Genesis to Exodus xii. By A. Glentworth Butler, D. D. Publishers, Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

In this account, which takes us from Creation to the Exodus, the revised text is arranged in sections, with comments selected from the helpful thought of the centuries past. The first ten sections of this work, being introductory and preliminary, are exceedingly valuable. In the preparation of the work, four hundred scholarly authors have been diligently consulted and freely used. The work is well worth attention by all students of Scripture.

NATURAL LAW IN THE BUSINESS WORLD. By Henry Wood. Publishers, Lee & Shepard, Boston.

In this book the light of natural law is applied to the live topics that are attracting so much attention. The book aims to expose the evils which parade under the banner of labor, and the bad results of class prejudice. The author claims no original theories in political economy, but presents the various topics, which come under that head, in a readable way. This little book will be interesting reading to all who think on the prominent topics of the day.

THE NEW PSYCHIC STUDIES IN THEIR RELATION TO CHRISTIAN THOUGHT. By Franklin Johnson, D. D. Publishers, Funk & Wagnalls, New York.

This subject is becoming more prominent every day. The author briefly treats thought transference, somnambulism, mesmerism, clairvoyance, spiritualism, faith cure, etc. He follows the steps of the British Society for physical research through its fields of investigation, and says the Christian has no cause to regret the work done by that society. The subject is one of intense interest, and the little book will have many eager readers.

A SIMPLE HEART. By S. B. Elliot. Publisher, John Ireland, New York. Price, thirty cents.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor fatly. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and ailments. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes rejecting food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy; therefore parents—especially mothers who are more familiarly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Every mother must be used by every purchaser to be its own judge in the sense of, still to examine every bottle she buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and he satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, Howard Co., Mo.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.:

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. V. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

Our Young People.

A DISASTROUS RIDE.

BY CATHERINE S. HOLMES.

Some little Drops of Water
Whose home was in the sea,
To go upon a journey
Once happened to agree.

A cloud they had for carriage,
They drove a playful breeze,
And over town and country
They rode along at ease.

But oh! there were so many
At last the carriage broke,
And to the ground came tumbling
These frightened little folks.

And through the moss and grasses,
They were compelled to roam,
Until a brooklet found them
And carried them all home.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy twelve years old; and, seeing other boys and girls writing to the ADVOCATE, and never having written a letter myself, I thought I would write a letter, hoping you will give it space in the ADVOCATE. I am a member of the Methodist Church, and I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Mrs. Ramsey is my teacher, and I like her very much. She has offered a prize to any of her class who will not miss a Sunday during the year, and I am very anxious to gain the prize. I am not very good on puzzles; but I wish to say something about Annie L. Wilson's puzzle about the hogs. As the puzzle can not be worked out by figures, I think there is a catch in it. I will make a guess at the catch. I would make four killings, killing seven at a time for the first three killings. I would then kill three of the four left, and turn the other loose. This would make four killings. Wishing to hear from others, I will close.

J. S. ANDERSON.

MERIDIAN, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: We have been taking this dear paper, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, for a great many years. It has been in the family as long as I can remember, and longer, too. My father is a preacher. He had to go a distance of six or eight miles out in the country today to preach. The ADVOCATE makes us a weekly visit; but, sure enough, its editor made us a visit himself. We appreciated it very much indeed. I will answer one of the questions in the paper, which was asked by little Lorena Smith. There were seven of the golden candlesticks; and John wrote of them in Revelation. Now, I will ask this question: Where in the Bible is the word "chicken" found? With best wishes to the dear old paper, I am still,

Your little friend,

JENNIE NEWELL.

MR. EDITOR: Have you room in your column for another little cousin? If so, I would be very glad to join your little crowd which write to the ADVOCATE. I have a sweet little brother. His name is Willie, and he is three years old. He has a pet dog named Plunder. I belong to the Methodist Protestant Church. We have a very nice Sunday-school. Rev. F. Q. Bacchus is our pastor. Hoping to see this in print, as it is my first attempt to write, I will close by asking, How many times in the Bible is "reverend" found?

You friend,

IDELLA W. MINNER.

HARRINGTON, Delaware.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy ten years old. I have two brothers and one little sister. Both of my brothers have written to the ADVOCATE: As this is my first attempt, I will not write a long letter. I do not go to school. Clara Brown, Methuselah lived to be nine hundred and sixty-nine years old. Laura King, Methuselah died before his father. Amanda Hollingsworth, Moses was buried by the Lord on the top of Pisgah. Now, I will ask a question: Where in the Bible is the word "money" found?

Your little friend,

EUHA MARSHALL.

CARROLLTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first attempt to write, and I hope I will see it in print. We take your valuable paper, and like to read it very much. I am going to school in Richland, and have six studies. I also go to Sunday-school and preaching there. We are having beautiful spring weather, and the farmers are busy planting their crops. Rev. T. D. Cameron is our pastor. We like him very much. With best wishes to the ADVOCATE, I am, Your friend,

SAMUEL J. CARTER.

GOODMAN, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first letter to the ADVOCATE. Papa takes your paper, and I like to read the little folks' letters very much. Mr. Howard is our pastor this year, and we all like him very much. I will answer Rhoda Bush's question: There were four anchors cast out when St. Paul was shipwrecked. (Acts xxvii, 29.) Now, I will ask the little cousins a question: How old was Eli when he died, and how did he die? Hoping to see this in print, I remain,

Your little friend,

WILLIE HATFIELD.

WILKINSON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I saw in your advertisement of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE that the one who gave the longest verse in the Bible was entitled to a prize. I think the longest verse is in the book of Esther—chapter eight, and ninth verse.

Yours respectfully,

LILLIE HAIR.

RAYNE, Louisiana.

WHAT A BOY ACCOMPLISHED.—A boy who attends one of our Sunday-schools went out in the country the past summer to spend his vacation—a visit he had long looked forward to with pleasure. He went out to help the men harvest. One of the men was an inveterate swearer. The boy, having stood it as long as he could, said to the man:

"Well, I guess I will go home to-morrow."

The swearer, who had taken a great liking to him, said:

"I thought you were going to stay all summer?"

"I was," said the boy, "but I can't stay where anybody swears so; one of us must go, so I will leave."

The man felt the rebuke, and he said:

"If you will stay, I won't swear;" and he kept his word.

Boys, take a bold stand for the right; throw your influence on the side of Christ, and you will sow seed, the harvest of which you will reap both in this world and that which is to come.

THE END OF A DOG'S QUARREL.—One day a fine Newfoundland dog and a mastiff had a sharp discussion over a bone, and warred away as angrily as two boys. They were fighting on a bridge; and the first they knew, over they went into the water. The banks were so high that they were forced to swim some distance before they came to a landing-place. It was very easy for the Newfoundlander; he was as much at home in the water as a seal. But not so poor Bruce; he struggled and tried to swim, but made little headway. The Newfoundland dog quickly reached the land, and then turned to look at his old enemy. He saw plainly that his strength was fast failing, and that he was likely to drown. So what should the noble fellow do but plunge in, seize him gently by the collar, and, keeping his nose above water, tow him safely into port! It was funny to see these dogs look at each other as they shook their wet coats. Their glance said as plainly as words, "We'll never quarrel any more."

BETTER THAN GOLD.—"I will give that to the missionaries," said little Billy; and he put his fat little hand on a tiny gold dollar, as he counted the contents of his money-box.

"Why?" Susie asked.

"'Cause it's gold. Don't you know the wise men brought Jesus gold? And missionaries work for Jesus."

Susie said: "The gold all belongs to him, anyhow. Don't you think it would be better to go right to him and give him what he asks for?"

"What's that?"

Susie repeated: "'My son, give me thine heart.'"—Presbyterian.

Standing on the top of the Cheviot Hills, a little son's hand closed in his, a father taught the measure of the measureless love of God. Pointing northward over Scotland, then southward over England, then eastward over the German Ocean, then westward over the weltering limitless hill and dale, and then sweeping his hand and his eye round the whole circling horizon, he said, "Johnny, my boy, God's love is as big as all that!"

"Why, father," the boy cheerily replied, with sparkling eyes, "then we must be in the very middle of it!"

If all around him, the earth and the sky, was the love of God, he was in the very middle of it. And it was to make children grow up with the feeling that they were "in the very middle" of the love of God, that Moses wrote his creation story.—Sunday Magazine.

Cure for Hog Cholera.

While in the country last week we learned that this dreaded disease was making ravages among the swine, and so we give our readers the following that they may try it and see if there is any virtue in it:

"I read with interest all the letters I see in your excellent paper in reference to hog cholera. Having suffered dreadfully, owing to this terrible disease among my hogs, I sought out a simple remedy which has acted like a charm for me, and I send it herein, hoping some of my brother farmers may be benefited thereby. To one pint of kerosene oil put a half-pint of spirits of turpentine and two ounces of gum camphor. Shake this up together until the camphor is dissolved. Then pour the mixture over your shattered corn, stirring it up so that some will get on all of it; then throw out to the hogs. I found my hogs would eat this in preference to corn without it, and I have never had a single case since I commenced this remedy. I had several sick hogs with cholera when I commenced giving them the above, and all but one recovered in less than a week. I had a very fine sow sick at the time, and had given her a dose by making it into a ball of dough and shoving it down her throat, she being too sick to eat. The next morning I gave my son a ball of this, and told him to take one of the hands and go down to where I had left her the evening before, and if she was alive, to put it down her throat. He soon came back, and said: 'Pa, if you want me to catch that old sow, I'll want more help than you gave me, for she's as wild as a buck.' In a few moments she came up in a trot, and commenced feeding with the other hogs.

"I have great faith in this simple remedy, and advise my brother farmers to try it. It costs but a trifle."—R. A. Penick, in Richmond Dispatch.

Harmony at Home.

1. We may be quite sure that our will is likely to be crossed during the day; so let us prepare for it.

2. Every person in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and, therefore, we must not expect too much.

3. Look upon each member of the family as one for whom Christ died.

4. When inclined to give an angry answer, let us lift up the heart in prayer.

5. If from sickness, pain or infirmity, we feel irritable, let us keep a very strict watch over ourselves.

6. Observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness.

7. Watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and put little annoyances out of the way.

8. Take a cheerful view of everything, and encourage hope.

9. Speak kindly to dependents and servants, and praise them when you can.

10. In all little pleasures which may occur, put self last.

11. Try for the soft answer that turneth away wrath.—Congregationalist.

JOHNNY CAKES.—One quart of corn meal, two teaspoonfuls of salt, and milk enough to make a stiff batter. Shape the cakes in the hand, making them an inch thick; bake on a griddle; they should be quite brown when done. Split them open and lay a lump of butter inside. Serve hot.

MISCELLANEOUS.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles,

which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOSTER—MRS. TENNIE ELIZABETH FOSTER (nee Drexler) was called away from all earthly things by the death angel, on March 24, 1887, at the residence of her brother, H. C. Drexler, near Rocky Springs, Miss. She was born March 15, 1852, and was united in marriage to Columbus Foster, April 2, 1876.

Parting with friends is always sorrowful; but doubly sad and mournful to have the fond mother taken from the bosom of her family and the loving hearts of brothers and sisters who idolized her. But a few fleeting years agone, God, in his mysterious providence, removed from this mother's love, near the same time, two children—precious, tender buds of promise, to brighten for awhile her pathway here—and transplanted them to bloom forever in the fadeless bowers of Eden. And such was her gentle, delicate nature, it seems she never fully recovered from the shock. Since then her health has been failing, fading; just as the lovely flowerets droop and die ere the golden spring is quite gone. Her last illness was long continued and painful—of many months' duration—yet she realized her condition, and was not afraid even when her feet were in Jordan's cold stream. She was perfectly conscious, and her trust in the Savior was firm and unwavering to the last. All was done that could be done to alleviate her suffering and drive back the fell destroyer. She leaves a husband, three interesting little girls, two sisters, two brothers, and a large circle of warm friends who loved her, to weep over her early tomb. They covered her with beautiful, fragrant white roses—fit emblems of her purity and goodness here below. We feel that earth is poorer and heaven is richer that she is gone. The immortal spirit is at rest in the glorious heavenly land above. L. H. D.

Port Gibson, Miss., papers please copy.

EVANS—MARY ANN, wife of F. A. Evans, was born July 11, 1840; was married to F. A. Evans, in 1856; joined the Methodist Church soon after.

Her life was one of devotion and self-sacrifice until the Master called her from labor to reward, March 3, 1887. Her life was pure; in death she was triumphant. She leaves her husband and three children on this shie the river to mourn her departure, while she greets eight children that had gone on before. Sister Evans was an excellent altar worker. She had stored her mind with the gracious promises of the blessed Savior. Thus she was prepared to administer words of comfort in season; and not a few will hail her as the instrument in bringing them to that peace which passeth all understanding. So, as she was abundant in labors, her reward is glorious. E. H. ROOK.

WORTHY—WILLIAM WORTHY was born in Lincoln county, Ga., September 24, 1796, and died March 11, 1887, age ninety years, five months and seventeen days. He moved with his parents to Mississippi, 1805; joined the Methodist Church, 1812; was an active member of the church for seventy-five years; was happily married to Miss Annie E. Langston, March 6, 1823.

His descendants at the time of his death were 117. His aged wife, who had stood by his side from early youth, still lives to mourn her loss. As a neighbor and citizen, he was upright, conscientious and faithful in the discharge of every duty; and this, combined with his sweet disposition, won for him the esteem and love of all who knew him. Such was his Christian life, until his influence was precious ointment poured forth. It was my privilege to be with him a few days before his death, and it was a feast to my soul to hear the holy man of God talk of the many victories he had won through Christ. At the time of his conversion and joining the church, neither of his parents were religious; but so thorough was his conversion, and so deep his convictions of duty, that he asked permission to hold family prayer in his father's house, and this was granted, and he took up the cross at the age of sixteen; and God blessed his labors to the conversion of both his parents. He held many offices in the church—all to the satisfaction and comfort of his brethren. He was able in prayer, a good worker in revival meeting, a warm friend to all preachers, and his home was for many years a resting-place for the weary itinerant; and many greetings awaited him as he entered the city of God, not only by loved ones, but by many of the servants of God whom he had cheered on by his wise counsel. When nearing his end, his wife said to him, "You will soon be with Jesus." He answered, "I know it;" and quietly fell asleep in Jesus. Thus passed from our midst a noble citizen, a good neighbor, a devoted husband, a kind father, and one who had been a faithful Christian for seventy-five years. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!"

W. W. SIMMONS.

PRICE—CHARLIE W., infant son of the Rev. Thomas and Mrs. L. M. Price, was born March 20, 1886, and departed this life, at the Seashore Camp Ground, April 6, 1887.

After an appropriate service was held, his little remains were deposited in the Biloxi Cemetery, April 8, 1887, at half-past ten o'clock. Nothing more fitting can be said than that which I copy from a note from the bereaved father: "God has transplanted a sweet flower to bloom in an infinitely more congenial clime. He was gentle and winning in his disposition, and endeared himself to all by his lovable manners." May the Lord bless this sad dispensation to the good of the sorrowing parents!

G. F. THOMPSON.

Humanity not Christianity.

"That man has given more to the poor than any man in the town; now that's what I call being a noble Christian," is the remark a friend made a few days ago. This is also a sample of the opinion of quite a large class of people; they hold that because a man is benevolent he must naturally be a Christian, but this does not necessarily follow. A man may love the poor, sympathize with those in distress, and in the fullness of his heart relieve the wants of the pauper, and yet not be a Christian. He gives for humanity's sake, while the Christian gives only for Christ's sake. Humanity must not be mistaken for Christianity. Many noted highwaymen have given largely to the poor out of what they robbed from the rich. That they possessed humanity no one will doubt, but there was not a particle of Christianity about them. The virtue in humanity's gift lies in the amount given, but the test in Christianity's gift lies in the amount that's left behind; and while humanity rejoices in having given so much, Christianity will weep because she has no more to give. The gift for humanity's sake is good, but to give for Christ's sake is better. The Pharisee who ostentatiously cast in of his abundance pales into insignificance before the poor widow who cast in her all.

Says Christ: "For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always." Christ first, the poor afterward. Had Mary given the money to the poor she would have done well, but in that she gave to Christ she did better. Had she given for humanity's sake, three hundred souls would each have the temporal satisfaction of a penny-worth of bread; but in that she did it for Christ's sake, millions have been cheered and encouraged while reading of her devotion and tenderness to Christ. This is all expressed by Paul in a single sentence: "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, * * * and have not charity, I am nothing." To feed the poor is humanity, but charity is Christianity. Humanity is transitory, and passes away. Christianity is eternal, and, like a river, is continually fed by countless tiny tributaries that, however small and powerless in themselves, all combine to form one golden current that flows into a far more exceeding and eternal sea of glory.—Frank Hope.

If you are suffering from Malaria in any form, ask any druggist who has sold Shulienberger's Antidote what he knows of the medicine. Ignorance in regard to its wonderful power over all malarious disease, is the only possible reason why it is not in universal use, because it never fails to cure, never injures the system, and strikes directly at the cause of suffering. SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

DYSPEPSIA.

Up to a few weeks ago I considered myself the champion Dyspeptic of America. During the years that I have been afflicted I have tried almost everything claimed to be a specific for Dyspepsia in the hope of finding something that would afford permanent relief. I had about made up my mind to abandon all medicines when I noticed an endorsement of Simmons Liver Regulator by a prominent Georgian, a jurist whom I knew, and concluded to try its effects in my case. I have used but two bottles, and am satisfied that I have struck the right thing at last. I felt its beneficial effects almost immediately. Unlike all other preparations of a similar kind, no special instructions are required as to what one shall or shall not eat. This fact alone ought to commend it to all troubled with Dyspepsia.

Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

News Summary.

APRIL 19.

The Pall Mall Gazette, speaking of the charges that the Times makes against Mr. Parnell, and in regard to the letter it publishes purporting to be from Mr. Parnell's hand, says: "Mr. Parnell is an Irishman; therefore, the Times is allowed to insult and libel him with impunity. We earnestly appeal to the members of the House of Commons on both sides to do Mr. Parnell justice, and commit the editor of the Times to the Clock Tower for a breach of privilege."——Primrose Day, the anniversary of the death of Lord Beaconsfield, was generally observed by the Conservatives.——An attempt was made to assassinate Ex-Marshal Bazaine in Madrid. The assassin was jailed.——Surgeon General Hamilton considers the cause of alarm of cholera from Chili to be passed, owing to the change of weather in Chili.——Mosley, of Massachusetts, was elected Secretary of the Interstate Commission.

APRIL 20.

John Morley, in a speech at Wolverhampton, to-day, said that until the Times proved the genuineness and authenticity of the letter it attributes to Mr. Parnell, he would accept Mr. Parnell's denial.——Some of the Liberals desire to have Parliament issue a summons to the editor of the Times, calling him before the bar of the House to answer for breach of privilege in accusing Mr. Parnell and others of complicity in crime, or that Mr. Gladstone propose the appointment of a committee to examine the Times' charges.——The Reichstag reopened yesterday.——Pere Hyacinth is seriously ill in Paris.——The Crown Prince Frederick William is now stated to be suffering from chronic catarrh of the throat.——Cherif Pacha, formerly Prime Minister of Egypt, is dead.——The Queen of Hawaii is in San Francisco, en route to Europe.——Lieut. Danenhower, of Arctic fame, committed suicide at Anapolis this morning; mental derangement, cause assigned.

APRIL 21.

A French commissary was arrested by the German police and taken to Metz. The Parisian Press await an explanation before commenting on the affair.——There is great activity in military circles throughout the German Empire. The government explains it by the approach of the time set for the spring drills.——The manufacturers of France are joining in a petition to the government to have the International Exhibition postponed to a more favorable date than that of 1889.——Russia has issued a 4 per cent. internal loan amounting to 100,000,000 roubles, at 8 per cent.——Reports of slight earthquake shocks continue to come from Mexico.——A resolution was introduced in the Nova Scotia Legislature in regard to separation from Canada, in which it is stated that should the effort being made to place the province on a sound commercial basis be a failure, the whole matter should be submitted to the people with a view of obtaining a repeal of the Union, and asking the government of the United States to admit Nova Scotia as a State of the Union, which is no doubt our commercial destination.

APRIL 22.

The constitutional amendment passed the Mexican House of Deputies by a vote of 134 to 10. This allows one re-election of a President—that is, two successive terms.——The Czar has abandoned his intention of spending two weeks in St. Petersburg and returned to Gatschina.——It is probable that Mgr. Kapelle will be appointed Papal Secretary of State.——The Dominion Alliance has decided that a bill be introduced in the Dominion Parliament providing for total prohibition.——The War Department has ordered the removal to Mount Vernon, Ala., of the Apaches now confined at Fort Marion, Fla.——Prescott, Kansas, was literally wiped out of existence to-night by a cyclone; not a single building left standing to mark the site of a once prosperous and thriving place.

APRIL 23.

A great meeting was held on Blackheath Common to-day to protest against coercion. Fully 10,000 persons were present. Resolutions denouncing coercion were adopted by an almost unanimous vote.——The excitement caused in Paris by the arrest of Schnabele by the Germans has subsided. Germany pledges a satisfactory settlement.——The Swiss National Council has voted 450,000 francs toward the completion of the Simplon Tunnel.——The affairs of the North Atlantic Steamship Company have been ordered to be wound up.——The rain of this morning was accompanied by a heavy wind that did a great deal of damage to places which lay in its track, in Louisiana, Mississippi and other States.——The Queen of Hawaii has decided to accept the hospitality of the City of Boston, tendered by the mayor.

APRIL 24.

The trouble between Lord Lansdowne and his tenants has been settled.——Serious charges are pending against Schnabele in the German courts.——A German court quashes a libel suit against Prince Bismarck, saying that, as the Prince being a German general, he is only amenable to a military tribunal.——Discussion of the Irish Land Bill in committee in the House of Lords will begin May 12.——The Vicksburg and Greenville packet "Issaquena" burned to the water's edge at 8 o'clock to-night.——The American Shipping and Industrial League will hold a convention at Charleston to-morrow.——Trains on the Georgia Pacific are running through from Starkville, Miss., to Atlanta, Ga.

APRIL 25.

Mr. Goschen was advised to amend his proposals to reduce the income tax on the basis of wiser finance.——Prince Bismarck expresses regret at the Schnabele occurrence. The Pope has tendered his services as mediator between France and Germany.——Dr. McGlynn will be suspended from his pastoral functions.——The Interstate Commerce Commissioners are on their way South. The first place they visit is Atlanta, Ga.——The Secretary of the Interior Department has refused the request for the delay in the issue of the Backbone Grant Patents.——The trial of Jake Sharp, of New York, is set for May 11.——Jas. H. Marr, chief clerk to the First Assistant Postmaster General, died in Washington to-day.——It is probable that non-intercourse with Canada will be ordered.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

The prohibition movement in Michigan having failed for the present, attention is now being directed to the project of regulating the liquor traffic by means of high license. The Republican members of the Legislature have held a caucus to take counsel respecting liquor legislation, and they have agreed to have a bill prepared on the basis of high license and local option. A graded license has been agreed on, saloons in the larger cities to pay the heavier licenses. No distinction between wine and beer license is to be made. The measure is in the hands of a committee, which is to report it to a second caucus next week. In case the report is then agreed on there is some probability of legislation upon the liquor question. There appears to be a strong temperance sentiment in the Legislature, and it has been quickened by the recent canvass upon the prohibition amendment. There is talk of increasing the penalties for violation of the liquor laws, and of establishing a State police force to enforce the law in sections where the local sentiment in favor of liquor is strong.—Bradstreet's.

In General Debility, Emaciation,

Consumption, and Wasting in Children, Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, is a most valuable food and medicine. It creates an appetite for food, strengthens the nervous system, and builds up the body. Please read: "I tried Scott's Emulsion on a young man whom Physicians at times gave up hope. Since he began using the Emulsion his Cough has ceased, gained flesh and strength, and from all appearances his life will be prolonged many years."—JOHN SULLIVAN, Hospital Steward, Morganza, Pa.

Daniel Browne, sole agent for Fry's Cocoas and Chocolates, is located at 123 and 125 Poydras St., and is prepared to exhibit highest recommendation for purity. See advertisement on fifth page.

The desire to study the original languages of the Scriptures stimulated the research which unearthed the literary treasures of the ancient world. The science of philology has been enriched by the missionaries of the cross. Languages have been reduced to writing which before were unwritten, and written languages preserved by the conversion of races.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Detective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is not at order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Consumption, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Ditson & Co.'s Sunday School Music

ranks with the very best, and no Sunday School management should adopt a new Singing Book without carefully examining one of their "tried and true" Sunday School Song Books.

Voices of Praise (40 cts., $4.20 per doz.) Rev. C. L. Hutchins. Music and poetry dignified and classical, but not dull; in fact, bright and enthusiastic. Very large collection for the money.

Singing on the Way (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) by Mrs. Jewett, ably assisted by Dr. Holbrook, whose noble compositions are known and loved in all the churches. This, like the book above mentioned, does excellently well for a Vestry Singing Book for prayer and praise meetings.

Songs of Promise (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) J. H. Tenney and Rev. E. A. Hoffman—the first highly gifted, musically, and the second the author of many hymns of refined and beautiful quality. One of the newest books.

Song Worship (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) L. O. Emerson and W. F. Sherwin, both celebrated compilers, composers and leaders, and the latter well-known as having had charge of the music at many Chatauqua meetings.

For other good books, please send for lists and catalogues.

For a lovely little book for the young children of a Sunday School, look no further than FIELD FLOWERS (25 cts., $2.40 per doz.) Emma Pitt. Sweet Hymns, Sweet Music, Pretty Pictures.

IN THE SECRET OF HIS PRESENCE.

BY REV. HENRY BURTON, B. A.

In the secret of his presence
I am kept from strife of tongues;
His pavilion is around me,
And within are ceaseless songs!
Stormy winds, his work fulfilling,
Beat without, but can not harm,
For the Master's voice is stilling
Storm and tempest to a calm.

In the secret of his presence
All the darkness disappears;
For a sun that knows no setting
Throws a rainbow on my tears.
So the days grow ever lighter,
Broad'ning to the perfect noon;
So the way grows ever brighter,
Heaven is coming, near and soon.

In the secret of his presence
Nevermore can foes alarm;
In the shadow of the Highest,
I can meet them with a psalm:
For the strong pavilion hides me—
Turns their fiery darts aside,
And I know, whate'er betide me,
I shall live, because he died!

In the secret of his presence
In a sweet, unbroken rest:
Pleasures, joys, in glorious fullness
Making earth like Eden blest;
So my peace grows deep and deeper,
Wid'ning as it nears the sea,
For my Savior is my keeper,
Keeping mine, and keeping me!

Some Reminiscences of Felicity Street Church.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

"Dear old Felicity Street Church is burned," I said, as I read the sad news in the ADVOCATE. How many pleasant and some sad recollections loomed up and cast pictures on memory's wall at that moment. Like a panorama, as it were, one incident after another came and vanished. First, the vacant corner; then the piles of brick, lime and other materials; then the foundation, the corner-stone, the walls begun, the basement up, the tall windows in place, walls finished, steeple standing without the ugly scaffolding, roof on, and finishing touches here and there: then the inside ready to be furnished, and the commendable pride we all felt when the last artistic touch left the royal purple velvet cushion, and curtain with its golden tassels looped gracefully, ready for the holy book; then the dedication, when every heart beat in unison, and our dear pastor, Rev. (now Bishop) H. N. McTyeire, looking so happy and satisfied. Ah! me, that was one of his young glory-days that glints down the years and casts a ray of light upon the many greater and older glory-days of his grand life. To me this beloved pastor always had a satisfied look; but, perhaps, if I should write and ask him if he was, he might take his pen and write for answer, in the words of the Psalmist: "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." This digression was due to the first pastor of the dear old church now in ashes. But it will get out of the ashes and rise, Phœnix-like, and be a diadem of beauty to the old Crescent City, a glory to the congregation, and a praise in the earth. But with all its late modernizing, its grand organ and its future glory, methinks there will never come a day that it will have a more devout congregation than when its walls first reverberated the grand old Doxology as sung by them on the day it was dedicated to the "Lord of Lords and King of Kings."

It would make this paper too long to give even a pen picture of many interesting incidents now recalled as connected with the dear old church. Passing over some Sunday-school memories that lingers often on the wall, I can but exclaim:

Tho' the church is destroyed (or burned), "if you will."
The dear, blessed memories "doth hang round it still."

The calm, expressive face of Bishop Capers, and his venerable hoary head, as he sat with such loving dignity presiding over the first Annual Conference held in that church, is one of the ineffaceable pictures.

An uncommon revival, conducted by Rev. Ferdinand S. Petway, during the absence of the pastor, was another. Many of the members of the Sunday-school were among the converts. One night a gentleman went to the altar and led away from it his wife, who had gone up as a mourner. The next night she went again. He started to bring her away again, was convicted and fell on his knees by her side, and both were converted. One night a young lady, who was not a professor, though a member, said to me, "If you will go up with me as a mourner, I will go." This she did not expect me to do; but I arose and started, she following. One of the altar workers, now in glory, seeing me and being surprised, said to me, "Sister L., do you feel like you want more religion?" "Yes," I said, "and I want Miss H. to have some too." So she turned to her. But I do not know that she ever was converted. This revival lasted nearly two weeks, and many found the light and have walked in it ever since.

At one of the quarterly meetings love-feast had been announced for Monday night. Our crowd were late, arriving just in time to see the door closed. We waited and knocked, but no gleam of light gladdened our eyes, no kind voice said, "Come in." There were just five of us, and we felt somewhat like the foolish virgins may have felt when their lamps went out. We lingered awhile, and then reluctantly turned our faces homeward.

Not long afterwards my mother, meeting Bro. Keener (now Bishop), and knowing he was there that night, said to him: "Bro. Keener, you ought to have let us in to the love-feast. We had some company from the country who had never been to a love-feast, and they were so disappointed they could scarcely forgive you." "Forgive!" said he. "Sister C., you knew the hour; why did you not arrive in time?" "We tried to," said mother, "and thought we were in time; but, Bro. Keener, I know one thing, and that is, that the door will not be shut when I get to heaven." "Ah! Sister C.," said the future Bishop; "it will, if you're too late."

But she was not "too late." Her lamp was trimmed and burning when the Bridegroom called. The other three went in before, all ready and waiting. I only am left outside to tell the tale. As those loved ones passed in the "gates ajar," one by one, a glimpse of the "sweet Beulah land" gladdened these longing eyes, and so I go on singing:

"Oh, depths of mercy! can it be
That gate was left ajar for me?"

Time and space forbid other incidents, and so, with a loving remembrance of the old church so dear to so many hearts, one can cast a prophetic glance at the new and pray that God may bless, comfort and help the devout worshipers, and grant that his "eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, My name shall be there."

Doctrine—Creed—Dogma.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

Distinctions, verbal, are requisite to define differences, real, ideal, and actual. The question arises, Are the three terms—doctrine, creed, and dogma—denotive of distinct and different entities or concepts? It matters little as to any philological or lexicographical ascertainments in settlement of the question. Words have no meanings except as they are saddled with them, and large liberties may be, as they have been, taken with terms, as mind essays the establishment of metes and bounds and of enlarging boundaries in evolution of the truth of the kingdom. That there has been such evolution, and that it will continue operating reconditionings and breeding fresh, organized developments, phenomenal, in the kingdom of Christ, will hardly be questioned.

Methodism, in the several ecclesiastical bodies thus named—as also in its collateral effects upon the older organizations, religious—is in practical, historic evidence of such evolutionary process. Dogmatic exuviæ are strewn along the highway of history through operation of the law of the kingdom, whence comes its growth. Let it be noted here that in the Scriptures the term "doctrine" is ever used in the singular number: "Take heed to thyself and to the doctrine." Doctrine and dogma are not synonymous. Doctrine is that which we have of revelation, perceived by the intuitive, imaginative reason; that which is its own reason and its own evidence. Doctrine enlarges and varies in application to exigencies of human history. Doctrine and wisdom and truth and life and God are one. Heresy is in denial or in transgression at this point. Dogma is what comes of process of the logical or discursive understanding, and whenever used as crucial test in determining the validity of the faith of one, gendereth to bondage. How notable a fact is that which signalized Wesley's claim to free thinking, when, in furnishing the Methodist Church with "articles of faith," he eliminated fifteen of the thirty-nine to which his own ordination (according to the claim of some) obliged him. He remodeled some of the twenty-four he passed over to us, in order that they might quadrate with the "new theology," whereof he and Watson and Fletcher and Clarke were exponential. I wish to ask right here: Was it reprehensible in these to remain in a church that was Calvinistic, and yet urge, as they did, the Arminian scheme in the very teeth of "the articles" of the church? "Blessed is he that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth."

Under stimulus and inspiration of the "law of the Spirit of life" did the fathers—the apostles—of Methodism prophesy, and what a thaw from out a stiff old Calvinistic freeze! The doctrine which generated Methodism has never been dogmatically formulated. What are the distinctive features of the doctrine, as urged in the origins of Methodism? Not one of them is "articulated" in our twenty-five dogmas. The witness of the Spirit hath no mention therein. The sanctions of the law—heaven and hell—are omitted. Satanic agency is not named. Nor is holiness—sanctification. Whether it was an advantage or disadvantage that American Methodism took a different course from that pursued by the Wesleyan Methodists in Great Britain, I'll not now inquire. The Wesleyans adopted no dogmas, no articles of faith. And yet they are as compact, aggressive and conservative as any church on the globe.

In respect of creed, I would simply say that it is a term properly expressive of what is based on historic fact. Take the creed of Methodism—what is termed the Apostle Creed. Each averment is that of fact, not of logical deduction, or speculative hypothesis. It hath its differentiation from doctrine and from dogma in just that. It is, therefore, infelicitous to confound creed with dogma or with doctrine.

In regard to the twenty-five articles there has been, occasionally, discussion in our church journals—ministers and laymen having varient, but not contradictory, philosophies of what we hold in common. That on "original sin" has been occasion of most disputation; but as all are agreed that there is necessity for a "new birth" in order to holiness and heaven, certainly there may be an agreement in disagreement—unity in variety. How varient, and yet not contradictory, the historic accounts of Christ's resurrection by the four evangelists! "Jerusalem which is from above is free; the mother of us all!" All thinking, that is thinking at all, is free thinking; and all free thinking is advanced thinking. All genuine progressiveness is conserving in the same degree; and there is no conservation except as there is growth. There may be rapid and much vaunted enlargement without growth. Sinuous compactness and rigidity of nerve are quite other than mere increment of fat. Dint of hard thinking and electric thrill from touches of the genius of life qualify for utterance that is in apology for nothing. Such "sayings" as were self-attestive, from the lips of the Master, organized victory. We are simply to see and say, with the foregone conclusion that our whole reward is in seeing and saying. Perish every bauble that may be possibly imagined as reward for attorneyship. One's birthright for a mess of pottage!

Church Schools.

MR. EDITOR: As the church papers have been teeming lately with articles on the subject of church education, which is a matter of very great importance indeed, I beg leave to make a few remarks:

I don't think that the trouble complained of ("too little patronage") ought to be attributed so much to "indifference," or "too many schools," as to the cost of conveyance, board, etc.

For instance, conveyance from Opelousas to the Vanderbilt University is about $30, and back home again $30—amounts to $60 for conveyance alone for one boy. Now, I have two boys yet, and conveyance alone for them would amount to $120 to get to and from ten months' schooling. At present I will say nothing about the cost of tuition. Now, the board will cost from $15 to $25 per month—say $20. That would amount to $400 for board alone for two boys ten months. So you see that aggregates $520 for the conveyance and board of two sons to get the chance of ten months' schooling. But now to that sum must be added the cost of tuition, books, clothing, etc., for there will be considerable of et ceteras besides the few items mentioned. But I have a daughter also yet to educate, and it will cost more than half of the amount estimated for the two sons to put her through college. One thousand dollars would hardly cover the three for one term of ten months. So three or four terms would cost at least $3,000 or $4,000. Now, how many (that are far from "indifferent") are able to stand that expense these hard times? But bear in mind that some families—a goodly number of them, too—are blessed with more than three children. And, furthermore, let it be borne in mind that, besides footing the bills for the children off at school, there is the family at home, the preacher in charge, the presiding elder, the Bishops, widows and orphans, ministerial education, church extension, home and foreign missions, and the poor—all have to be provided for, and not only so, but heavy taxes have to be paid annually, and various other calls for money have to be met continually. Now, where is all this money to come from when our leading staples (cotton and sugar) sell for less than the cost of its production sometimes, and never much above it; and the laborers too frequently fall behind their supply bills, and the planters have to foot them, too? And, while ours is an agricultural country, it is a fact, and a very knotty one, too, that labor is becoming more and still more worthless, and planting less profitable and more precarious. I "speak from the books." I write no fancy sketch. I make no guess-work to sustain an imaginary conclusion. The case, as I state it, is terribly true. And something must be done to remedy the existing state of things, or the South is destined to retrograde and loose its former prestige.

For a long time I have been pondering these things, and it has seemed to me that some plans might be systematized to reduce the cost of educating our children, and lessen the danger attending prolonged absence from home and its influences. We repel the charge of "indifference," and ask earnestly for some feasible and safe way of having our children educated. As things are, and have been for a long time, I have most of the time thought it better and safer to employ private teachers at home. I don't wish to be understood as complaining of the charges as things are arranged at present. But, for years, it has seemed to me that, instead of having fewer preparatory schools, have more of them ably officered with really good men, known to be also good educators, with well-arranged stewards' halls, conducted by good, practical men, where all the boys, uniformed alike, must be required to board and act as well-ordered families, would be a good plan—better, cheaper, and safer than sending children away off from home at so much cost for conveyance, far removed from home influences, scattered around to board in different families, foot-loose to run into demoralizing associations and form bad habits—sometimes, and too often, ruinous habits—while wasting money, time, and, worst of all, the pious impressions they carried from home.

How would it do for the Conferences to have in each parish or county a preparatory school, and supply them—appoint to them good and suitable teachers, stewards, etc., and hold them all to rigid account annually for the perfect working of the whole machinery from the dining-room to the recitation hall, and discharge promptly for delinquency? It has long seemed to me that some such plan might be so arranged as to educate children at less than half the present cost, and one-tenth of the risk to their religious character, while ten times as many children might then be educated as are now.

By requiring all the boys to uniform alike, and fare alike, not only could judicious economy be enforced, but, all the boys being placed upon equal footing, good feeling and good order would prevail. It never has, and never will, work well to have a school, where the wealthy are allowed to "clothe in purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day," while the poor have to wear cheap clothes and live on cheap fare all the time. The distinction would be so painfully invidious that the poor would prefer to stay away in ignorance, rather than be subjected to such humiliating mortification. Make a cheap uniform fashionable, and allow no other costume, and all would feel satisfied to wear it, and all would feel equally contented, and more equally respected, and more encouraged. And a boarding establishment, by having all the patronage, could afford to give good fare at cheap rates upon the same principles that wholesale dealers sell cheaper than those who retail. And then all the boys under the same watchful eyes could be better guarded and trained. And have every place filled by a religious man, who should be made to understand that he was not only expected, but absolutely required to care for and do his utmost to promote the moral principles, as well as to cultivate the intellectual faculties of anyone intrusted to him; and that anyone failing from incompetency or dereliction would be turned out forthwith to make room for one more suitable. Require every man connected with the institution, in any way, to do his whole duty faithfully, or get out of the way. And then require every boy there to comply strictly with every regulation, or go home. Set up a high standard, and work fully up to it.

Now, Mr. Editor, this is a rough outline of a plan, which, it has long seemed to me, might be arranged so as to work well and successfully. Unless the cost of education be greatly lessened, in some way, too many children in the land will have to go uneducated. And too soon Church and State will have too much ignorance to depend upon for stability and progress.

The Sunday-School Conference.

MR. EDITOR: Were I not to deem it a word in season, I would not attempt to presume upon your space with remarks on this subject. But some experience, as well as observation, have taught me that much confusion arises in the management of the Sunday-school Conference. Confusion, not only pro tempore, but also in the permanent record of the minutes. There is a practice and general tendency to merge the Sunday-school Conference into the proceedings of the District Conference. There is a tendency to give only a cursory or incidental attention, and to relegate to a very unimportant place this institution authorized by the General Conference. When an institution is so much needed as to call forth the action of the representative wisdom and piety of the church, we must certainly try, in making pretentions to obedience, to let it be considered of sufficient importance to be recognized as an integral factor in our church government. I recognize the Sunday-school Conference as integral; as much so as any other department of church government. The District Conference or Annual Conference are not more so.

The following is the law: "It is recommended that a Sunday-school Conference be held in each presiding elder's district, either during the session of the District Conference, or at some other time during the Conference year; and it should be the duty of the presiding elder to furnish in advance a suitable programme, which may be used by said Sunday-school Conference." The formula, "It is recommended," does not make it any less a law than if it had been, "There shall be held." It is only a differing form of initiating the clause. It is not discretional merely; and the clause, "during the session of the District Conference," does not mean that it is to compose a part of the District Conference, but it is only a convenience to use the place of the District Conference while a general delegation from the district is present. If it were not independent and distinct, "at any other time" could not be directed. Hence they are two distinct bodies. There should be separate minutes kept, and recorded distinctly, each under its own organization and head. Some of the District Conference records of last year contain all that was said on the subject of Sunday-schools, as part, essentially, of the District Conference business, and there was no Sunday-school organization, nor a word recorded about it. There should no less than a day be given to the discussion of the Sunday-school interests. The way in which this subject is treated is dishonoring to the importance of the institution, and, if persisted in, will make it a mere sham.

THE STUDENT OF HAPPINESS.

Would'st thou a happy life attain,
And sing, in joy's ecstatic strain,
Supreme of sorrow, fear and pain?

Would'st thou that light should chase away
The mist-surround from life's earthly day,
And o'er thy path in splendor play

Would'st thou from tranquil fountains drink,
Not tread, as are the clan did here,
Of the fierce floods, where others sink?

Would'st thou, when life's conflict pressed,
Wear armor, on both brain and breast,
Which never fatal stroke confessed?

Would'st thou for every soul-plague find
A healing balm, and purge the mind
From all infections of our kind?

Then must thou from weak slumber wake,
While years are fresh the wrong forsake,
And evermore of God partake.

The Sunday-School Lesson for May 15, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

THE CALL OF MOSES.

Exodus iii, 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say."—Exodus iv, 12.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

Moses was being trained in the court of the Pharaohs for the difficult task of getting his people out from their entanglements with the Egyptians and of leading them forth to the promised land. In order for proper qualification for this business, it was necessary that he should have a religious training to prevent his being led away by the enticements of the wicked court, and that he should be endowed with mental training and with worldly wisdom sufficient to make him a leader and a commander. The religious training he received from his mother, who, in the order of Providence, was appointed his nurse: the knowledge of men and books, of statecraft and military science, he learned in the favored position he held among the most cultivated people then known. Pharaoh, without knowing it, was educating a man who, in process of time, would make use of that very training to take out of his kingdom the most fruitful source of his wealth.

Doubtless, in the midst of this life, Moses frequently thought with sorrow upon the afflictions of his people, and felt his heart swell with the consciousness of a Divine vocation to set them free. When he was "grown," or forty years of age, he went out to visit his brethren, and saw an Egyptian smiting one of them, and he slew the Egyptian and hid him in the sand. This, in all probability, was not done in a fit of anger, or of a desire to avenge his people; but it was done rather in a magisterial capacity, in anticipation of the expected deliverance. This idea is justified by Acts vii, 25: "For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them."

When Pharaoh heard that Moses had slain an Egyptian, he sought to slay him, and, to save himself, Moses fled and dwelt in the land of Midian, where he found employment as a shepherd, a home for forty years, and a wife. Moses found his wife at a well, just as Eliezer found a wife for his young master Isaac, and just as Jacob found his wife Rachel. Moses took sides with the seven daughters of Reuel, a priest of Midian, against a band of rough shepherds, and helped them to water their flocks. Jethro showed his appreciation of the kindness by making him an inmate of his family and by giving unto him, for a wife, his daughter, Zipporah. She presented him with a son, and he called his name Gershom—"a stranger here"—mournfully intimating that he felt himself a "stranger in a strange land." The land of Midian was situated on the Sinai Peninsula, between the horns of the Red Sea, on its southeastern shore.

MOSES AND THE BURNING BUSH.

Verse 1. "Moses kept the flock of Jethro." The prince has become the peasant. The heir-expectant to the throne of Egypt is a keeper of sheep. Worldly minds would exclaim, "What a fall!" But enlightened piety would see the more glorious calling in typifying him of whom it was prophesied: "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall carry the lambs in his bosom and shall gently lead those that are with young." "The priest of Midian" was called respectively Jethro, Raguel and Reuel. He combined the offices of priest and prince. In Exodus xviii he is shown to be a worshiper of the true God. He also gives Moses some wise counsel in dividing out the responsibility in administering the affairs of his people between rulers of thousands, of hundreds, of fifties, and of tens. "Back side of the desert: mountain of God, even Horeb." Vast solitudes, rocky heights are fitting places for communing with the great Creator, and for taking on inspiration for a noble life. Horeb is situated near the center of the Arabian Peninsula, where Moses smote the rock, and where Elijah stood when he heard the "still small voice."

2. "The Angel of the Lord." The Angel of the covenant. The second person in the adorable Trinity, even he who was to be the son of Mary. "A flame of fire." Typical of the presence of Jehovah. Ezekiel speaks of God as a fire infolding itself; Luke, of cloven tongues like as of fire. "The bush was not consumed." The true church of God, humble and unpretending, frequently in the fires of affliction, yet providentially preserved.

3. "I will turn aside and see this great sight." It is characteristic of a proper mind, not to say a reverent one, to inquire into the mysteries of nature and revelation. "Can anything good come out of Nazareth. Come and see."

THE CALL OF MOSES.

Verse 4. "When the Lord saw that he turned aside to see." The Lord does not call careless persons, or, rather, careless persons can not hear God's call. Those who "turn aside" from the world are in condition to be divinely guided. "Here am I." An expression of obedient submission to God's will: like Samuel's, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," or Paul's, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

5. "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet." Moses well understood the meaning of this, as Egyptian priests did likewise when they went into their temples. It is still the custom in Eastern countries to take off the shoes as we do our hats. The removal of the hat is an expression of reverence for him who is worshiped. The removal of the shoes is an expression of personal defilement and unworthiness to stand in the presence of the Holy One.

6. "I am the God of thy father." Stephen, quoting this passage—Acts vii, 32—uses the plural "fathers." Doubtless, that is the meaning here—fathers running back from Amram to Abraham. "Moses hid his face." Elijah wrapped his face in a mantle when God talked with him. The splendor of the Divine presence is dazzling and awe-inspiring.

7. "I have seen the affliction of my people and heard their cry." "The cries of them are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth." The cruel bondage, the merciless taskmasters had been predicted, the Divine purpose in them had been accomplished, and now came the day of deliverance. The Lord is the avenger of all such.

8. "I am come down." I take in hand their deliverance. I will be the pillar of fire by night and of cloud by day. "Unto a good land and large." "A land of brooks, of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills; a land of wheat and barley, and vines and fig trees and pomegranates; a land of oil olive and honey." "The place of the Canaanites." This inheritance was promised in the day that the Lord made the covenant with Abram: "Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates."

10. "I will send thee unto Pharaoh." The Pharaoh then reigning was not the one whose daughter had adopted Moses, but a stranger; hence he felt more discouraged at the prospect of prevailing with him to let the children of Israel go out of Egypt.

11. "Who am I?" Paul said, "Who is sufficient for these things?" It is characteristic of true merit to disparage self—

"How ready is the man to go,
Whom God hath never sent!
How dilatory, diffident and slow,
God's chosen instrument!"

The difficulties which Moses saw in the way were manifold. He felt his own incompetency. He was slow of speech both before and after the Lord had spoken to him. He did not believe that Pharaoh would recognize the authority under which he came. He knew that Pharaoh would consent only upon sheer compulsion to let such an arm of his power and such a source of his wealth be torn from him. Moses knew also that his own people had become so entangled with the Egyptians, and that they were so fond of the melons and the leeks and the garlic, that it would be with the utmost difficulty he could prevail upon them to follow him. He said, in verse thirteen, after this lesson: "Suppose the children of Israel should say, 'Who sent you? What is his name?' What shall I say unto them?" "And God said unto Moses, I Am That I Am." Humanly speaking, their escape from the entangling alliances, which had been drawn around them, and from the chains of bondage which had been riveted upon them, was an impossibility. But God assured him.

12. "Certainly I will be with thee." This great deliverance was not to be dependent upon the speech, or the wisdom, or the power of Moses. God only purposed to use him as the instrument through which his mighty triumph should be wrought. Surely God was with him, or he never could have performed the many and the wonderful miracles which finally humbled the hard heart of Pharaoh and prevailed upon him to let the people go. "This shall be a token unto thee." Reference is doubtless made to the miraculous appearance of the burning bush. Look upon this display of my power, see my appearance in this bush, and see my preservation in that it is not consumed, and learn a lesson that I will be with thee and preserve thee. "When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain." This was not spoken as a token, because it was to happen after the event of which Moses was doubtful. It was simply prophetic. A token or sign to be efficacious in allaying his fears and inspiring his faith must be given then. The token given was God's presence and the miracle of the burning bush. The worship in the mountain was simply prophetic. The prophecy was fulfilled when Moses left the children of Israel encamped before the mount, and he "went up unto God, and the Lord called him out of the mountain." Some think also that there is a prophetic allusion to the giving of the law on Sinai, which is one of the peaks of Horeb.

Geology Breaks Down!

"The so-called fossil remains, deep buried under ground, prove nothing. They are like the bones and horns and hoofs of animals, and there are appearances of tracks of various animals, and such things in abundance no doubt; but these things prove nothing, for it was certainly just as easy for God, in a twinkling, to form the rocks down there that way as any other way."

This wholesale mode of disposing of geology is not popular, but it has attained consent and approbation to some considerable extent, and sometimes in quarters of respectability and even of otherwise fair intelligence. The "six literal days" doctrine must, of course, adopt it. Let us define the proposition: It is admitted on all hands that under the outer crust or skin of the earth, in what geologists call layers, or strata, extending downward, there are found thousands of thousands of what is called fossil remains. That is, in rocks and other places, they find what appears to be petrified bones, shells, animals, whole or parts, also animal tracks and other marks such as feathers, teeth, hoofs, claws, etc. These are so deeply embedded and otherwise conditioned as to render it impossible that they could have been placed there, in the course of nature in any recent period of six, twenty or fifty thousand years. And so, geologists say, they must be real organic remains that have—many of them—been lying there for thousands and millions of ages. And hence, of course, the physical antiquity of the globe is placed very far beyond the six thousand years of so-called Bible history.

But six literal, or twenty-four hour-days, man replies, "These appearances prove nothing; because it was just as easy for God to have created the earth six thousand years ago that way—with all these marks and appearance, as without them in any other way."

I will not entertain a question as to what God could do. I know of no such issue. I hold the Divine omnipotence absolute. But if he did make the earth that way six thousand years ago, then and in that case, no fact can be proven to be true. And I go much farther and hold that no fact can be shown to be even highly probable. Now, let me be held exactly responsible. And further—the reader should understand that I have or claim to have no knowledge of geology—next to none. I never spent six months, possibly not the half of it, in solid study of that subject. So nobody can have any respect for my opinions about that science. I advance none, but am to show, that in the case supposed—viz: that those organic appearances and seeming footprints were "made that way," without the natural agency of real animals, that then there can be no proof nor strong probability of the truth of any fact.

How are supposed facts proven? In strict metaphysical philosophy no facts ever were or can be proved with absolute certainty. Mathematics alone are capable of absolute demonstration. Moral proof, or that which is universally accepted as proof of a fact, is its conformity to the uniformity of nature. A fact is taken for true when it answers to the uniformity of nature. We can pursue the enquiry no further. I illustrate: An animal is decided to be a horse when his appearance is like all horses so far as we have observed the operations of nature in this respect. An old horse is distinguished from a colt by certain marks, size, etc., by the rule that such marks, size, etc., have, so far as we have observed, never been known in a colt a week or year old. This horse, we say, we know to be several years old because he is ten times the size of all young colts and because of other well-known appearances. So we do not hesitate in deciding that this is the old mare, and that the colt, though we never saw either before. And yet we do not know certainly but this supposed old mare was, herself, foaled three days ago. We rely solely on the uniformity of nature in such cases. We have not known a horse three days old to be of that size and appearance. "But could not God make a horse, three days old, just that way as easily as any other way?" What God could do is not the question. Can any man be made to believe that he did?

We expect an apple tree to bear apples. Why? Why not as readily look for it to bear corn or oysters? All the apple trees we have seen or heard of bear apples, and while we do not know but this one may bear potatoes, we settle in the expectation of apples or nothing, relying solely on the uniformity of nature.

A hunter sees, or thinks he sees, a deer's track in the snow: and most men would push on and keep a sharp lookout. But a man who knows he can read d-a-y day, sees no evidence of a deer having been there, for could not God cause the snow to fall just so as well as any other way?

A witness testifies as to the age of a certain man, and says he was an old man—at least sixty or seventy years. But really he knows nothing about his age. He does not know that he is that many days old except on supposition of the uniformity of nature in all similar cases so far as our experience extends.

And this is precisely the argument touching the question of supposed fossil remains. Are they real, or are they false representations of reality? Has God been true to nature everywhere else and false here? These petrified rocks were either "made that way," six thousand years ago, according to the "six natural days" theory, or they are the actual remains of real animals deposited there many cons before. If we can rely on nature for the true age or identity of a man, a horse or a tree, why not in the other case? When the Arctic explorers discover a cairn apparently deserted for many years, are they in doubt whether it is real or "just made that way?"

God in nature has most certainly spoken to us, and said something in these fossil rocks, and the only open question is, Has he spoken truly or untruly? If these underground records are to be read as we read the above-ground records—and God did not intend to mislead us by placing false records where we naturally look for truth—then the six twenty-four hour-days theory is exploded, and the "days" of early Genesis must be read not only as the geologist says it must be read, but as the highest literary authority says it must be rendered, viz: an indefinitely long period. And so, when we put the Bible against science, how can an intelligent man be a Christian?

R. ABBEY.

TOULME, Mississippi.

Dr. Abbey Questioned.

MR. EDITOR: In Dr. Abbey's communication, "Theological Skeptic-makers," he seems to present a view of the resurrection rather out of harmony with what this writer has been led to believe—a belief he can not readily surrender, though condemned by so able a theologian as Dr. Abbey. I have always read his pen productions with relish. I admire his extensive research, vigorous thought and forcible reasoning on whatever subject he takes in hand. It seems to me in this instance the Doctor gets matters a little mixed. I can understand him when he claims that the Bible was never intended as a text book on scientific subjects, and that it was not intended to teach astronomy, geology and chemistry. His portrayal of the absurdity of the fathers' undertaking to interpret those sciences by the Bible is correct; yet it seems to this writer that he falls into an error equally as absurd and dangerous when he undertakes to interpret the Bible by the claims of modern science. There is no doubt a complete harmony between the Bible and science if both could be properly understood. But to undertake an interpretation of one by our interpretation of the other, where mystery is involved, is as bad one way as the other. The Doctor says, "Chemistry steps up and says: It is the man, and not the flesh of the man, that is raised with a spiritual body in the resurrection: and he is likely to have it so." Now is it not the Doctor's interpretation of chemistry that he applies to the Bible doctrine of the resurrection? Still more inconsistent, after he declares the Bible is not a teacher of chemistry, he introduces it to prove his view of chemistry in connection with the resurrection. Paul does say, "Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption;" but by this he certainly intends no more than that the nature of our bodies will be changed by a miracle, so that they can neither suffer or die any more. In this immediate connection he says, "Behold I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall be changed in a moment in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump." Now, if the apostle does not mean that those living will go to heaven with their flesh, what does he mean? He also says, "The dead shall be raised;" and if not the same bodies, flesh and all, with which they were buried, what does he mean?

I have always understood this to be the belief of Christians. I have never heard it claimed that there would be the same conditions attending the body after the resurrection as in this life. Christ is presented to us as an example of what we shall be in the resurrection, of what he was the "first fruits." He certainly came from the grave with flesh and blood. When he appeared to his disciples, they supposed he was a spirit; but he said, "Handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Can there be any mistake here? This was the same body that he afterwards carried to heaven in the flesh, i. e. —translated.

Perhaps the Doctor will say, Christ did not see corruption, and Elijah was translated, so neither underwent the disintegrating process of chemical forces. Hence reason is not outraged as it would be in the case of the bodies that decay, and, whose flesh goes to support other bodies, and is scattered to the four winds. After all, man's idea of chemistry is called in by the Doctor to set a limit to the Divine power.

There is a wide difference in the application the Doctor makes of astronomy and geology and the one he makes in reference to chemistry. By the first two he shows the failure that follows any attempt to interpret God's Word by our views of science; in the latter he undertakes to overthrow our faith in a literal resurrection. At least, this is what I get from his communication. We believe the resurrection to be a miracle, and no human idea of science can ever limit the Divine power. Dr. Abbey's is the very mistake skeptics make. We need not stop to ask what means God may use to bring up our bodies, and so change them, as to prepare them for the perfections of heaven. He has promised it and is able to perform it. In so doing he will not contravene true reason, notwithstanding the claims of chemistry to the contrary.

Q. A. OATS.

The Drowning of Methuselah.

MR. EDITOR: I will give my opinion in reference to the drowning of Methuselah in the flood. It is known by all close students of the Bible that up to the eleventh chapter of Genesis, that all historical events are given in general terms, and from that chapter on, a special history. All chronology puts the death of Methuselah in the year of the flood. By tradition we learn that the flood commenced the first of the years—and is known as the years of the flood. As the flood was over the earth over a year, it was from the first to the last of the year. The Scriptures speak only in round numbers of years, except in Noah's case, where it particularizes and gives years, months and days according to our usage. Noah was 599 years, 2 months and 17 days old when "the ark was lifted up above the earth." We speak of the first year of a child's life as being up to the time he is a year old. We are borne out in applying this usage here. Referring to Genesis ix, 28, 29, Noah lived after the flood three hundred and fifty years, and yet all his days were 950 years. As the flood was over a year upon the earth, it ought to be stated that Noah was 951 years of age when he died. This usage is in all history, speaking in round numbers as such events in years—time of the year not named.

In this year, the years of the flood, Methuselah was alive. Genesis vi, 7: "And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth"—all men. "But Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord." It is evident that all that was on the earth at that time were drowned except those saved by the ark. The expression in reference to Methuselah—"and he died"—is no proof that he died a natural death. By reference to Genesis vii, 21, 22, the same expression is used, "All flesh died that moved upon the earth, both fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." And here it seems that the Lord, wishing to remove all doubts in regard to the drowning of all those on the earth, used this sweeping expression, "And every man,"—"all in whose nostrils was the breath of life of all that were in the land died." And it seems that the above was not strong enough. And the Lord (in verse 23) says, "And Noah only remained alive, and they that were in the ark."

Enoch, the father of Methuselah, was a prophet during the patriarchal age. Names were given in reference to character and destiny. Methuselah means, "Man with a spear," "Wild man," or "Plunderer," "He dies," "There is a dart," "There is a sending forth." It seems that he carried death and destruction in his name. Possibly he was named after the second murder in Cain's family, Methusael; possibly his grandfather on his mother's side would seem to indicate close relation to this family of Methusael by his naming his son Lamech. Lamech, son of Methusael, was sixth from Cain; Mathuselah, seventh from Seth, making him cotemporary with a daughter of Lamech, son of Methusael. This general intermarrying is referred to and condemned in the next chapter, and for this God destroyed the earth—not one pure and perfect in their generation except Noah.

Now, Mr. Editor, in summing up the case: Methuselah was alive at the time of the flood. He passed away that year. The sweeping declaration of the Scriptures in regard to all those on the earth; his name carrying death in it; his intermarriage in the family of the wicked—is it not presumable that Methuselah was drowned in the flood?

How few Christians plan largely for Christ. They see the magnitude of the work that God has inaugurated, and that he has committed it to human instrumentality, but they seem not to have the least conception of the resources at their command. And this, too, when they are constantly saying that it is God's work for which he gave his Son, and that he is as willing as he is able to save. There is no movement in the church that is really stirring the hearts of one in ten of those who profess faith in Christ to do his utmost. What we need is faith in God. Mammon has shown more zeal than the church in every part of the heathen world.—Central Christian Advocate.

Punctuality—It Is All-Important.

It is a matter of surprise and regret how many persons disregard punctuality, which is the chief secret of success in every department of business, and every enterprise in which we may engage. Many utterly fail in the accomplishment of a specific object simply because they have not respected this great business essential, and disaster instead of success has baffled their efforts.

In the varied interests of social and domestic life we must acknowledge its value, as we do in the great commercial, political, ecclesiastical, and military relations of the world. The neglect of this virtue causes dissension at home when the meals are irregular, and members of the family often waste precious moments of time waiting for the usual bell-note to summon them around the table where the tardy mistress has failed to be seated to perform the duties of the occasion. The master of the house, perhaps a merchant, has lost several customers by the delay; the daughter, it may be, is a teacher in the public school, and her tardy appearance at her post of duty has aroused disaffection that may end in her final dismissal.

That lawyer has the reputation of being unpunctual, and his clients soon go elsewhere for advice and prompt action. The poor mechanic has fewer and fewer contracts because he can not be depended upon for despatch. The farmer fails to engage his load of produce because there is no reliance to be put in his contract that it may not be filled at the appointed time. There is no profession, vocation, or station of life that is not more or less affected by this fatal vice of delay.

All of the great Corsican's victories were achieved by a proper respect for this so much neglected virtue. It was his custom to manuever over wide tracts of territory to cause doubt with the foe what point he would attack; and when fully ready to strike a blow, to concentrate all his strength, and fall without a moment's delay upon some weak point of the widely extended and imperfectly fortified country. Of couse it was imperative that every division should be ready to reach a specified point just at the moment of attack; and how all-important it was that the strictest punctuality should be observed in every movement. The allied armies could not fail to see the wisdom of his tactics and the value he attached to punctuality, and soon brought the same potent powers to bear upon him and his famous veterans; and this it was which proved the secret of the great Waterloo triumph. Blucher was punctual at Mont St. Jean, while Grouchy was not; and Wellington's star was in the ascendency while Napoleon's set forever in a midnight of gloom.

In mercantile pursuits, too, we see the importance of punctuality: insurance policies have not met prompt attention, and irretrievable losses have followed. Thousands of city merchants and manufacturers and publishers suffer beyond computation from a lack of punctual payment of country customers; and the general penalty of protest inflicted by banks is the only safe and wise policy to remedy evils that are ever arising from this same wanton disregard of punctuality. —Baltimorean.

Horses, Cattle and Chickens.

For colic and grubs, for lung fever, coughs or hide-bound, I give Simmons Liver Regulator in a mush twice a day. You can recommend it to everyone having stock as the best medicine known for the above complaints. Modern Surgery.

While unæsthetics have rendered the gravest surgical operations well-nigh painless, other still more recent improvements have rendered them comparatively safe.

It is important that this should be understood, because dread of the surgeon's knife, once reasonable, causes many operations to be put off until the increase of the trouble and its effect on the general health may have rendered the system unable to rally from the shock. In all cases the earlier the operation, the safer it will be.

The changes in surgical methods within a single decade amount to a revolution. The surgeon himself looks back with horror on the surgery of ten years ago. Then the danger—and it was a great and ever present one—was from suppuration and consequent blood-poisoning.

Suppuration was looked on as inevitable. But science now shows that no suppuration is possible, unless the germs of it are introduced from without. The germs were formerly introduced with the hand of the operator, or those of his assistants, or by his instruments, his threads, his sponges, his plasters or his bandages; or they floated in with the infected air, with which every hospital was specially charged.

Now it is known that various solutions destroy all such germs. The operating-room is therefore kept disinfected. So are the surgeons and attendants, especially their hands and nails.

Instruments and sponges are taken, at using, directly from the carbolic solution. Plasters and bandages, and all ligatures for tying blood-vessels or sewing up wounds, are rendered aseptic. The skin of the patient is scrubbed with soap and water, and the parts adjacent to the wound covered with disinfecting towels.

"Pus is a thing of the past," says the Medical Record. "The wound is now dressed with no expectation that fever will arise, or that suppuration will occur, or that the dressings will require renewal. The patient eats and sleeps well from the first, and the surgeon removes the dressing only to find the wound united"—and this, too, though the largest wounds are fully sewed up, and without drainage tubes.

Formerly, the simplest cases of compound fracture were treated with many misgivings; now the worst cases give no special trouble. Formerly, the larger amputations were terribly fatal; now, even in amputations of the thigh, death by suppuration and its results does not occur. Formerly, after tying a blood vessel, there was great danger of its bursting out again; through the effect of suppuration, this danger has ceased to exist.

Enormous abscesses are now freely opened, cleansed with a disinfecting solution, and their walls—sometimes having many square feet of surface—being pressed together, promptly unite with uniform success.—Youth's Companion.

A Trial by Jury.

That great American jury, the people, have rendered a unanimous verdict in favor of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, the standard remedy for bowel and stomach disorders, biliousness, sick headache, dizziness, constipation and sluggish liver.

The Antarctic Ocean.

The Antarctic Ocean occupies a position around the South Pole similar to that of the Arctic Ocean at the opposite end of the earth. It fills all the space to the south of the Antarctic Circle. It differs vastly, however, from its northern homologue, for, instead of having land at its outer circumference, it has water. While the North American, the European and the Asiatic coasts encircle the Northern Ocean, the Pacific, the Atlantic and the Indian Oceans mingle their water with those of the frozen zone at the south.

As it differs in physical conditions, so also it differs in having received much less attention from the world at large. While the aim of innumerable expeditions for the past four-hundred years has been to find a northwest passage to Asia, to plant a flag at latitude ninety degrees, or rescue some unfortunate commander and his crew from a horrible fate, and while thousands of dollars have been expended, and hundreds of lives have been lost, there is a strange contrast offered when we turn to the far south. The expeditions which have been sent out by the great nations of the world to explore the vast watery expanse about the southern pole are so few as to be counted on the fingers of one hand, and all the ships which have left records of any extensive explorations beyond the Antarctic Circle might be counted on the fingers of two hands. And yet "within the periphery of the Antarctic Circle," says Lieutenant Maury, "is included an area equal in extent to one-sixth of the entire land surface of our planet. Most of this immense area is as unknown to the inhabitants of the earth as the interior of one of Jupiter's satellites. * * * For the last two hundred years the Arctic Ocean has been a theatre of exploration; but, as for the Antarctic, no expedition has attempted to make any persistent exploration, or even to winter there." It is noteworthy, too, that in the voyages which have been made not a ship nor a life has been lost south of the circle. "It does not appear," says one writer, "that Antarctic voyages would be attended with any excessive degree of danger. * * * It may even be found that the Antarctic barriers are impenetrable; but this has certainly not as yet been demonstrated."—Popular Science Monthly.

HONORABLE EMPLOYMENT.—How often an honorable and legitimate employment is derided. "What! become a factory worker?" says one, as if character were to be degraded by honest toil in human avocations. "Do you really mean to be a book agent?" says another, as if the pursuit of this calling were a mark of the loss of manhood. Factory employees and book agents may safely pursue their callings in spite of an occasional slur, and evince such business tact, and business capital, as to put to shame the fastidious critic. It is far better to toil, even in the din of a mill or plod from home to home to sell a good book, than to fold one's hands in idleness, because of over-niceness about our avocation. Honesty, integrity and purpose will make a factory worker or book agent a success and map out for them a career of prosperity, which will reward the diligence that secured it. And when years are sped, the factory toiler, or book agent plodder, will live in mansions and command positions which the croaker never can reach. Work nobly and well if the factory be your present sphere, work nobly and well if yours be the task of selling books as an agent, and for such faithful and honest work, the fair-minded will have no words of scorn, and you will enjoy the triumph of sure and honest success.—Exchange.

TO YOUNG CHRISTIANS—More than fifty years ago, the late Dr. Leonard Bacon closed a sermon to young Christians with the following appeal, the spirit of which was grandly illustrated in his after life:

"Would to God I could make you know what results are depending upon you; what interests of the church and of a dying world are involved in your future character and efforts. When I look at the young Christians of this age, and reflect that they are soon to sustain the ancient glories of the church of God—when I look abroad on the earth and see the crisis that is at hand—when I listen to the cries that come from every quarter of the world, summoning the people of God to new efforts and more splendid exhibitions of piety—I seem to see the hoary generations that are passed rising up from their repose to watch over the young followers of Christ: I seem to hear the voices of blessed spirits from above cheering them on in the career of piety: I seem to see a world in misery, turning its imploring hands to them, and beseeching them to be worthy of their privileges, worthy of their noble destiny; I seem to hear, I do hear, God himself speaking from the heavens, 'Ye have chosen the better part; be faithful unto death and I will give you crowns of life.'"

Every boundary-line looks across to the unbounded, and every pulse of life takes hint of the life everlasting.—Hugh Smith Carpenter.

Tutt's Pills
REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a positive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Listen to Your Wife.

The Manchester Guardian, June 8th, 1883, says: A one of the "Windows"

Looking on the woodland ways! With clumps of rhododendrons and great masses of May blossoms ! ! ! "There was an interesting group.
It included one who had been a "Cotton spinner," but was now so
Paralyzed ! ! !
That he could only bear to lie in a reclining position.
This refers to my case.
I was first attacked twelve years ago with "Locomotor Ataxy"
(A paralytic disease of nerve fibre rarely ever cured)
and was for several years barely able to get about.
And for the last five years not able to attend to my business, although
Many things have been done for me.
The last experiment being Nerve stretching.
Two years ago I was voted into the Home for Incurables! Near Manchester, in May, 1882.
I am no "advocate;" "For anything in the shape of patent "Medicines?
And made many objections to my dear wife's constant urging to try Hop Bitters, but finally to pacify her—
Consented. ! !
I had not quite finished the first bottle when I felt a change come over me. This was Saturday, November 3d. On Sunday morning I felt so strong I said to my room companions, "I was sure I could "Walk!
So started across the floor and back.
Hardly knew how to contain myself. I was all over the house. I am gaining strength each day, and can walk quite safe without any "Stick!"
Or support.
I am now at my own house, and hope soon to be able to earn my own living again. I have been a member of the Manchester
"Royal Exchange"
For nearly thirty years, and was most heartily congratulated on going in the room on Thursday last. Very gratefully yours,

One Experience of Many.

Having experienced a great deal of "Trouble!" from Indigestion, so much so that I came near losing my "Life!"
My trouble always came after eating any food—
However light,
And digestible,
For two or three hours at a time I had to go through the most
Excruciating pains,
"And the only way I ever got"
"Relief?"
Was by throwing up all my stomach contained ! ! No one can conceive the pains that I had to go through, until
"At last?"
I was taken! "So that for three weeks I lay in bed and
Could eat nothing ! ! !
My sufferings were so that I called two doctors to give me something that would stop the pain.
Their efforts were no good to me.
At last I heard a good deal
"About your Hop Bitters!
And determined to try them."
Got a bottle—In four hours I took the contents of One ! ! ! !
Next day I was out of bed, and have not seen a "Sick!"
Hour, from the same cause, since.
I have recommended it to hundreds of others. You have no such "Advocate as I am."

Briefs.

The number of women engaged at other than household work in the United States is estimated at 3,000,000, and of these 600,000 are agricultural laborers, mainly in cotton fields of the South; 640,000 are employed in the manufactories of various kinds, while 530,000 in the laundries insist that the "Chinese must go;" 280,000 are milliners, and 200,000 find employment as dressmakers; 60,000 earn their bread in the tailor shops, and 600,000 as saleswomen, teachers, telegraph operators, typewriters, book-keepers, typesetters and nurses; and many other occupations find small numbers a livelihood. There are in round numbers 2,500 female physicians in the United States.—The American.

The returns of the results of our ecclesiastical year 1886-7 are all in, and the following are the figures: Traveling preachers, 4,434; local preachers, 5,989; members, 1,056,028; total ministry and membership, 1,065,451—showing an increase of 28 traveling preachers, 46 local preachers, 75,383 members, and of ministers and members, 75,457. The footings show that we have 11,207 Sunday-schools, in which 77,516 officers and teachers are instructing 612,519 pupils. The increase over the returns of last year is 585 Sunday-schools, 5,543 officers and teachers, and 50,772 pupils.

Our ministers baptized during the year 33,871 infants, showing an increase over the figures of 1885-86 of 4,325 baptisms. In 1884-85 the statistics of infant baptisms showed a decrease from the figures of the year previous of 1,078. In spite of the fact that we had baptized 29,546 infants that year, some who oppose this ordinance took this small decrease as an evidence that the practice was falling into innocuous, yea holy, desuetude with us. This increase more than balances the account.

Besides baptizing 33,871 infants, we baptized 74,780 adults. The next generation of Methodist preachers will not need to baptize so many adults since the present generation is doing so much in the way of the baptism of children.

Last year our Indian membership showed a decrease of 498; this year there is an increase of 627.—Nashville Advocate.

Sunday-School Anniversary.

The forty-first anniversary of the New Orleans Sunday-school Union was held last Sunday, at four P. M., in Carondelet Street Church. Our readers will remember that from the start of this organization, composed of all our Methodist schools in this city, Hon. William H. Foster has been its president and animating spirit. Its past record is a glorious one; but we could not see any loss of prestige in the exercises of Sunday. Philip Werlein, Esq., is the new president, and he presided with dignified grace and eminent ability. He promises to be a worthy successor of Bro. Foster, and, under his wise guidance and infusion of young blood, we may hope for many more successful anniversaries of our Sunday-school Union.

Prayer was made by the Rev. H. D. Kimball, and the singing and speaking, both in German and English, were very creditable to the children. The large audience was delightfully entertained and even instructed by the little folks. It was altogether a very enjoyable affair. After benediction by Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D., the old and young went home well pleased with what they had seen and heard. Long wave the New Orleans Sunday-School Union, and may its young president long live to give more anniversaries of the same sort!

Editorial Correspondence.

The Illinois Central railroad being a good advertiser in the ADVOCATE, whenever I can reach any place by this route I take it. So, having to attend the meeting of the Hymn Book Revision Committee in Nashville, I left home Monday evening by this road. A run of thirteen hours brought us to breakfast at Holly Springs, Miss., where I paid for the best breakfast I ever had at a railroad station, except one in a little town in Maryland. At half-past one P. M. we reached Martin and connected with the St. Louis and Chattanooga road for Nashville, where we arrived at half-past seven P. M. I thus made the trip by this route, without delay or detention, in a little over twenty-four hours, and made it with comfort to myself, and arrived in time to get a good night's rest preparatory to work with the committee in the important matter of revising the hymn book.

At the first meeting the committee were all present, except Dr. Wilson, of North Carolina, who was detained by some unavoidable cause. The committee holds its meetings in Wesley Hall, of Vanderbilt University. Here they have all the privacy they want, which, perhaps, would not be the case in the Publishing House. Dr. Fitzgerald was elected chairman, and Dr. McLean, vice-chairman, and Prof. Tillett, secretary of the committee. The first day's work developed the fact that there had been a remarkable unanimity in the preliminary sections in regard to the elimination necessary to a proper revision of the hymn book. With respect to the emendation or elimination of a hymn, the two-thirds' rule obtains, and, as the majority of the committee are known to be eminently conservative, the church at large need not tremble for the safety of the hymn book. And when the fact is considered that our revision has to pass the judgment and conservatism of the college of Bishops, "assurance is made doubly sure" that the old book will not be "torn to tatters." The committee goes to this work in the fear of God and in reliance upon the leadings of the Divine Spirit, and I think the work will be well done and will meet the demands of the times and receive the approbation of the church.

The manager of the Publishing House reports the business as in a fine condition; but the agent, Dr. McFerrin, is now prostrated with pneumonia, from which there is no hope of his recovery. He has served the church long and faithfully. His career as a servant of the church has indeed been almost without a parallel, and he expresses himself as willing and ready to give in the account of his stewardship. Looking at his long life of labor for the promotion of the Lord's cause, we may say appropriately—

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

NASHVILLE, TENN., April 27, 1887.

Nashville certainly has a good foundation, if being founded upon a rock means anything in that way. I have seen more rocks, than in all my life put together in Louisiana. There are rocks and rocks. Houses and bridges and streets and pavements and roads and fences are built of rocks. They are on top of the earth and in the earth and under the earth. All of which goes to show that this is a substantial city, which can not be shaken, like ours, by the passing carts and wagons. These people have no fear of sinking before their eyes. To the man who lives where there is no bottom to the mud, and who is continually reminded that there may come a great subsidence which may leave him he knows not where, this "rock-bottom" foundation is a subject of continual admiration. The boom in real estate which I noticed when I was here in February seems to have settled down into a normal condition. One gentleman told me that it ran so fast that it ran itself out of breath. This is not the only boom that came too soon and ran too fast.

The better portions of the people are somewhat exercised on the subject of the Sabbath law. There has been some serious infractions of the law and better sentiment of the law-abiding citizens in the matter of baseball playing on Sunday, which have awakened them to the fact that even in Nashville there must be a fight made for the sacredness of the day. Some of the secular papers have come out pretty strong in favor of enforcement of the Sunday law. The American says: "The law prohibits Sunday ball playing, and the game played Sunday was in deliberate and flagrant violation of that law, and the American joins with those who demand an enforcement of it. It is never productive of good to let the laws of the State go unenforced or to permit them to be disregarded with impunity, and thus fall into contempt." Suppose our great dailies should thus speak out upon the subject of baseball playing on Sunday! Alas! it is not a supposable case! The friends of the law and morality seem to be in earnest upon this point here, and we give them our hearty sympathy.

The Hymn Book Committee is working carefully and prayerfully, and the close of the third days' work brings out the fact more strongly that each one has in mind the general interest of the church in this matter. It was a wise thought in the Bishops to select men for this work from sections of the church so widely apart, for by this very selection the general interests will be the better conserved. The committee have felt all along the void created by the enforced absence of Dr. Wilson, of North Carolina, who is detained at home by a severe spell of sickness. The committee hope to be able to turn their work over to the Bishops by next Tuesday. I don't suppose any member of the committee entertains the hope of being able to make a hymn book that will satisfy the wishes of the whole church. Perhaps each looks more at the necessities of the church in this matter than at the wishes. A book that would satisfy the desires of the whole church would carry its own condemnation with it.

Contrary to the expectations of everybody, Dr. McFerrin took a turn for the better to-day, though there is no hope of his getting up again. Joseph Cook, of Boston, is to lecture here to-morrow night and also one night next week. Bishop Wilson has arrived in Baltimore from his long trip East, and we are expecting some good missionary talks from him next week. The papers this morning reported that Rev. C. F. Stivers, of the Episcopal Church, and at one time a member of our Conference, was shot and killed in Grenada, Miss., day before yesterday. C. W. C.

NASHVILLE, TENN., April 29, 1887.

Paying an Archbishop's Debts.

The debt of every Archbishop ought to be paid. So ought everybody else's. Debt and ought are synonymns, and we would appear to be trifling were it not for the fact that in practice such a wide distinction obtains. The next question is, Who ought to pay the Archbishop's debts? The first answer is, naturally, The Archbishop. But the Archbishop is not, and what he had is not found. The second answer would be, The Archbishop's friends or partners. But these are so numerous that it is unjust to bar the great masses the privilege of paying something. Of which we wish to discourse.

1. We are not intending to open the question as to the money which the Archbishop had, and then had not. We call no harsh terms or epithets relating to the uses of trust money, deposit money and all other kinds where there is or ought to be a reverence of the meum and the tuum. We allow that men who are worthy of the highest trust are many times mistaken as to their calculations relative to what an investment or appropriation will pay. Still the very fact is the greater reason why the line of distinction between meum and tuum should be observed.

2. We are not Romanist in our proclivities; take no stock in a thousand things regarded sacred by good Catholics. But we worship the same Christ. We deplore anything that tends to scandalize Christianity. We never join an infidel in cursing any order of believers on account of the delinquencies of a man or set of men. It is to be as much of a fool and unjust man as the infidel. Every man who is in Christ is touched by the indignities that are offered to his worship by blasphemers.

3. But we must say that there ought to be a discrimination between paying the debt for the sake of the church, and paying it for the sake of the man that made it. Archbishop Purcell was a high functionary in the Catholic Church. He had, ipso facto, a functional character as well as private. We waive the discussion of the private, but hold to the functional. Whatever debt was made with a view to advancing the welfare of his church, provided he acted within the limits of his function, became a church debt. Otherwise his debts were personal. It may be said that many entrusted money with him because he was an Archbishop. That makes no difference. If they attached importance thereto, it was their own act.

4. We are not now able to affirm anything definitely as to how much of the Archbishop's debt was personal, and how much was made in the discharge of his office. We have no particular use in knowing just now. As a functionary, he was amenable to his own church. The settlement of that question, then, has nothing to do here. But we are interested in the manner and means of payment of the debt. Either it is a personal debt or a church debt. If a personal debt, it ought to be paid out of his personal sureties; if a church debt, the church ought to pay it.

5. Now, to this point we come: "Can a church afford to organize a theatrical troupe for the express purpose of paying the debt of an Archbishop?" We waive every debate that can be raised upon previous questions and ask the question. Some one answers, "Why not organize a good regular troupe for a long term, just as well as a poor amateur troupe for a special occasion?" We admit the interrogation for all it is worth, and it is worth all it claims to be. I see no reason for turning a member out of the church for going to the theatre to see a good actor play Hamlet, and praying God's blessing on a village troupe that murder Hamlet in cold blood. The Catholic Church has gone into theatrical business on business principles. Our church entertainments are considered religious inversely as they possess business or artistic merit.

6. So much then. We are at the point to which we have been slowly, but surely, drifting, viz: That we must either quit planting the seed or continue to raise the crop. We must either pay debts as debts for conscience's sake, or we might as well go with the Catholics and organize a debt-paying theatre.

7. We do not now ask, How were the debts of the Archbishop made? They are either just or unjust. If unjust, have manhood to repudiate; if just, manhood to pay. There is no middle ground. "But you won't get any of the outsiders to help." Just so; and we are seriously in doubt whether outsiders' help is worth what it costs. We remember a notable instance during our pastorate where loud complaints of ingratitude drove us to an investigation as to how much outsiders had helped in erecting a church. The result was that the outsiders had gotten the finest bargain possible for their investment—about four to one. This in money and about the same in moral effect.

8. There is a lump of cupidity and stinginess in this business at the bottom of the soi-disant Christian heart that ought to be excoriated. The fable of the dog crossing the stream with the meat in his mouth is apposite. If we are working for the Master, let us do it. If we are unable to pay as much as we have incurred, let us seriously ask of Him did he authorize the contract. If it is our own, we ought to pay it just as we pay our grocery bills—not get up a theatrical troupe to pay it. If we are sure it is one of the Lord's debts, we ought to give our last mite and trust God to repay us—not go and hire those whom we have left to the "uncovenanted mercies" to help us out of the trouble.

T. A. S. A.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I am sure you will be glad and will rejoice with us that the Lord is working in a wonderful manner in our midst. The work we began in Hiroshima some months since is progressing and widening, and the interest on the part of many in regard to Christianity is intense. The work has gone far beyond our ability to hold it with the force we have on the field. Our hearts are stirred within us when we see so many willing to come from day to day to read the Word of God and drink in the blessed truths as only those can who are earnestly seeking the salvation of their souls.

We have now in the city of Hiroshima forty-eight persons on probation. About eight or ten of these we hope to baptize next Sabbath week. One of that number declares his intention to preach the gospel, and is preparing himself for it by earnestly studying the Bible, and that man is an officer of the local government. That same man has been instrumental in bringing many to hear the gospel. Through his instrumentality we are now teaching a class of forty-eight officials of the local government to read in English, and some of whom attend our meetings. Who will help this man by sending him some good books and who will pray for him? This man is Mr. Ijima, and I hope you will hear more of him some day.

We had one of the most affecting scenes in our church in Hiroshima on Sunday afternoon, about ten days since, when all the probationers were invited to attend a meeting for their special benefit. It is probable such a scene was never before witnessed in a heathen land. After reading, singing and prayer, we began at the head of the list to ask them questions in regard to their present state, and their determination for the future in their profession of faith in Christ.

The first man was a physician. He was asked if he was ready to give up all for Christ. "Dr. Sugiye, are you willing to give up your sake (wine) and observe the Sabbath?" He hesitated, and said: "I can not give up sake, for I am just commencing a practice, and there are times when I am asked to take a little. If I should refuse, it would ruin my practice." "Well, that settles the question with you, if you had rather have your sake than to have Christ. No, I can not argue the question, for it admits of no argument."

"Well, Mr. Mito, have you made up your mind to give up all for Christ? Can you give up your sake, and come and follow Christ and observe the Sabbath?" He hesitated, hung his heart, and we then went on.

"Mr. Sunamoto, Jr., are you willing to close your shop and observe the Sabbath and come and follow Christ?" He replied, "If I should close my shop, and every other one around me have their shops open, it would ruin my business." "Well that settles the matter with you."

"Mr. Ijima, have you made up your mind to give up all and follow Christ?" He promptly replied, "I have made up my mind to give up all for Christ, and this has been my determination for many days." "Thank God for that testimony! Well, we will go on to the next one."

"Mrs. Sunamoto, what is your mind on the subject? Have you determined to give up all for Christ?" She is an old lady, and the mother of Bro. Sunamoto, who is filled with the Spirit of God. She very promptly replied, "I will go with my son who is already a follower of Christ." "Thank God for this testimony!"

At this Bro. Sunamoto arose to his feet, and, with tears of joy, he gave such an exhortation as they never had before, and almost everyone present were in tears. When he closed he said in English, "I am poor." We at once said to him: "Bro. Sunamoto, you are not poor. Jesus is your friend, your brother, and heaven is your home."

We had a local Methodist preacher with us from Tokio, and we called on him to pray. He prayed for the doctor and others who said they could not give up their sake for Christ; and such a prayer as he prayed! The doctor groaned, and his daughter, who is an earnest Christian, burst into tears and wept. Soon weeping was heard all around us. The Spirit of the Lord was present, and we are sure it is a time they will never forget. At the close of this good brother's prayer, Dr. Sugiye arose, and said: "I have for a long while hesitated about this matter, but I am determined now to follow Christ even if I am poor. I am willing to give up my sake." Then one and another got up and said they were willing to give up all for Christ.

We do thank God for this gracious presence of his Spirit, for we want to see a spiritual church raised up here, the numbers of which shall go the length and breadth of this land, proclaiming the glad news of salvation through Christ Jesus. Pray for us, dear brother, and pray for these young Christians, and let the whole church pray for us. Pray that God would send more laborers into this field ready for the harvest. There has never been such a field for missionary work since the inauguration of modern missions. If the dear Christian friends at home could only see with what intense eagerness many of the people want to have the true light, they would not withhold the Word of God from them. I am sure we shall have their prayers.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

P. S.—I have just received a telegram from the natives at Hiroshima, saying, "Come, we are all waiting for you." I leave day after to-morrow. Pray for me and pray for those kind people. J. W. L.

Notes.

A paper was read recently before the New York and Brooklyn Association of Congregational Churches on "What Congregationalists May Learn from Other Denominations." The two prominent answers were: They may learn sociability from the Methodists, and attention to the religious nurture of children from the Catholics. Those are two very important things for a church to learn. Will some one tell us what the Methodists can learn from other denominations?

"Prohibition kills trade as dead as a hammer." This from Leavenworth, Kansas, is confirmatory of that opinion: "The saloons were closed six weeks ago, and more property has changed hands and more new enterprises have been started and more signs of life has been manifested in the last six weeks than in the six years preceding. Immigration and capital are pouring in, and the town has become infused with a new life and a new hope." That's the way prohibition kills trade and towns. May it thus kill all the towns and cripple all the trades in the country!

We will be very glad if any of our readers will communicate to us privately who is the author of the following, clipped from an exchange:

Some churches revive only when they are stirred up. The life of their members is, for the most part, a menagerie life. They are kept confined in cages when they would like to be running in lawlessness. There they lie all nerveless, listless, and forlorn; their tongues protruded in a listless wagging until some gay-robed exhibitor, bearing a flag of his own, some fancy preacher steps jauntily into the ring to stir them up, and then the dismal spot resounds with dismal life, and this they call a revival.

A good work is going on under the ministry of Dr. Morrison, in First Church, Atlanta. On a recent Sunday he received one hundred and twenty-nine persons into the church, and he says that the conversions have been more in number than the accessions. His meeting lasted four weeks and resulted in one hundred and ninety-four accessions to his church. Many of the leading men of the city were converted and joined the church. Dr. Morrison has been in Atlanta only three months. From every quarter the good news comes in that the Lord's cause is progressing.

The cause of prohibition is growing in a most important direction—a direction which shows that it is taking a deeper hold upon the public mind every day. We notice that it is more and more claiming the earnest attention of the thoughtfulness of the best thinkers, and that they are coming out daily in favor of the movement. And, what is still better, these thoughtful men and women are giving to the world, through the press, the benefit of their thinking on this subject. One of the best things we have seen lately is a little pamphlet entitled, "On with the Revolution, by One of the Revolutionists." We do not mean to say that the author is a recent convert; but we mean to say that his production evinces the very best thinking on this subject. He goes to the "root of the matter," and then goes to the "heart of the matter," and does not leave so much as a peg upon which either the saloon or the license system can hang itself. Temperance workers will find this pamphlet an invaluable aid. Scatter it by the thousand. They can get it from our Nashville House.

How often we become discouraged when, after we have faithfully and conscientiously presented the truth of God, the hearers seem to remain unaffected by it! How many times we have concluded like Jeremiah, "I will speak no more in his name!" And yet the very perversity of the human heart is the best reason for crying aloud and sparing not; for giving continually "line upon line and precept upon precept." Jeremiah himself is a good example for a discouraged preacher. This is a significant verse: "From the thirteenth year of Josiah, even unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year, the Word of the Lord hath come unto me and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye have not hearkened." Ten years of faithful preaching without any visible result! "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life."

MR. EDITOR: Please say to the brethren of the Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, that I would be very thankful if they would notify me if they intend bringing their wives. We want them to come.

Your brother in Christ,

Personals.

Rev. J. A. Bowen passed through the city last week on his way home to Holly Springs. He reports Sister Bowen much improved in health; due to the excellent treatment of Dr. Turner as much as the beneficial effect of the coast atmosphere. Bro. Bowen speaks in the highest praise of the kind attention of the good people of Bay St. Louis, and gives a glowing account of the work and workers all along the coast.

Rev. James A. Godfrey has been preaching at the meetings around Waynesboro with the power and effect of former years.

Rev. W. D. Dominick's ministry at Pearlington is being honored of God; improvement in all departments of church work is reported, and the future full of promise. His friends will be glad to hear that the health of Mrs. Dominick is improving.

Miss Alice Jordan has been admitted to practice at the bar of the Supreme Court of Michigan. She was made LL.B. at Yale, last year.

Dr. Joseph H. Parker, of London, has consented to deliver the oration at the Beecher memorial services, soon to be held in Brooklyn.

Prof. Gross Alexander, professor of Greek and New Testament exegesis in Vanderbilt University, has accepted an invitation to edit two volumes in the library of the Lives of the Early Christian Fathers, which is issued under the general editorial supervision of the venerable Dr. Philip Schaff, of New York.

Bishop Galloway passed through the city last week on his return from North Carolina, whither he went to dedicate two churches. He is looking very well indeed, and, after spending a few days at home, will go to Nashville to attend the meeting of the Board of Missions.

Bro. Robert Parvin is slowly convalescing from a protracted fever.

Rev. T. C. Wier, of the North Mississippi Conference, will address the graduates at the approaching commencement of the Memphis Conference Female Institute, at Jackson, Tenn. There will be twenty-five applicants for graduation.

Rev. C. F. Stivers, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, but later of the Episcopal Church, was shot and killed at Grenada, Miss., last week.

Charles Dickens, Jr., has signed a contract to deliver fifty readings from his father's works in this country, beginning about October 1.

Bishop Duncan and Dr. John E. Edwards are to dedicate Edenton Street Church, Raleigh, N. C., on the fourth Sabbath in May.

It is stated that Bishop Hargrove contemplates making his home on Lookout Mountain, overlooking the city of Chattanooga.

Canon Wilberforce, wife and daughter are visiting this country.

Bishop Hendrix is to preach the commencement sermon at the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., next June. This is his alma mater.

The venerable Robert C. Winthrop, of Boston, who succeeded Daniel Webster in the United States Senate, but was defeated by Charles Sumner, paid New York a visit a few days ago. He is seventy-nine years old, and remarkably well preserved.

The Board of Trustees of the University of Tennessee, by an unanimous vote, has elected Prof. J. M. McBride president of the university. He will accept.

The Sunday-school children in Canada Methodism gave $1 31 per capita last week for missions.

Baltimore has 301 churches, and nearly 2,000 licensed saloons.

There is a good provision in the Kansas election law. It is that no one shall remain within fifty feet of the polling. He is to go up, deposit his ballot, and retire across the "dead line," as they call it. This prevents crowding and hustling at the voting-place.

During the four years, which ended March, 1886, 525 churches were helped by the Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, receiving $115,000, and securing to the denomination about $600,000 worth of church edifices.

The Garfield Statue, in Washington, will be unveiled May 12 by the Society of the Army of the Cumberland.

Temperance Notes.

Another high license bill was introduced in the New York Senate, the nineteenth. It divides the saloons into two classes. The rates are as follows: New York and Brooklyn, first class, $500; second, $100. Buffalo, first class, $300; second, $60. Other portions of the State, first class, $150; second, $30.

The bill for the total prohibition of the liquor traffic in Newfoundland was defeated in the Assembly by the casting of a vote by the speaker. The people are certain that it will be carried at the next session.

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has passed the high license bill to its third reading by a vote of 188 to 89.

Thomas Steward was convicted on April 2, at Burlington, Vt., of ninety-one offenses against the prohibition law, and fined $900 and costs, with an alternate sentence of over 3,000 days in the workhouse.

The Delaware House of Representatives, by a vote of fifteen to six, passed a high license bill grading the liquor license fees from $400 for Wilmington down to $200 for villages and country taverns, and limiting druggists to the sale of liquor on physicians' prescriptions only, and to one sale on each prescription.

Beer brewing is on the increase. In 1885, 19,642,870 barrels were brewed, but in 1886, 21,912,422 barrels were brewed.

The committee of the Tennessee Legislature, appointed to report on the number of liquor dealers in the State, say that there are 1,647 dealers in Middle and West Tennessee, and that they owe the State over fifty thousand dollars in taxes.

The vote on the license question, in all but fifteen towns of Massachusetts, gives the following results: the "Yes" vote is 92,013; the "No" vote is 107,384. The majority for no license is 15,371.

The majority against prohibition in Michigan was 5,835.

North Mississippi Conference.

The Grenada District Conference is to be held at Charleston, June 2–5. It will convene at two P. M., Thursday, June 2, and the opening sermon will be preached at night by the Rev. R. A. Burroughs.

City Mission.

At Carondelet Street Church, next Tuesday, at half-past seven P. M., the regular monthly meeting of the New Orleans City Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is to be held.

All the members of the various Southern Methodist Churches of the city, together with all others who are friendly to the cause, are cordially invited to be present. Some of the committees are already at work and others soon will be. Interesting reports are to be made. Let the workers in this most inviting and thoroughly Christian field of labor have the backing of a packed basement of Methodists and friends ready to lend all needed help. There is nothing of more importance demanding the attention and efforts of New Orleans Methodism than the work of the City Mission.

JOHN T. SAWYER, P. E.

Consumption, and Wasting in Children, Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, is a most valuable food and medicine. It creates an appetite for food, strengthens the nervous system, and builds up the body. Please read: "I tried Scott's Emulsion on a young man whom Physicians at times gave up hope. Since he began using the Emulsion his Cough has ceased; gained flesh and strength, and from all appearances his life will be prolonged many years."—JOHN SULLIVAN, Hospital Steward, Morganza, Pa.

A Gala Day in Jackson, Miss.

The new Methodist Church will be dedicated on Sunday, May 15. The sermon will be preached by Bishop Chas. B. Galloway, D. D. The afternoon of the same day will be celebrated as Children's Day, according to the action of the last General Conference. At 8 P. M. a sermon will be delivered by some one of the visiting ministers. It is desired that as many of the former pastors of the Jackson Church, and presiding elders of the Jackson district, as can do so, be present and assist in the dedication. They are all hereby cordially invited to attend. The ministers of the Conference, traveling and local, as well as the public generally, are also cordially invited to be present.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 145 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

Ditson & Co.'s Sunday School Music

ranks with the very best, and no Sunday School management should adopt a new Singing Book without carefully examining one of their "tried and true" Sunday School Song Books.

Voices of Praise (40 cts., $4.20 per doz.) Rev. C. L. Hutchins. Music and poetry dignified and classical, but not dull; in fact, bright and enthusiastic. Very large collection for the money.

Singing on the Way (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) by Mrs. Jewett, ably assisted by Dr. Hollbrook, whose noble compositions are known and loved in all the churches. This, like the book above mentioned, does excellently well for a Vestry Singing Book for prayer and praise meetings.

Songs of Promise (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) J. H. Tenney and Rev. E. A. Hoffman—the first highly gifted, musically, and the second the author of many hymns of refined and beautiful quality. One of the newest books.

Song Worship (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) L. O. Emerson and W. F. Sherwin, both celebrated compilers, composers and leaders, and the latter well-known as having had charge of the music at many Chautauqua meetings.

For other good books, please send for lists and catalogues.

For a lovely little book for the young children of a Sunday School, look no further than FRESH FLOWERS (25 cts., $2.40 per doz.) Emma Pitt. Sweet Hymns, Sweet Music, Pretty Pictures.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and enemies. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its unfailing success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

LOOK TO THE END!

BY REV. JAMES YEAMES.

"Well begun" may be "half done;"
But beginning is not ending;
Great successes ne'er are won
By only wishing and intending.

"Start" is good, but "stay" is better,
"Start" alone ne'er won a race;
"Start and stick" is sure prize-getter,
"Staying power" takes foremost place.

Broad and deep lay the foundation,
But be sure you count the cost;
Or you'll rue, in deep vexation,
Treasure spent and labor lost.

Hold beginner, mark his folly!
Soon his zeal and means diminish;
Rash, or craven, coward wholly,
He began, but could not finish!

Woman's Department Church Extension.

TO THE CHILDREN.

The report of our Mite-Box Brigade will be short this time because up to the close of last quarter but few had entered this branch of the service. But now over 1,500 mite-boxes have been called for, and I hope during this quarter each one will represent a young heart and hand pledged to the Master, one young soul enlisted as a soldier of the cross under the banner of the Prince of Peace, ready to fight for the extension of his kingdom with the Christian's true weapons, faith, love, and good deeds. During this quarter I hope all the children will learn these questions and responses:

For whom are you working?

Our blessed Savior, who died for us.

For what are you working?

The extension of the kingdom of our Lord.

How are you working for this?

We are helping those God has sent to preach the gospel and save souls.

How are you helping them?

We are building houses for them and their wives and little children to live in.

What is the verse on your mite-box?

Who said that? Our Savior. Then when you build homes for the preachers our Savior says you are doing it for him.

At the close of each quarter I shall publish a list of the children that have brought in the largest gifts, naming the child whose gift is the largest in each Conference. This we shall call our "Roll of Honor."

You will see that a little boy out in Montana brings the largest offering this quarter. The next largest is from a little girl in Indian Territory. In the majority of the Conferences the girls are ahead.

ROLL OF HONOR.

Montana—Willie Butler—gift, $3 55; Indian Mission—Lizzie Lynch, $2 60; Tennessee—Cassa and Mamie Mosely, $1 50; Louisville Conference—Florence McCleary, $1 25; Los Angeles—Mary Cathaway, fifty cents.

I hope these little children will persevere, and more of you will enter the list, and at the end of the year we shall see which child in the whole church has brought in the largest gift and win the gold medal to be awarded in March, 1888.

I want to see how many of our children can build for Christ this year. You must remember Jesus says you are doing it for him, and that is the sweetest of it all, for he gave his life for you. Your friend,

LUCINDA B. HELM.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. Mamma takes your valuable paper, and I love to read the little cousins' letters; so I thought they would like to hear from another little girl. I have three brothers and one darling baby sister. She is so sweet, and laughs when we play with her. I go to the free school, and we have lots of fun. My teacher's name is Miss Jennie Ritz. I like her very much. Mamma and papa are Methodists. Rev. E. B. Ramsey is our pastor. We all love him very much. Old Santa Claus did not forget us Christmas; he filled our stockings. I have a little garden of my own. I can crochet one kind of trimming. I can sew and make up a bed. I have no pets to tell you about; only one old dog named Grandy, after Capt. Grandy Moore, who was captain of the old "More Castle" when she ran the Tennessee river, in the year 1847. We live in town. I will ask a question: Where in the Bible are the words "Prince of Peace" found? I will close now for fear of that dreadful waste-basket. Good-by. Your unknown friend,

EFFIE M. KENDALL.

OXFORD, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I would like to be numbered with the little juveniles of the ADVOCATE; but can not be, I suppose, without writing a letter to "our" column. But if I write like the rest of them do, I will have to say in the beginning of my letter that papa takes your valuable paper, and that Rev. So-and-so is our pastor, we love him very much, and are so thankful to the good Bishop for sending him back to us. Well, of course, all preachers are good; and as the little cousins are speaking so highly of their pastors, I will speak of one, of our Louisiana Conference, who once preached for us, and whom no one ever tires of praising; and that is Rev. E. B. Foust. If there ever was a good man, and a devout Christian, he is one. Our Sunday-school commenced again in April. We have a good superintendent, and I regret that I live too far to attend regularly. I will not ask a question. Success to the ADVOCATE.

BENNIE O. LYNNE.

Almost everyone is troubled with nervousness in some form, and nine-tenths of the prevailing illness comes from nervous exhaustion, brought on by overwork, mental strain or dissipation. No wonder people are asking for a reliable nerve remedy like Moxie Nerve Food: it builds you up, and strengthens your whole nervous system.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I have never written a letter to your valuable paper, and as my oldest sister has written, I thought I would write. There are fourteen of us, including papa and mamma. My oldest sister is eighteen, and my youngest brother is two years old. Eight of us belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which I am the youngest. I joined last Sunday. We go to Sunday-school every Sunday, at Whittington Chapel. I belong to a class of thirteen; age from seven to fifteen, and all are members of the church. Papa is our teacher. I am afraid my first letter will be too long. So I will close by asking the prayers of the good editor and all the little cousins that I may make a good journey through this present world, and gain a home in heaven in the end.

Your friend,

VERLENA MILES.

HARRISON COUNTY, Mississippi.

THERE are many accidents and diseases which affect Stock and cause serious inconvenience and loss to the farmer in his work, which may be quickly remedied by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years old. As I have never written to any paper, I thought I would write to the good old ADVOCATE. I do not think there is any paper published that equals it. Papa will take the ADVOCATE from this on. I know that we will all be delighted with its contents. I do not have much time to read now; but my school will be out in two weeks, and I will have plenty of time to read. Mr. Cotton is pastor in charge this year. Everybody loves him so well. He spent one night with us last week. We are so glad to see him come. I will bring my little letter to a close by answering Rhoda C. Rush's question: There were four anchors cast out when St. Paul was shipwrecked.

Your little friend,

If your are suffering with weak or inflamed eyes, or granulated eyelids, you can be quickly cured by using Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Eye Salve. 25 cents a box.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My papa takes the ADVOCATE. I love to read the children's letters. I have two brothers, and one sister older than myself. My oldest brother and sister are off at school. I am not going to school at present, but will start as soon as the new school-house is completed. My papa owns a saw-mill. He is sawing lumber for the school-house now. With best wishes for the ADVOCATE, and hoping this will not reach the dreadful waste-basket, I will close. Your little friend,

LIZZIE E. WILY.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would answer Charlie M. Gehee's question: The shortest verse in the Bible is St. John xi, 35—"Jesus wept." In Genesis xvi, we find that Cain went to the land of Nod. I am a little girl twelve years old. This is my first attempt at writing for publication, and hope to see it in print. I am,

Your little friend,

Rules for Family Peace.

1. We may be quite sure that our will is likely to be crossed to-day, so prepare for it.

2. Everybody in the house has an evil nature as well as ourselves, and, therefore, we are not to expect too much.

3. To learn the different temper of each individual.

4. When any good happens to anyone, to rejoice at it.

5. When inclined to give an angry answer, to count ten.

6. If from sickness, pain or infirmity we feel irritable, to keep a strict watch over ourselves.

7. To observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness and sympathy suited to their wants.

8. To watch for the little opportunities of pleasing, and to put little annoyances out of the way.

9. To take a cheerful view of everything.

10. In all little pleasures which may occur, to put self last.

11. To try for the soft answer that "turneth away wrath."

12. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, to ask ourselves: "Have I not often done the same and been forgiven?"

13. In conversation not to exalt ourselves, but to bring others forward.

14. To be very gentle with the younger ones, and treat them with respect.

15. Never to judge one another, but to attribute a good motive when we can.

16. To compare our manifold blessings with the trifling annoyances of the day.—Toronto Mail.

Selfish Husbands and Exacting Wives.

There have been selfish husbands and exacting wives ever since there were husbands and wives at all, and there have also been, and will continue to be, couples who are truly one, where, whether the wife earns money or not, whatever they may possess, belongs as much to one as to the other. Probably neither husband nor wife is perfect. He has long ago learned that she has her little tempers and petulances; that her opinions on many subjects differ radically from his own; that she is very likely governed by her feelings rather than by her reason—but he loves her through all.

And on her part she has found out that many things which enlist her warmest feelings do not appeal to him at all; that he does not care a fig for her favorite poem, and characterizes us "bosh" the story over which she has shed tears. And yet she knows that no one else could make him so happy, and in making his happiness she finds her own. And they love each other too well to ever truly clash. And at last when that day comes, when, as in the beginning of their life together, they are just two again, they can sit hand in hand at the fireside, and truly say:

"Yet have we treasure left, refined gold,
Love's sterling ore, without its baser part.
The wide old house has left its nestling birds;
But we are left. Ah, love, what need of words."

—Good Housekeeping.

FLOWERS AT THE TABLE.—The beauty and fragrance of flowers add not a little to the pleasure of the table-hour, truthfully said the late Dr. Dio Lewis. A large, fragrant bouquet takes the place of an extra dish. And nothing is so cheap as flowers. During a considerable part of the year they cost absolutely nothing. It is the sweetest pleasure to grow them. The service of flowers at the table, in recalling the lost appetite of the invalid, has long been recognized. Their service in refining the appetites of all is now generally appreciated. It would take a brute to eat like one at a table made sweet by the presence of flowers.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedlow, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

FELTZ—JAMES RODOLPH FELTZ was born May, 1849, at Haynesville, Houston county, Ga.; moved to Louisiana, January, 1870; received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Andrew Chapel, by Rev. R. M. Crows, on October, 1877, and died April, 1887.

He was a faithful worker as a member, steward or class leader; not demonstrative, but lived religion every day. He was blessed with Christian parents, who dedicated him early to God. If medical science and tender nursing could have stayed the angel of death, he would be living to-day. His last hours were those of the most intense pain, borne with patient, Christian fortitude. Being unconscious, he left no message of farewell; but the serene smile upon the cold lips, and the life-record of his past, told in silent eloquence of the raptures of his departing spirit. By his untimely death a gloom has fallen over the entire community. The large number of friends who followed his remains to the city of the dead showed how he was loved in life and mourned in death. He was a dutiful son, an affectionate husband, a kind father and a good citizen. He left behind him a loving wife, seven children, his aged and heart-broken parents, two sisters, and other relatives, to mourn; but they sorrow not without hope. May our heavenly Father comfort the bereaved wife and children and his aged parents, who have the deepest sympathy of many friends, and loved ones!

E. J. KENNON.

SHNEY—MARY T., daughter of Robert L. Fox and Sarah A. McKinney, was born in Alexandria, Rapides parish, La., January 25, 1858; was married to G. W. Shuey, March 31, 1885, and died in San Antonio, Texas, February 9, 1887.

Of remarkable personal beauty, great sweetness and amiability of temper, she possessed attractions that won her many admirers and a large circle of friends. She was a dutiful daughter, a loving, unselfish sister, a true friend, an affectionate, faithful wife. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1875, and remained in its communion until death. Her mother died when she was fifteen years old; but her aunt, Mrs. M. V. McGinnis, was a mother to her and her sisters, and her husband, Col. McGinnis, was a father. Her babe died when eight months old; and her health, feeble at the time, received a shock, from which she never recovered. For months she was an invalid, and at times a great sufferer; but bore all with Christian submission and fortitude. She clung fondly to life and loved ones, especially her husband; but was perfectly resigned to God's will. Gently the "silver cord was loosed," and the patient, trusting sufferer relensed; and, without a doubt or fear, the freed spirit passed from labor to rest. She was sister-in-law to the writer, and to him her memory is precious. J. D. HARPER.

MONTGOMERY—ROBERT MEREDITH MONTGOMERY was born in North Carolina, in the year 1822, and died at his home, near Sardis, Miss., December 31, 1886. He spent some time in the States of Tennessee, Florida and Louisiana. He was for twelve years a merchant in the city of New Orleans. From Louisiana he came to Panola county, Miss., where, in 1864, he was married to Miss Catherine B. Gillion, with whom he lived happily to the close of his life. For a year or two before death his health began to decline, growing gradually worse. When no longer capable of active life and attention to business, he submitted patiently to the confinement of his home, where he was blessed with the loving ministrations of wife and son, and kind attention from other friends. During the latter part of his sickness his attention was directed to his spiritual interests, and the importance of trust in Christ for salvation. On November 27, several weeks before his death, he took upon him the vows of Christian baptism, and was received by the writer as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. With unmurmuring submission and patience he continued to bear his affliction, expressing a simple trust in God, and quietly passed away on the last day of the year 1887. T. C. WIER.

MCQUIRE—MERRY H. MCQUIRE, son of Mr. Nimrod and Mrs. Elizabeth McQuire, was born in Pearlington, Hancock county, Miss., September 9, 1855. In 1859 his parents moved to Ouachita parish, in which parish all his subsequent life was spent.

Merry was a young man of attractive qualities. His cheerful disposition and manly character made him a general favorite. At home he was a kind, amiable and affectionate son and brother, and was dutiful to his good mother. Blessed with religious home influence, he early gave himself to the church. The writer visited him during his sickness, and he appreciated such services rendered; but for some time before his death his sufferings were so great that he was in no condition to converse with anyone. The skill of the physician and ministrations of his devoted mother and other members of the family were unsuccessful in restoring the dear sufferer; and on February 8, 1887, he died, at the family residence in this city (Monroe). The bereaved family sorrow; but not as those who have no hope. W. H.

The Bible a Century Hence.

Shall our descendants, when they take up this Bible, find the Pentateuch eliminated; the second half of Isaiah put after Daniel, Job made the beginning of the Canon; Hebrews banished; John's gospel declared spurious; and the Book of Revelation only a romantic myth? No. When we shall have passed away, and our names will be well-nigh forgotten, and those who enter upon the study of theological science shall go out upon foreign missions, and open the Bible, and read the sacred books to the people, it will be found that the number is just the same. It will begin as now: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth;" and it will end just as now: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ be with you all, Amen." And between those two passages not one word will be lost. It will have endeared itself anew to millions of the world's toiling population. New hymns will have been inspired by it, and have taken their sweetest melody from it. New rules of interpretation will have been written, to make clear the sacred words. Hearts which defy all arithmetic to number them, will have feasted on its promises, lived on sublime faith in them, and have gone home to their reward with the words of holy writ upon their lips, as they went out from the vale of tears into the blessed land where they sing one song and speak the one language of the blood-washed and triumphant. All the languages of the world will, I suspect, in less than a century, have been reached and the Bible translated into them. Where will be our Bible? You might as well ask, Where will Gibralter be to-morrow morning? or, Where is Bunker Hill Monument to-day? or, Where will God's sun be a century from now? No, there are no analogies which our eyes see on the fairest field, or in the most distant horizon to express its power. The Bible alone can state its own immortality: "The grass withereth, and the flower thereof fadeth, but the word of our Lord endureth forever."—Bishop Hurst.

Come to the bridal chamber, Death!
Come to the mother, when she feels
For the first time, her first-born's breath,
And thou art terrible!

The untimely death which annually carries off thousands of human beings in the prime of youth, is indeed terrible. The first approach of consumption is insidious, and the sufferer himself is the most unconscious of its approach. One of the most alarming symptoms of this dread disease is, in fact, the ineradical hope, which lurks in the heart of the victim, preventing him from taking timely steps to arrest the malady. That it can be arrested in its earlier stages is beyond question, as there are hundreds of well-authenticated cases where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has effected a complete cure.

REDEMPTION A PROGRESSIVE SCHEME.—All theories of progress which lead men to rely on their natural powers in dealing with the truth of God, and to look down on the Bible as a secondary and uncertain guide, in comparison with their own conscience and reason, instead of being the heralds of real advance, are ominous precursors of spiritual delusion and open apostasy of the faith. Men, without the guidance of the Holy Spirit, are just as liable to deadly and fatal error in our times as in any previous age. The louder their boasts of intellectual advancement and superior intelligence, the more plainly the snares of that great deceiver, who is "king over all the children of pride," are weaving around their path. It is only by returning to sit with the docility of little children at the feet of Christ that they can avoid the danger which the prophet has described in such vivid terms: "Give glory to the Lord your God before he cause darkness, and your feet stumble on the dark mountains; and while ye look for light he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness."—Rev. T. R. Bircks.

ECLECTIC, ALA., Oct. 20, 1886.
Dr. A. T. SHALLENBERGER,
Rochester, Pa. Dear Sir—Last February I received from you a bottle of your Antidote for Malaria, and gave it to a young lady attending school here, but who had not been well enough to go for several weeks, and was quite broken down in health. In a few days after taking the medicine she was back in school again, and has not lost a day the entire summer. I think it is the best medicine I ever knew.
Yours very truly,
R. C. WILLIAMS.

THE OPINION OF
Sir Robert Christison,
Baronet, M. D.,
Physician to Her Majesty the Queen, President Royal Association, Professor at the University of Edinburgh, &c.,
Liebig Co.'s Coca Beef Tonic
Is a remarkable preparation. It contains the nutritive elements of the muscular fibre, blood, bone and brain of carefully selected healthy bullocks dissolved to rare old Sherry wine. To be precise, each tablespoonful contains the nutritive elements of one ounce of choice beef, one grain and a half of pure quinine, and two grains of iron. It also embodies a concentrated extract of coca, a South American tonic of which Sir Robert Christison, M. D., F. R. S., physician to Her Majesty the Queen, says: "The properties of this wonderful plant are the most remarkable of any known to the medical world. From repeated personal trials I am convinced that its use is highly beneficial and tonic."

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION
The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.
Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.
Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.
Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.
In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

APRIL 28.

A dispatch from Perth, the capital of Western Australia, says: A hurricane swept the northeast coast April 22 and 23. The Pearl fishing fleet, numbering forty boats, was destroyed and 550 persons perished.——The steamer Benton, of Singapore, was sunk in a collision with a bark of the island of Formosa and 150 persons were drowned.——A dispatch from Rome says: Rev. Dr. McGlynn, of New York, has again informed the Vatican that he refuses to come to Rome.——Queen Victoria has left Aix-les-Bains, where she has been staying for some time.——A Southern Pacific train halted and robbed at Papago, Arizona. Wells, Fargo and Co. are reported to have lost $50,000.

APRIL 29.

Schnabele has been set free by order of Emperor William.——The House of Commons this afternoon went into committee on the Irish Crimes' Amendment Bill.——There is widespread opposition among the Mexicans to the Presidential Term Amendment recently passed by the Mexican Congress.——The Interstate Commissioners are in session at Mobile.——The Union Pacific railroad has filed its petition, asking for the suspension of Sec. IV. of the Interstate Commerce Law, with the commission.——The British steamship, "Ben Hope," from Vera Cruz to New York, burned off Tybee Island yesterday afternoon. Her cargo was 115,000 gallons of crude petroleum.——The Rev. Dr. Jos. M. Hoyte died suddenly in this city, to-night, at seven o'clock.

APRIL 30.

Schnabele has returned home. At the request of Germany he will be retired from the office of Commissary at Pagny-Sur-Moselle. He will be retired with a pension. La France is soliciting contributions of one franc each toward the purchase of a diamond cross for M. Schnabele.——Mr. William O'Brien, the editor of United Ireland, who proposes to deliver a series of addresses in Canada on the Lansdowne evictions, leaves for America to-morrow.——The Vatican has demanded the repeal of the military law that compels young men studying for the priesthood to perform military duty, claiming that it is an infringement of the Concordat.——Treasurer Jordan returned to Washington this morning, and resumed his duties at the Treasury Department.

MAY 1.

King Humbert unveiled a statue of Victor Emmanuel at Venice to-day.——All the persons charged with plotting against the Czar have been convicted and sentenced—seven to death, and the others to life servitude.——There was another riot in Belfast to-day. Several constables were wounded by the mob. Whether any of the mob were injured by the firing of the police is not known.——The death is announced of Athanase Leon Gosselin, the distinguished French surgeon.——The Anti-Poverty Society, founded by Henry George and Dr. McGlynn, held its initial meeting in Chickering Hall, N. Y.——The Interstate Commissioners arrived here Saturday, and will open their session in the Custombouse, at ten o'clock, Monday morning.

MAY 2.

Russia is massing troops on the frontier. The country is in a state of uneasiness.——The Chinese government has settled the currency question by making a contract with a Birmingham firm for the supply of silver and bronze coinage.——Prince Jerome Bonaparte has had an attack of apoplexy, and is in a dangerous condition.——The Marquis of Hartington has written a letter to the Liberal-Unionists advising them to organize a party for the purpose of maintaining their position.——The drouth-stricken portions of Texas have been visited by an eleven hours' rain.——Queen Kopolani, of Hawaii, is in Chicago. From thence she will go to Washington and New York, and then to London.——Dr. Moritz Schuppert, a distinguished physician of the city, died to-day.

Walking advertisements for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are the thousands it has cured.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

SOME FAMOUS OLD MEN.—The longevity of famous statesmen is remarkable. Imagine Lord Palmerston acting vigorously as Prime Minister of England when over eighty, governing the vast British Empire with steady hand, and making speeches three hours long in the House of Commons, and rising next day as fresh as a man of forty! Think of the venerable Guizot, the French statesman, who at the age of eighty-seven was still writing histories, presiding over religious conventions, and carrying on a lively discussion in the French Academy! The late Lord Lyndhurst made able speeches in the House of Lords when he had passed his ninetieth year; and his long-time rival, Lord Brougham, wrote his autobiography in three good volumes when he had reached nearly ninety years. The Marquis of Landsdowne, who, as Lord Henry Petty, was a leading member of the "All the Talents" cabinet, of which Charles James Fox was the chief, in 1806, was still an active member of the House of Lords nearly sixty years later, in 1863, and died in that year at the age of eighty-three. The Duke of Wellington took part in public affairs until his death, in 1852, in his eighty-third year. In former generations energetic statesmen of advanced years are found thickly scattered through the pages of history. There was the Marquis of Winchester, who remembered Edward IV., the first York sovereign, in 1483, and who, when he died in 1572, at the age of ninety-seven, was holding office under Queen Elizabeth. Referring to the statesmen of our own country, it is a familiar fact that John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the second and third Presidents, both died on the fourth of July, 1826, just half a century from the day on which both signed the Declaration of Independence—Adams being ninety-one and Jefferson eighty-three. President Andrew Jackson lived to be eighty-two, John Quincy Adams to be eighty-one, Madison eighty-five.—Exchange.

Daniel Browne, sole agent for Fry's Cocoas and Chocolates, is located at 123 and 125 Poydras St., and is prepared to exhibit highest recommendation for purity. See advertisement on fifth page.

A little four-year-old of our acquaintance is very fond of singing bits of "Hold the Fort," which she has caught at Sunday-school. One day mamma heard her singing, "Three-inforcements now appearing," etc. "It isn't three inforcements, dear," said her mamma with a smile. And a little while afterwards she heard it again, only this time it was, "Two-inforcements now appearing, victory is nigh."

The Test By Results.

When George Stevenson, the inventor of the locomotive, was about to start out on his first trip, he declared that the water in his boiler carried a power that would revolutionize the carrying trade of the world. The same test which decided the merits of the claims for the powers of steam, is a fair one for to-day. One of the most striking of these developments is Compound Oxygen. For a while it also met with incredulity. The idea that it could be stored in water and transported long distances met with the same doubt that had greeted every other new statement as to the powers in nature. But the same perseverance that had in so many fields won success led to patient endurance of the test by results; and they have made it an accomplished fact that oxygen in a compound form can be stored away for future use to be drawn upon as may be required. Tens of thousands are now living witnesses of this truth. The letters received and on file in the office of Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, from their patients, report cures in asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, dyspepsia, eczema, epilepsy, dropsy, cancer, hay-fever, heart disease, diseases of the eye, of the ear, consumption, rheumatism, diseases of the kidney, headaches, and other diseases. Nervous prostration from mental strain and overwork has in many cases given way to renewed powers and enjoyment of life.

These reports are numbered by thousands and come from men and women in every position in life. A college president in Vermont, writes that though he is well on in years, his voice has been restored so that he can give his lectures and addresses without inconvenience, after for a long time having been a sufferer from throat disease. When such widespread agreement as to results is witnessed, there can be no doubt as to Compound Oxygen. A well-prepared digest of the history and working of this remarkable revitalizer in the form of a two hundred paged brochure, will be sent free by addressing Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Nothing is so fearful as a bad conscience.—Pythagoras.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

Dyspepsia Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

Rheumatism Is undoubtedly a blood disease caused by an excess of the lactic acid in the blood. Where there is perfect filtration of the blood there can be no rheumatism. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA will remove the poison, supply the acids and relieve the pains.

Scrofula Is caused directly by impurities in the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, by purifying the blood, forces the impurities from the system.

Kidneys Through the Kidneys flow the waste fluid containing poisonous matter. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing pain in the small of the back and loins, flushes of heat, chills. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to resume their natural functions.

The Liver By irregularity in its action or suspension of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

BEAUTIFUL SHADOWS.

BY EMILIE H. DAVIES.

O the shadows, the beautiful shadows,
That fall at my feet as I pass
'Neath the wide-spreading boughs of the maples,
That mirror their leaves in the grass,
As fairy I almost see faces
And welcomes to me, as the breeze
Sayeth backward and forward the branches
Of the tall tow'ring old maple trees.

There's a mystical charm in the shadows,
That holdeth my spirit in thrall,
While with rapture I gaze on the pictures
In beauty, which flicker and fall;
As I pare and bend forward to listen,
Lest their teachings pass by unheard,
O, I long for some fairy-like whisper,
Or audible echoing word!

Tho' so silent and voiceless the shadows,
They teach mighty lessons of love;
When the darkest of shades fall around my pathway
The sun shines in glory above.
When heated and worn in life's journey,
When tired of its glamour and dross,
I may take every burden to Jesus,
And rest in the shade of his cross.

Individuality—Numbering Israel.

There is something imposing in numbers; but multitude may not indicate strength, power. The integer in its own wonted strength and individuality is expressive of reality, force, effectiveness. God's one-ness is the most expressive idea of his greatness and power. The "I Am That I Am" is clothed with all wisdom, dominion, authority and might. "The thunder of his power, who can understand?" "Glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders."

In our one-ness and individuality consists our strength. It is a recognition of our personal responsibility, our accountability for ourselves and not for another. To be lost and swallowed up in the multitude is to lose our identity and, in this manner, our personal responsibility. The multitude may be left to do, or not to do. What we ourselves are responsible for, thus ignoring our individuality. After all, the I in man is of supremest importance. How prominent in the experience of the ardent, consecrated apostle! "This one thing I do—I press; I keep my body under; I have fought with beasts; I know in whom I have believed; I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth us; I am ready to be offered," etc.

It is not the 75,000 increase in membership during the last ecclesiastical year that gives us strength and potency as a branch of the army of the living God. It is not the aggregate 1,000,000 who formally bow and serve at our altars that makes us mighty through God. Let us not be deceived. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." It is personal devotion, effort, consecration that render us a victorious and conquering church, undertaking nothing less than the conquest and subjugation of the world to Jesus—the rightful owner.

Everyone feeling himself responsible for the pending issue—"endued with power from on high, strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man, putting on the whole armor of God"—he becomes "mighty through God to the pulling down of the strongholds:" and "one can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand of the armies of the alien to flight." A conquering, victorious church goes forth with the highest credentials: Heaven's endorsement. The cohorts of hell recede before the advancing columns—the "armies of the alien are put to flight." The conquering, victorious Christian has the ægis of the Divine protection above him: armed "with the shield of faith and sword of the Spirit," and other accoutrements of warfare, he is invincible. No "weapon formed against him shall prosper." All the combined powers of earth and hell can not move him—"neither death nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate him from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Individuality, thus armed, knows no obstacle it may not overcome, no impediment it may not surmount, no scorn or derision it can not brook, no sacrifice it may not make, no achievement it may not accomplish, no enemy it may not thwart and overwhelm. Talk about the "correbition of forces" in the mighty universe of God! Here is force conserved, force expended to accumulate in greater supplies, for greater achievements!

Let us cease our glorifying over numbers. Maybe the tests of membership are not severe as formerly! Maybe discipline is not so strict as once! Maybe the heart-throes of repentance are not so agonizing as once! Maybe the "straight gate and narrow way" is broadened and more serpentine than once! "Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Let the standard be raised higher as well as the numbers increased.

I append as trite and pertinent a quotation from Dr. Joseph Parker's master-work, People's Bible:

"You can not take the statistics of the church, you can not be numbering men and saying: the church is thus and so, as to quantity, force and influence. The church lives upon bread the world knoweth not of. Count the church by the volume of its prayer; register the strength of the church by the purity and completeness of its consecration. If you number the church in millions, and tell me what is at the altar and at the cross, you have returned the census of a cemetery, not the statistics of a living, mighty, invincible host. Genius is nothing, learning is nothing, organization is a sarcasm and an irony apart from that which gives everyone of them value and force—the praying heart, the trustful spirit. The church conquers by holiness. * * * The church is not a club, nor is it so much physical force, nor is it, in any technical sense, a mere army of men drawn up in battle array, equal to the fight, whatever their principles may be. Again and again let it be said, till the densest heart responds to the tremendous appeal: the church has no existence apart from its godliness. It is constituted upon Divine foundations; it is animated by Divine impulses; it is inspired by Divine motives; it is protected by Divine security. A church that has lost its faith has lost itself. You can not have an unbelieving church, a faithless church; when the faith has gone, the church has gone. * * * The Lord will not fight the battles of nominal believers. By the very righteousness which makes him God he prefers an honest idolater to a dishonest nominalist. That is a thought which should make us consider our position. An idolater may be honest; but a professing Christian, if not faithful to his profession, is not merely unfaithful; there is no term that can describe the turpitude of his wickedness. * * * It is right that the heathen should conquer when the church is unfaithful. It is solemnly right that the heathen should mock the land that sends out missionaries one day and doers of evil the next, if not in the same ship. What wonder if the heathen laugh at the missionary when they see immediately behind him the man who is to undo all that the Christian evangelist attempts to accomplish? It may be rough logic—it may be reason in which many a flaw can be found by penetrating minds; but it is not to be wondered at, considering the nature of heathenism and the intuitions of common sense. You have no right to ask God to go with you merely as a convenience. Amalek is in sight, the Canaanite is on the alert, the walls are thick with the enemy. * * * Lord help us!—that is a coward's prayer, and Heaven will be empty to that cry: the shout will dissolve in echoes, because the heart is not faithful towards God. Who does not make a convenience of his religion? What coward is there who does not pray when he wants fine weather for the wedding at which he will make a sot of himself? Or who does not pray because a spirit, dim, spectral, black, is in the air, and may any moment alight upon the roof or quench the household fire? But the prayers of the wicked are an abomination unto the Lord. The air is vexed with cries of atheistic distress which want to ennoble themselves into momentary prayer."

Atlanta Mass Meetings.

The great occasion to which Methodism in this section has looked forward has come and gone. The highest expectations have been realized, and this great moral center is to-day under the thrill of a new missionary enthusiasm that will speedily manifest itself in largely increased contributions.

On Tuesday, April 26, Bishops Hendrix, Key and Granbery arrived, according to agreement. Bishop Galloway passed through the city, but pressing matters at home made it impossible for us to hold him, greatly to the regret of all our people and preachers. Bishop Wilson reached home too late last week to make it possible to be with us. Just from the mission field, where our Trinity Church has three representatives, his presence would have been specially inspiring. Tuesday night the first great mass meeting was held at Trinity. A large platform had been erected, handsomely carpeted and beautifully decorated. About fifty ministers of the Conference were present, and many of the leading laymen of the State. The spacious church was filled to overflowing. The songs were, indeed, thrilling, as the great congregation, with swelling voices, joined in the praise of God. Dr. W. H. Potter, chairman of the Board of Missions of the North Georgia Conference, presided. Bishop Key, known and loved by all Georgians, delivered the first address. It was strong, spiritual and eloquent, and will prove a benediction to all who heard it. Bishop Hendrix followed in a speech of great power, which, at its close, swept the vast audience and stirred in all hearts a holy enthusiasm in the cause of rescuing degraded and lost souls on the other side of the seas.

The Board of Missions, in its semi-annual session, met on Wednesday morning, and had the most pleasant and profitable conference of its history. The outlook in the home field was never so bright and encouraging. The establishment of first-class high schools in the mountainous sections of the Conference, in connection with the work of the missionaries, bids fair to accomplish in a few years what fifty years of appropriations without them has failed to do.

On Wednesday night another mass meeting was held at First Church. Similar preparations had been made, and the audience was immense. Dr. Potter again presided, and, after a brief presentation of important facts, introduced Bishop Granbery. The Bishop was at his best, and for one hour presented, in a most captivating and inspiring way, the salvation of the whole race. His clear review of the mission fields of the church brought just such information as the cause needs at this important hour. The number of preachers at this service had largely increased. The occasion was in every respect a great success.

Last night there were large meetings in four of our other churches in the city. Bishop Key spoke at Payne's Chapel; W. H. Haygood, Esq., and Bishop Granbery, at Evans' Chapel; Dr. W. H. Potter and Senator A. H. Colquitt, at St. Paul's, and Revs. M. J. Cofer and G. W. Duval, at Grace Church. So far as we have heard, the interest was not only sustained, but increased.

Bishop Hendrix was obliged to leave on Wednesday afternoon to attend an important District Conference in Tennessee. Bishops Granbery and Key left this morning for Nashville. The preachers, renewed in spirit and fired with greater zeal, have returned to their several fields to push forward the great cause.

No coming together of our chief pastors has ever accomplished more good than their visit to this city in the interest of foreign missions. We return the sincere thanks of Georgia Methodism for their presence. Let the good work, thus so auspiciously begun, go on throughout the entire church. Attack the great centers. Challenge the attention of the people by a programme of distinguished speakers and by such preparations as look to a great event, and the signs will appear with power.

O, for a mighty missionary revival throughout all our borders!

W. W. WADSWORTH.

ATLANTA, GA., April 28, 1887.

Letter from St. Louis, Mo.

MR. EDITOR: In the country we go by blazes and right and left-hand forks of the road. What itinerant preacher has not been directed to go to a certain place, take a right-hand fork, and "you can't miss the way." In the city we go by names and numbers. We take observations, then go and look and inquire till we find the place; but, like solving a problem in mathematics, the result is not always what we expected or wanted. To illustrate: I took the name and number and started to look for a religious newspaper. A gentleman pointed across the street, and said: "There is your number. Are you looking for a saloon?" I said, No. I was the last man in the world that had any use for a saloon. He said, "That's your number;" and it was a veritable saloon. The paper had been removed and the saloon had taken its place.

I have worshiped at several of the churches here and have made the acquaintance of most of the preachers in and about the city. They are a band of faithful and laborious men engaged in a great work, and are accomplishing much good. These pastors have their regular social meetings, prayer meetings, class meetings, missionary meetings and others for special objects. They also have a preachers' meeting on Monday morning, the presiding elder in the chair. They report in order the result of their labors of the Sabbath, advise with each other, and interchange views as to their future work. They are concentrating their efforts to build another church within the limits of the city, which is to cost not less than forty thousand dollars, of which thirty-four thousand have been collected, and they are confident that the balance will be forthcoming. I attended an alliance meeting composed of the city preachers of the different denominations. The chairman of a committee of a previous meeting reported on the propriety of evangelistic work in the city. The plan proposed was for six pastoral charges to concentrate their labors on Sunday nights, in a big tent pitched in a suitable place and, instead of a regular sermon have the preachers to alternate in exhortation, talk and prayers, interspersed with appropriate music and songs. One reason he gave for this innovation was that their evening congregations were growing less, and the service was becoming less interesting. He also said the demand for fine preaching now was greater than it ever had been, and the preachers to meet this demand exhausted themselves on their morning sermon, and had not the physical or mental ability to provide two such sermons for the day. Sanguine speeches were made on both sides, without reaching any definite conclusion. What surprised me was that the Presbyterians approved the plan and the Methodists opposed it. However, there is a Methodist preacher here with his tent and intends to commence evangelistic work. He attended the preachers' meeting, last Monday, and solicited the co-operation of the pastors; but they seemed to hesitate. One brother said, "Your tent would not be known from a theatre." He retorted by saying, "It would be very well if some of your theatre-going Methodists were caught in that net." I was inclined to believe that the retort was not enjoyed very much.

My own opinion is, that in these great cities there is a necessity for going out of the regular way in order to attract the masses. A few Sundays ago I attended service in one among the oldest churches in the city, in a populous neighborhood, and where it had been announced that a leading minister would preach, and there were only thirty-seven persons present, all told. They say the church is in the wrong place; but the command is, "Preach the gospel to every creature;" and the community was literally swarming with human creatures; yet they were not arrested.

You are now engaged in the work of revising the hymn book. Having so many editions of the hymn-book, with pages not corresponding, and which always creates confusion and a waste of time, would it not be well for your committee to stress the importance of having one edition, which alone is to be used in our pulpits and congregations. Our service of song needs to be controlled. It is no use to disguise the fact that in many of our churches a class of namby-pamby songs have well nigh elbowed off our standard book. As to the music, something ought to be done.

J. P.

The Editor.

We commend to our readers a thoughtful perusal of the following note from the Central Christian Advocate:

A large part of the labor of the editorial office is to collect and prepare news, and to select from manuscript contributions and the literature of the day what it is supposed will be interesting and profitable to the readers. It is not the duty of the editor to express an opinion on every topic demanding public attention; but to keep his readers well-informed in regard to current questions, and to encourage them to form impartial judgments. Least of all is it the duty of a responsible journal to keep silence on those questions which his readers may not see in the same light that he does. Indeed it is the first duty of journalism of the higher kind to keep itself free from partisanship of every kind. Therefore, it is frequently called upon to express opinions contrary to those entertained by a large number or the majority of the readers. The points of difference are commonly on a few questions only, and generally on those which are apt to be decided by impulse and feeling. A few readers pass hasty judgment upon the editor and condemn, and sometimes express their indignation freely, without considering that they are as apt to be mistaken as the editor who makes no profession of infallibility. The question should be rather, Is he honest in forming his opinions; is he under the influence of personal or selfish considerations? It is probable that he has a more independent position, and has no other ambition than to render the highest possible service to his readers.

Current Coins.

(Morning Star, Catholic.)

It was considered a great sacrilege for two ancient Israelites to lay hands on the ark of the covenant, and the act was punished with instant death, and yet we are constantly treated to the sight of Christians among us endeavoring to lay sacrilegious hands upon the holy day of the Lord, and murmuring because the civil power has most wisely inhibited its complete desecration. We are at a loss to comprehend how a Catholic can desire to devote to the purpose of gain the day which God saw fit to consecrate to his service.

(Southern Churchman.)

The angel said to the women who came to the sepulchre, "Ye seek Jesus which was crucified." These women were faithful to him when there was every temptation to induce them to be untrue. They followed an instinct of humanity in thus coming to weep at the grave of one whom they loved. Since they were so diligent in seeking Christ, God sent an angel to tell that he who had been crucified for their sins was now risen for their justification.

(Northern Christian Advocate.)

Doctor Hammond, of New York, has made a study of the subject of school-children's debility, and he declares that in almost every case investigated by him the breaking down of the children's health is attributable to indulgence in social dissipation—parties, dances and the like—rather than to over-exertion of the brain. The study alone would not have overthrown them; the dissipation alone might not; but the effort to keep up in their studies and to have a good time, too, is more than most children can sustain. Hence the break-down. Could any better argument be advanced to show the folly of allowing young people to indulge in the fashionable frivolities or pastimes of the day?

(Christian Index.)

A sermon which gives a juster conception of the wisdom of God, or of his power, or of his goodness, or of any of his attributes, is a good sermon. A sermon which gives us proper and impressive views of God's providence is a good sermon. A sermon which shows in scriptural light the depravity of human nature is a good sermon. A sermon which exhibits the person of Christ as he is, and was, and will be, is a good sermon. A sermon which makes clear the nature and extent of the work of Christ is a good sermon. A sermon which makes sin odious, and holiness excellent and lovely, is a good sermon. A sermon which explains and enforces any duty is a good sermon. In short, a sermon which makes clear to the mind and impressive on the heart any doctrine or duty set forth in the Word of God is a good sermon. Per contra, a sermon may make one feel very happy, and after all be a very poor sermon, for it may not be true. The object of a sermon is to do good, not to make one "feel good." The only way to do good to men's souls is to present faithfully and feelingly the truths of God's Word.

(Advance.)

It is not as nuns and monks that we are to live near to God. One does not necessarily get any nearer to God by fleeing away from his fellows. Least of all does one ever get nearer to God by shirking any duty, or any service it is possible to render for the helping of a burden-bearing humanity. Rather it is through this living near to God that one most surely receives the impulse, and secures the resource of sympathy which best fits him to go out into loving and helpful association with the poor and the distressed and the wayward who meet us everywhere.

There is comfort and strength and joy in living near to God. Sorrows, calamities, losses, defeats, the hard stress and pressure of the world, never seem so sore when the soul has sure hiding in God, and there is the compensation of his blessed fellowship. There would be more Paysons in our pulpits; there would be more Harlan Pages in our pews; there would be more Moodys down among the masses; there would be more Florence Nightingales on all the battle-fields where souls as well as bodies are slain; there would be more Mrs. Prentices to guide in "stepping heavenward," and more to follow along in the path, if only there were more souls living near to God.

THERE IS A STAR.

There is a star whose gentle light
Can pierce the deepest gloom of night;
Whose lustre is a beacon ray,
Prophetic of a fairer day.

There's a gem whose charms outshine
The glittering treasures of the mine;
And to its milder beam we turn
From all the orient gems that burn.

There is a meek-eyed blossom fair,
That blooms upon the desert bare;
Dim, oh! its fragrance is so sweet,
When wafted from its parched retreat.

There is a tender melody,
That like a balm falls soothingly
Upon the mourner's listening ear,
And gently dries the falling tear.

'Tis like a sunbeam's cheering ray,
That comes to steal our grief away;
Or with its mellow, golden light,
To make our happy days more bright.

'Tis like a spirit from above
That comes to fill our hearts with love;
Oh, life were barren without thee!
Man's kindest friend, sweet sympathy.

The Sunday-School Lesson for May 22, 1887.

BY T. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

THE PASSOVER.

Exodus xii, 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us."—1 Corinthians v, 7.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

The last lesson told us of the call of Moses to the deliverance of the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage. Never was mortal man called to a more difficult task. It was a task that no mortal could have accomplished without the continuous help of Omnipotent power. Really to accomplish it, the delegation of Omnipotent power to a mortal seemed necessary. Moses at will wielded a command over elements and agencies which had hitherto yielded only to the Divine authority. The conflict between Pharaoh, on the one hand, representing slavery, wrong, and the gods of the Egyptians, and Moses, on the other hand, representing freedom, right and God, was fierce and waged to the bitter end. A succession of ten plagues, commencing with the plague of turning all the water into blood, and ending with the death of the first-born of all the Egyptians, "from the first-born of Pharaoh that sitteth upon his throne even unto the first-born of the maid-servant that is behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts." Each succeeding plague was so full of scourging and affliction as to cause Pharaoh to relent and agree to let the Israelites go. But cupidity and cruelty and revenge would again harden his heart, and he would break his most solemn vows. The destruction of the first-born was such a terrible indication of the retributive power of Jehovah that he was constrained to let the people go even in the manner which Moses dictated. Indeed, the Egyptians themselves were urgent that the children of Israel should be sent out of the land; for they said, "We be all dead men." Their chief place of rendezvous before beginning the march was at Rameses, which was probably the chief city in Goshen. They made every preparation, and their exodus was a triumphal departure. The authorized version of the Scriptures very improperly says that they "borrowed of the Egyptians jewels of silver and gold," etc., and that the Egyptians "lent unto them such things." "Borrow" and "lend" are unfortunate and incorrect translations. The New Version very properly gives this reading—"And they asked of the Egyptians jewels," etc. (the original means demand as well as ask); and the New Version also gives this instead of the phrase where lent occurs: "And the Lord gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they let them have what they asked." Writers unfriendly to the Bible have cited the borrowing and loaning idea as an evidence of the God of justice sanctioning fraud. If said writers had been as wise as they were critical, they would have seen that the transaction was simply a commercial one. The Israelites demanded an outfit for their pilgrimage as a slight compensation for their long and hard service, and the Egyptians honored their demand by supplying their wants without any expectation of ever receiving anything in return. The grand army of 300,000 men on foot, besides the women and children and the mixed multitude, swelling the number, according to Dr. Clarke, to 3,263,000, must have been an imposing sight, indeed, as they slowly, and, by the divinely appointed order, marched on toward Succoth, their first camping-place. Exodus xii, 38, states that the sojourning of the Israelites in Egypt was "four hundred and thirty years"—a very remarkable increase from the seventy souls who went down with Jacob into Egypt. It is made more remarkable still when the best chronologists state that Israel was in Egypt only two hundred and fifteen years, and that it is necessary to begin the count from the time in which Jacob entered Canaan in order to make out the four hundred and thirty years.

THE PASCHAL LAMB.

Verse 2. "This month shall be the beginning of months." Before this time the Jewish year began with Nisri, answering to a part of our September, because they supposed that God had created the world in this month, when all the fruits were ripe and the earth appeared in its perfection. But now the beginning of the year was to be reckoned from the month Abib, called by Nehemiah (ii, 1) and Esther (iii, 7) Nisan, and corresponding to the period from our fifteenth of March to fifteenth of April; the time when "the barley is ripe" and "the fig tree is in blossom."

3. "In the tenth day of this month." As the Passover was instituted on the fourteenth, they commenced to get ready for it four days before. "A lamb;" either a kid of the goats or a lamb of the sheep. This was to be kept separate from the flock for four days, for the purpose of cleansing and for preparation for its sacred destiny. "A lamb for a house." The whole host of Israel was divided into twelve tribes, these tribes into families, the families into houses, and the houses into individuals.

4. "If the household be too little." If there were not persons enough in one family to eat a whole lamb, then two families must join together. Josephus says that ten persons were required to make up a paschal communion.

5. "Your lamb shall be without blemish." The Jewish ritual was very strict in requiring perfection in the animals for sacrifice. "Thou shalt not sacrifice unto the Lord thy God any bullock or sheep wherein is blemish, or any evil favoredness: for that is an abomination unto the Lord thy God." (Deut. xvii, 1.) There was a double reason why the paschal lamb should be without blemish. If it were not, it would subject the sacrificer to the malediction: "Cursed be the deceiver, who hath a male in his flock and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing;" and it would also suggest a sacrilegious disregard of the eternal Lamb, whose death the paschal lamb typified.

THE PREPARATION.

Verse 6. "The whole assembly—shall kill it in the evening." Any person might kill it on behalf of the congregation, the act of killing being not confined to priests, as was the case in most of the sacrifices. It was evening from noon until night. During this period it was lawful to kill the lamb. About 3 P. M. was the usual time. It gives a sacred significance to this hour, that Christ should have at that very period died on the cross. At the self-same hour when the paschal lambs used to bleed and die in the households of Israel, "Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us" in Calvary.

7. "Take of the blood." They were to take a hyssop branch and sprinkle with the blood the two sides and the upper portion of the door. This is typical of the sacrifice and atonement to be made by Christ, as is shown in Hebrews ix, 13, 14, and in other places. No blood was to be placed on the lower sill of the door. It would have violated the well-understood, though not yet recorded, precept, that men "should not tread under foot the Son of God, nor count the blood of the covenant wherewith they were sanctified an unholy thing."

8. "They shall eat the flesh—roast with fire, with unleavened bread and bitter herbs." They were forbidden to eat the flesh raw, because it would have been imitating the Egyptians, who were in the habit of eating raw flesh in honor of their god, Osiris. They were to eat it roast with fire, because it was a quicker and readier way than to wait for pots to boil it in, as they did with other sacrifices. The leavened bread was prescribed because that could be prepared with more despatch, and probably because being less palatable than bread risen with yeast. It would remind them of the grievous servitude whence they had been rescued: but more emphatically because leaven suggests corruption on account of its fermentation and, therefore, it would be an unsuitable emblem of "Christ, our Passover." The bitter herbs are thought to be wild lettuce, or hoarhound, and were intended to keep before the minds of the Jewish people their hard bondage in Egypt, and, morally, the bitterness of sin.

10. "Let nothing of it remain until the morning." This was to prevent putrefaction. It would have been unseemly that anything offered to God should become offensive, which would soon happen in that hot climate. If any remained after all had eaten, it was burned with fire as with other sacrifices.

THE PASSOVER.

Verse 11. "With your loins girded, your shoes on your feet, your staff in your hand; ye shall eat it in haste." All these directions indicate that they must hold themselves ready to depart even at a moment's warning. The signal might be given at any time. The long flowing robes which all wore must be tucked up in their girdles so as not to impede their movements. The shoes, which were invariably left at the door during ordinary feasts and substituted by sandals, must now be on the feet, so as to occasion no delay. The staff was a usual appurtenance to the people in those days who traveled on foot. "It is the Lord's Passover." That is, the angel of death was about to pass over the land, and only the houses protected by the sprinkled blood should be exempted from his ruthless claim.

12. "Against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment." All the plagues sent upon the Egyptians were intended to destroy idolatry in them, and also in the children of Israel, and each particular plague was to show the abjectness and impotency of their gods. This last dispensation of vengeance—the slaying of the first-born—showed completely their utter inability to deliver, and fully established God's claim to supremacy: "I am the Lord."

13. "A memorial—forever." The paschal lamb continued to be slain with sacred obedience until Christ ate it with his disciples in the upper room at Jerusalem, and then substituted for it the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, which has been reverently observed for eighteen centuries ever to the present, and which shall never cease to be observed until he drink anew of the fruit of the vine in his Father's kingdom.

The Covenant with Noah.

MR. EDITOR: In reading some time since the exposition of our Sunday-school lesson—Genesis vi, 18—in our Sunday-school Magazine published at Nashville, I do not find a very satisfactory explanation of the above text, which is as follows: "But with thee will I establish my covenant." What this covenant is, the editor does not even pretend to say—whether it was a new covenant just established with Noah, or one previously established. Now, if my humble opinion is worth anything, I think it is quite clear that it was a covenant previously established, i. e.—the covenant established with Adam. God had covenanted with Adam and his posterity that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head—meaning by this, of course, that they should be restored from their lost and fallen state to the state and image in which they were created, through or by the interposition of one who should be born of the then present race of man. The condition, on the part of man, for entering into and being made a partaker of this covenant, in order that he might possess and enjoy its benefits, was faith in this promise. Now Adam, no doubt, and numbers of his posterity had died in this faith—looking for a Messiah not yet come. But, long ages before this promise is come about, God is about to destroy the world—the race of man—the seed of the woman, for their wickedness, by a flood. Now, what is to become of the faith, the hopes, the expectations of those righteous persons who had died "in the faith?" Why, just this: one righteous man is found who, with his family, is to be spared from the general destruction, that the "seed of the woman" may be continued, and the covenant of God established and perpetuated in the earth.

This, I believe, is what is meant when God said to Noah, "But with thee will I establish my covenant." If God had not spared Noah, and had cut off all mankind in the days of the flood, then his covenant with Adam and others who had lived and died could never have been fulfilled, and his word to them must have failed, Christ could not have been born as the seed of Eve, and those who had died in the faith could not have been redeemed in this way. This was a very important consideration, not to be overlooked by God in the day of his anger and general visitation upon man for his transgressions. God, by preserving Noah alive, established or kept his covenant entered into before with Adam and his posterity.

Furthermore, I believe, if Noah, or some other righteous person who might have perpetuated the seed of the woman in the earth, had not been found in the days of the general iniquity, then God would have found some other way to punish, but would not utterly have destroyed men from the face of the earth.

S. J. COTTON.

"An Appeal for Help!"

Dear Brethren of the South: Some of you have received a circular letter with the above title, "An Appeal for Help." We need your help badly! Our church property here is worth $3,000, and, because of an "illegal quibble," our property is at stake for $350. This is a very promising point in our Methodism, a town of 4,000 inhabitants and growing very rapidly. "Home resources are all exhausted." To hold our property we must have the money at once. Won't you please help us out? Read the letter to your people, and ask that they contribute one dollar or more to our needy, yet deserving church enterprise. If there is a church in the South that is so perilously situated as are we (at present), send on your "appeal," and we will make you an offering of some amount.

Address, SAM. M. CHASE.

From the Work.

MYRTLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We hope it is in order, and will be of some interest to, at least, a few of the numerous readers of the ADVOCATE, to see a short account of our work on the Hickory Flat circuit, North Mississippi Conference. It is true, our success has not been very great, but we praise God for the measure that has attended our efforts thus far. We are very anxious to have a genuine revival of family religion, i. e.—the erection of a family altar in every Christian home, and each Christian reading the Bible through annually. We have several pledges for eighteen new family altars, and found eight old ones among our brethren, making twenty-six in all. We have a class of fifteen boys and girls who are reading the New Testament through, and 110 grown persons have promised to read the Bible through within twelve months. We have seven Sunday-schools, all well supplied with our own literature from our Publishing House. Six of these schools we have made up mainly and put into operation since the spring came. We make it a rule to hold church Conference every month and class meetings every two months, at each appointment. We have five regular prayer meetings and five class meetings on the circuit.

We have a hen missionary society of just fifty members; therefore, we have fifty hens laying eggs and raising chickens for the Lord. So the good sisters are going to do their part in helping us raise our collections ordered by the Annual Conference. Indeed, they are always willing to do their part, as a rule. Our stewards and people are taking good care of us. Our first Quarterly Conference minutes show more than one-fourth of our salary paid. Our congregations are growing larger each Sunday. We had a spiritual meeting last Sunday, and received one member into the church by certificate. We are working and praying for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the people throughout the bounds of the circuit. We believe we shall realize our desires, for even already we have had a "foretaste" at one or two of our appointments; and at the fireside, as we make our pastoral visits, we have shouted the praise of God with our members. Praise God for his blessings!

Fraternally,

W. M. ADAMS.

WINCHESTER CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: My second Quarterly Conference convened at Big Rock Church, April 16 and 17. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, was present, and in his usual manner presided to the edification of all. His sermon on Saturday and Sunday was good and well suited to the occasion. The spiritual and financial condition of this circuit is good; several churches have paid half the assessment. The people are rallying to the support of the church as never before. We have five Sabbath-schools, two prayer meetings, with an increased interest all over the work. This is one of the best circuits in the Meridian district. We lack one thing: There is no parsonage on the work; but we are laboring now to buy, and hope to have everything ready for next preacher—house bought and furnished; for he who comes will find as intelligent and cultured people as can be found anywhere. I am laboring to get up a revival on the ADVOCATE. Do not judge my work by the new subscribers I have sent. I heard a lady say recently that she liked the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE better than any other. We ought to send you the twenty thousand subscribers. Many nice and valuable presents continue to come to our home. Our meat bill has not been more than one dollar since Conference; potatoes and syrup have not cost us anything. One good lady sent us five chickens yesterday, and none of this detracts from the preacher's salary. If "Stowe is incorrigible, and his master mortified" at a package of grits, or anything else, we look at the spirit and not the act.

J. M. MORSE.

ENTERPRISE AND HEIDELBERG.

MR. EDITOR: After having filled the largest and most laborious work in the Mississippi Conference for four years, I was fully prepared to appreciate a small and excellent charge like this one. God has never given us a home among a more kind, sociable and generous people. Our parsonage is very comfortable and well furnished. Storms are not of such frequent occurrence here as some of our brethren report elsewhere. We have had but one. That began on the evening before our arrival, and continues to the present time. It is astonishing to see how these storms continue to blow through protracted drouths. We are moving in every department of church work. We have just passed through a very successful meeting at this place. I was efficiently assisted for more than a week by Bro. J. T. Nicholson, of Hazlehurst. There is a great deal—in fact, everything, if there is no one to kill it—in getting the right man. Fortunately, we exactly hit it in Bro. Nicholson. A number of other brethren also rendered valuable help. The meeting resulted in a general awakening and revival in the church, and in twenty-three accessions. We have had even forty accessions to date, and have baptized twenty-nine children. Our finances are very well up. I forwarded, in March, our foreign mission assessment in full. Our Sunday-schools are doing finely. The Woman's Missionary Society and Woman's Wesleyan Society are in full operation. A woman's prayer meeting has been recently organized. We breathe in constant gratitude to Almighty God.

B. S. RAYNER, P. C.

CANTON STATION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: This is a financial report; but the relation between the financial and the spiritual in church life is very close. There are few better tests of the spiritual state of a church than its financial condition. No church will prosper in spiritual things whose finances are badly managed. About as much depends on the Board of Stewards as on the pastor.

Thy Canton Methodist Church has a good financial system, and keeps up in her finances. The assessment for foreign missions was raised without any trouble in March. I have never served a people who were more willing to give, and to give liberally, than these have shown themselves to be this year. They now propose to purchase a new organ, and to paint the church, and are raising money for those objects.

The Woman's Missionary Society is doing well. They have raised for the Woman's Board of Missions over $50 during their fiscal year just closed. Twenty-six dollars of this amount was collected in their mite boxes. These were opened at a public meeting recently held. Dr. Andrews, of Jackson, came in response to their invitation, and delivered an address that was much enjoyed by all who heard it. His visit to his old pastoral charge, and his sermon at eleven A. M., as well as his address at night, were highly appreciated by pastor and people.

W. B. LEWIS.

PONTCHATOULA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me a small space in your excellent paper to tell how we are getting on. Our kind, loving pastor (J. W. Sandell) is with us doing good work. Everybody seems to like him. We have a little Sunday-school and a Juvenile Woman's Missionary Society at Wesley Chapel. Our Sunday-school did not go into winter-quarters. We went every Sunday it did not rain. We are using some of the Sunday-school literature from Nashville; we like it very much. Our missionary society was organized November 21, 1886, with only seven members; now we have fifteen. Some were very much opposed to our having such a society, but they say very little about it. Now they have found out we do not mind it. We took for our motto one of Sam Jones' sayings, "To do your level best;" and we intend to do our best, not minding who oppose us. Then there were the cheering words of Mrs. Dr. Andrews, in one of the old ADVOCATES. She says, "Many auxiliaries, at first hedged about by difficulties, are now prosperous." So we took courage and moved along; but our church is not as much alive as it ought to be. There is not enough of the church papers taken and read. Some of the members of the church who are able to take our church papers say, "They are too high entirely;" and I say, "Lord, have mercy on their poor, stingy souls." I can not do without our church papers; I would become a drone in the great busy hive. Well, I will close this rambling note.

Yours respectfully,

NETTIE C. HOYES.

WAYNESBORO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a very interesting and profitable meeting of ten days' duration at State Line. Congregations were very large and appreciative from beginning to end. It was not only a "revival of religion," but of "righteousness" also. The Word was attended with power and demonstration of the Spirit, convicting and converting, and to edification. The "dry bones" were electrified into new life, and the pure marrow of the gospel gave elasticity to the "stiff joints" and "feeble knees." Truly, it was a gracious season to all. There were four additions to the church, one of whom was a Baptist. Many in the church were made happy in the love of God for the first time. Baptized four children, and did some good work for the ADVOCATE. Rev. J. A. Godfrey was with us two days, and preached twice with telling effect, with the vigor of former years. We are in the midst of a prohibition campaign, a local option election having been ordered on May 17. Nothing is left undone necessary to gain the victory for prohibition. The news is encouraging from all parts of the country, assuring success.

E. F. EDGAR.

CARLISLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: On yesterday our church in this place was set apart for the service of God. The occasion was one of interest on several accounts.

Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D., after a sermon which won for him many admirers, dedicated the church in a very graceful and solemn manner.

In the evening Bro. Howell, of Rocky Spring, made an earnest and stirring appeal to those who were in bondage to sin to cast off their fetters and accept freedom through the blood of Christ.

The exercises were the more interesting because, when the church was first projected, its building seemed impossible. The triumph of those who built it over difficulties of various kinds, over discouragement and lack of means, realizes our Lord's promise, "All things are possible to him that believeth." The Lord will reward those who have labored for him. May he reward them by making the house they have built for him a place especially blessed by his presence!

"And in the great decisive day,
When God the nations shall survey,
May it before the world appear,
That crowds were born to glory here."

Happiness.

Why does it take us so long to learn that happiness is not our birthright in this world, and that while we may expect gleams of it now and then to lighten life's pathway, it will not come in floods, or as we are looking for it—in such quantities and of such a description as to make us quiet or contented with our lot?

Life is rather like a journey through some hill country. It is long and arduous; there are ups and downs, and we must plod along patiently, enduring the hardships as best we can. Now and then we shall arrive at some pleasant valley where we may pitch our tents and remain awhile. But we have no abiding place, no "continuing city." It is always a journey, always a pilgrimage toward something yet unknown.

How foolish a traveler over the Sahara would be, if when resting in some pleasant oasis he were to say: "This is what I should be enjoying all the time: this green grass, these cooling streams, the pleasant perfume of the flowers, the shadow of these trees, should be always mine." How quickly his companion would say: "How little you must have learned by past experience, to fancy that a journey can be made up of pleasant hours; that you can get over the surface of the earth and encounter nothing but soft odors, pleasing sensations, and gratifying adventures!"

No; it was intended that we should enjoy just enough of these to prevent us from becoming discouraged and disheartened, and from feeling ourselves unable to go on. It is an arduous business, this of living, but it is not so hard that we may not be equal to it. The blessings of life are much more equally distributed than we imagine. The man who has troubles and trials in his business will find that he has some warm loving hearts to cheer and encourage him at home; he that has all things smooth in a financial way will have his soul torn and riven by domestic troubles and children who disappoint his expectations. "The heart knoweth his own bitterness," writes Solomon, and so every heart should be cognizant of its own joy.

There is enough, always enough, joy and happiness meted out to us to make life a valuable thing, and to enable us to live it nobly and satisfactorily to the end. But satisfaction is not here; this is our battle ground; the reward lieth farther on according as we have done our duty in the field.—Mary B. Vandyne, in Christian at Work.

Home the Place for Our Sick.

Home comforts and the congenial society of loving friends will do more toward effecting a cure, if accompanied by proper treatment, than a long and lonely sojourn in some far-away famed health resort. One of the saddest word-pictures ever drawn is that of the resort for consumptives described in Daudet's "Numa Rumestan." Visitors to Pau or Nice are constantly reminded of the futility of the climate cure by the deaths that thin the ranks of the hopeful patients. Drs. Starkey & Palen therefore recommend the Home Treatment by their Compound Oxygen to patients suffering from lung or throat diseases as far preferable to a Southern or European journey, with all the attendant vexation and expense that traveling entails. They will send from their office, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., a complete treatise on the use of this new healing agent. It costs nothing.

Family Worship.

President Hyde, of Bowdoin College, gave an excellent address on Religion in the Family, some weeks since, from which we make the following extract:

"The decline of family prayers is an evil no less serious than the decline of church attendance. The cause of this decline is the same as that which brings decay and deadness in the church. Family worship first becomes formal; then irksome; then neglected; then abandoned. Family worship should be like family life, free and unconstrained. There should be perfect freedom to ask questions on the meaning of the passage read, and to throw in comments and explanations. The austerity and somberness with which many parents conduct family worship make the children dread rather than love it. Here is one instance which I know to have occurred in a strict Puritan household. The only son, a boy of eight or ten years, was following as best he could the morning lesson. Struck by some startling and paradoxical expression, he ventured to inquire, 'Father, what does that mean?' 'Hold your gabble, and study your Bible,' was the reassuring and edifying answer he received. And yet I have no doubt that for the thirty years that followed, in which that son took no interest and saw no beauty in religion, the father was secretly praying all the time for his conversion, and wondering why his prayers were not answered.

"Again, either by alternate reading or by repeating verses, by singing a hymn or by joining in the Lord's Prayer, let all, especially the younger members of the family, participate. It is well that the mother teach each child individually to pray. But if the child is to grow up to honor and respect religion as an open thing, of which he is not ashamed, he must learn something more than secret prayer, or prayer with the mother only; he must have his part with the whole household, father and guests included. Our children must be taught the masculine religion of thought and outward expression, as well as the feminine religion of sentiment and inward feeling, if they are to go out from our homes to found Christian homes of their own; if their religion is to stand the wear and tear of real life."

The Cutest Little Things.

"Cute"! he echoed: "Well, I don't know as the adjective would have occurred to me in just that connection. But if you mean that they do their work thoroughly, yet make no fuss about it; cause no pain or weakness; and, in short, are everything that a pill ought to be, and nothing that it ought not, then I agree that Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are about the cutest little things going!"

MODERN MISSIONS.—Amid the great changes in modern times nothing is more noteworthy than the complete revolution that has taken place in literary and commercial circles, governments and statesmen, concerning foreign missions. Within less than a hundred years it was the custom to pour ridicule upon all efforts to make known the gospel to the heathen and to bring them under its influence. Even those who would not go so far as to make sport of such enterprises looked upon them as well-meant but visionary. But those who have no regard for missionary work as a spiritual and saving power are now compelled to admit that it has 'done more than anything else to bring to light the past in heathen lands, to extend the knowledge of natural history, to correct the geography of the world, to make known the manner and customs of different nations, to promote the study of comparative philology, to introduce the customs and pursuits of civilization, and to change the modes of life in unchristian countries. The church and the facilities it carries with it are admitted to be the most important factors in the introduction of the sciences, industry, purity of life, commerce, and manufactures to lands hitherto destitute.

If you expect to go East this summer do not fail to send to the United States Hotel, Boston, for a copy of their very complete Guide to Boston and its suburbs. Ten cents in stamps will give you this with elegant maps of the City and Harbor.

WHY WORSHIP.—The worship of God and its importance, we must have reflected about. The reason we worship is not to pay God compliments, or to suppose he is gratified by servile flattery. Let all such feelings be forever driven from our thoughts as vain and foolish. We must seek further for the reason why we worship.

Coming into this world ignorant, there is no other way of getting knowledge than by contact with other minds, directly or indirectly. We can attain to no knowledge of God save by contact or communion with him. Not to pay compliments to God do we bend the knee and give him homage and worship, but that by worship we may know him, and by knowing come to appreciate his character and love him. In offering praise to the Almighty this is to adjudge and ascribe to him just and generous and noble deeds and motives, that in contemplation of them we may become noble and just and generous and good. Abjectness, servility, flattery—with these God has been worshiped. Men, afraid of him, seek to propitiate his favor by such acts of prostration. But this is not to worship God. He asks no such worship from us. He wants no praise from any man who can not see in him the highest good and noblest character. All excellence is in God, and all beauty. It was a beautiful utterance of Charles Kingsley: "God is such a beautiful God." If we want to see and know God's character, we must worship him, and by seeing it more and more come to admire his character, and with admiration grow like what we admire. And there is no other way of growing like God. This is why we are called upon to worship God, that we may grow like him; for not to be like supreme excellence and beauty is to get deeper into depths of moral degradation and ruin.—Southern Churchman.

MANUAL TRAINING.—In a recent address before the Industrial Education Association of New York, President Gillman, of Johns Hopkins University, spoke in the following strong terms in favor of manual training:

"A man is a better thinker, a more accurate worker, if he can reproduce with his hand what he has thought with his brain. We are apt to think that no improvement can be made in education without great labor and expense, but I want to emphasize the ease with which handicraft can be introduced by systematic effort and at small outlay. For the girl, and also for the boy, there is nothing better than the needle and scissors, and, particularly for the boy, the jackknife. Still more fundamental is the pencil. Drawing, in my opinion, lies at the bottom of all industrial training. It enables one to delineate with precision that which he wishes to express better than he can do it with the language of the pen. I do not mean for the sake of making pleasing pictures, but to record in the most concise language our thoughts. This cry for handicraft does not come chiefly from those who wish to make greater physical returns, but largely from those who teach by the printed page—litterateurs like Matthew Arnold, philosophers like John Stuart Mill, and theologians like Canon Farrar. The hand of the nineteenth century is weak and worthless. College students are unable to work with their hands. I believe that a great deal of the American lack of accuracy and fidelity, the American superficiality and lazy way of doing things, come from a lack of training of the hand with relation to the mind."

Endorsement of a Leading Physician.

"I have used Darbys Prophylactic Fluid extensively as a disinfectant and deodorizer, and find it an admirable preparation. Whenever there are offensive discharges from wounds, abscesses, etc., it is wonderful in its action. I consider it the best preparation I know as a gargle in diphtheria or scarlet fever."

J. CRESSWELL LEWIS, M. D., Phila.

It is claimed sometimes that one can be just as good a Christian outside as inside the church. Not so. At any rate, not so except in rare instances. There is a sense of responsibility when one has openly covenanted to walk with Jesus Christ and to be true to him, not likely to be felt otherwise. There is comfort, too, and strength and inspiration, in the thought of standing in the circle of those who have first locked hands with the pierced hand of Jesus and then with each other.—Advance.

Being accustomed to spells of nervous prostration, for which I tried every known tonic, I most heartily give my testimony that Moxie is the leader of them all. There is nothing like it. It makes you forget that you have ever been nervous.—Mrs. P. P. Lyon, leading society lady in St. Louis, Mo.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 20, 1884.

DR. J. BRADFIELD: Dear Sir—Some fifteen years ago I examined the recipe of Female Regulator, and carefully studied authorities in regard to its components, and then, as well as now, pronounced it to be the most scientific and skillful combination of the really reliable remedial vegetable agents known to science, to act directly on the womb and uterine organs, and the organs and parts sympathizing directly with those; and, therefore, providing a specific remedy for all diseases of the womb and of the adjacent organs and parts. Yours truly,

CRYING BABIES

ARE MADE

GOOD NATURED, HEALTHY, HEARTY,

BY THE USE OF

Lactated Food

Babies do not cry if they are satisfied, and they can not be satisfied if they are not properly nourished by their food, or if it produces irritation of stomach or bowels.

Very many mothers can not properly nourish their children, and the milk of many mothers produces bad effects in the child because of constitutional disease or weakness.

For in such cases there is a remedy in

LACTATED FOOD.

Hundreds of physicians testify to its great value. It will be relished when even lime water and milk is rejected by the stomach, hence it is of great value to all invalids, in either chronic or acute cases.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctor's bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

I Owe My Life.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I
Could not move!
I shrunk!
From 238 lbs. to 126! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters.
Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles I was not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. 'To Hop Bitters I owe my life.'"

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1886. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headache,
Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.
No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure, until I used Hop Bitters.
The first bottle
Nearly cured me;
The second made me as well and strong as when a child.
"And I have been so to this day."
My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious
"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint.
"Pronounced, by the second best physicians—
"Incurable!"
Seven bottles of your Bitters cured him and I know of the

In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters.
And many more are using them with great benefit. "They almost do miracles!"

Hardened Liver.

Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.
Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were pulled up and filled with water.
All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave.

Briefs.

From the annual report of the Board of Missions we glean some figures that will be interesting to our readers. In our foreign missions we have property valued as follows: In Brazil, $62,441; China missions, $161,500; Central Mexican Mission, $92,973; Mexican Border Mission, $38,024. In the home missions as follows: In Columbia Conference, $39,550; Denver Conference, $90,223; Florida Conference, $44,183; German Mission, $37,350; Indian Mission, $37,475; Los Angeles Conference, $52,675; Montana Conference, $38,200; Pacific Conference, $42,400; Northwest Texas Conference, $6,175; West Texas Conference, $14,000; Western Conference, $63,200. It will be seen from this that we own property in our foreign mission fields valued at $354,938, and in our domestic fields property valued at $465,431. Add these together and we have $820,369 worth of mission property. Besides supporting our missionaries and keeping up our mission schools, we have accumulated this large property.

This ought to be an answer to the question, "What becomes of our contributions to missions?" It certainly answers, in a practical and palpable way, the question, "Do missions pay?" And it shows our people in what direction much of the money contributed for missions has gone. And it demonstrates the fact that the church intends to stay in these places and use this property in the great cause of spreading the religion of our Lord. Can anyone contemplate these figures, and study out their special meaning, and yet say that we are doing nothing in this great work? Can anyone look at these evidences of the success of our zeal and consecration and not be filled with the desire to use all lawful means to increase that zeal and consecration until the heart of the church shall be thrilled with the holy ambition to double her diligence and strain her every energy in pushing forward this great work?

The statistical returns of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for 1886-87, are now all in, and the following are the results: Traveling preachers, 4,444; local preachers, 5,989; members, 1,056,028—total ministry and membership, 1,065,451, showing an increase of 28 traveling preachers, 46 local preachers, 75,383 members, and of ministers and members, 75,457. These figures express facts for which all good people will rejoice and give thanks. And from the indications the outlook is bright for the present ecclesiastical year. Let us go at it, brethren, and keep at it until the end.

A clergyman made a remark to a Manchester (N. H.,) Mirror reporter, which is applicable to more churches than one. "I have got," said he, "the best lot of people in my church I ever met with. They get up entertainments, suppers and dinners, which are models of their kind; they pay their bills with more promptness than any people I ever saw; in fact, they do everything in the world except the thing for which the church was legitimately designed. And what can I do about it?"

A copy of the ADVOCATE should be placed in the hands of those who have recently united with the church. They particularly need its help.

Editorial Correspondence.

I had the pleasure and privilege of preaching, Sunday morning, to Dr. J. P. McFerrin's Elm Street congregation; but a rheumatic leg, from which I have had several weeks of suffering, made it a painful service to me. It was quarterly meeting occasion, and the presiding elder, Dr. R. K. Brown, was present and administered the sacrament to a large number of communicants. There is a feature of this church which, to me, is very curious indeed and—I hesitate not to say—ought not to be. The membership numbers eleven hundred and the house will not hold over six hundred, so that nearly half of them are homeless. If they should all take a notion to go to church the same day, there would be some regular school-boy "scronging" to obtain seats. I really think we ought to have some way of preventing such large memberships in our churches. My idea of a church is, that every member ought to be engaged in church work; but with such large memberships that idea can never be realized. And, then, it is an utter impossibility for one pastor to do efficient pastoral work among so many people. It seems to me that if these people in Elm Street were divided into two congregations, with two pastors, their power for Christian work would be more than doubled. The very largeness of the membership puts a damper upon the zeal of the pastor at the beginning and keeps it there through all the year. I listened at night to a very edifying sermon on "The Spirituality of Divine Worship," by Dr. McLean, of Georgetown, Texas. There is a marked difference between Sunday here and Sunday in our city. Here there are very many evangelist churches of all kinds, and they are generally thronged with worshipers.

The Bishops are all here and are now in session, laying out their work for the next year. We are to have some missionary addresses by the Bishops who have visited the foreign fields, and, no doubt, the missionary pulse of the church will be quickened by the information thus imparted by eye-witnesses. Surely it needs to be aroused, if the figures of the secretary and treasurer are any indication of the zeal of the church. The Hymn Book Committee are patiently doing their difficult work, which they hope to finish and deliver over to the inspection and for the approval of the college of Bishops in a couple of days.

The sublimest thing I have seen here is the plodding leisure of the street cars. With little bob-tail cars, one-third smaller than ours, to which are attached two good-sized mules to each, the slowness of travel is simply exasperating. I understand that people here do not ride in the cars to save time, but to save legs. The people seem to be used to it, and I have settled down into the conclusion that if they can afford to stand it all the time, I can afford to stand it for a few days.

Last evening Dr. McFerrin was reported as dying; this morning he is better than he has been in two weeks. What a tenacious hold some men do have upon life! Here is a man about eighty years old, who has not taken enough food in a fortnight to sustain a jay-bird, and prostrated with disease, and yet he holds on with a tenacity that has surprised his friends and upset all the opinions of his physicians. But he has done his work—and a grand work it has been in many respects—and is ready for the call of the Master to "come up higher."

Quite a city is being laid out on the Cumberland river, west of Nashville. A syndicate has bought a large tract of land there, and have its forces at work making streets and laying off lots, and propose to begin to sell some time during the present month. The situation is beautiful, and it is proposed to make a manufacturing town, and to call it West Nashville. If it becomes a success, it will, in a measure, be a rival of the present city, as it is to be a distinct and separate town.

The Vanderbilt campus at this time is a most charming place. There are one hundred and fifty varieties of trees, all putting on their spring attire, and the grasses and clover covering the earth with green, and the many-colored flowers peeping out to get a look at the sun, and the birds singing their joyful lays—all present a scene of surpassing beauty. If a student can not make progress in his studies with such an environment, the "root of the matter is not in him," and he would do well to flee away to other scenes. In Wesley Hall there are twenty-two young men studying for the ministry. The course requires three years for its completion, and embraces all that is necessary to equip a young preacher for his great work. I have wondered, what will be the effect on the young man, of the contrast in his experience and surroundings, between studying here in this delightful place and practicing there on a poor piney-woods circuit among a simple-minded, yet ignorant and poor people? I confess, I believe it would have a depressing effect upon me. I believe, however, in giving our young ministers the best education they will take, because they are to be the leaders of the people, and it has come to the point that the uneducated can not lead, nor ought they. C. W. C.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 4, 1887.

The May meetings, when the Bishops and the various Boards composed of men from different sections of the church come together, in this place, are looked to with great interest. It is a matter of no small moment when the foremost men in the church meet in annual session to review the work of the past year and lay out the work for the coming year. The great interests of the church are the highest interests of the country. The meeting of the representatives of the church of Christ means more for the good of the land than the assembling of the Legislatures, for the progress of God's cause is the highest form of civilization.

The week has been one of great enjoyment to "the people called Methodists" hereabouts. Wednesday evening the missionary cause was presented in several churches. Bishop Galloway spoke in McKendree about the Indians, and our work among them; Bishop Granbery, at Tulip Street, gave an account of his visit to Brazil, and what we are doing to evangelize that great empire; and at Elm Street, Bro. Watkins, from Mexico, gave a thrilling account of the progress of the gospel among the Mexicans. On Thursday evening there was a general mass meeting at McKendree in the interest of the woman's mission work. Bishop Wilson gave a detailed account of what our women are doing in China; Bishop Granbery reviewed their work in Brazil; Bishop Key told the audience what they are doing on the Mexican border, and Bishop Galloway gave a recital of their work among the Indians. In all the fields the Woman's Board is doing good and successful work through the instrumentality of the schools which have been established. And in all these fields the work is enlarging, and at home the laborers are offering themselves; but the Board is limited in its operations for want of money necessary to occupy these enlarging fields. The cause of God does not progress as it would if the church at home would afford the means by which these inviting places could be occupied and these open doors entered.

The Hymn Book Committee turned its work over to the Bishops for review to-day. The committee has worked at this perplexing business carefully and patiently. The committee has had the advantage of consulting all the late hymnals and has made some choice selections, which will delight the ears of our people. I don't see why our book now is not the best one extant. We have had the cream to select from, and I think ours is the "creme de la creme."

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 6, 1887.

Greenville District Conference.

The undersigned, with Bishop Duncan, took the train at Ethel, on the Mississippi Valley railroad, at 12:50 P. M., April 27, and at 10:37 o'clock the same day we were met at Greenville by two most pleasant men known to this scribe as a committee of reception and domiciliation—R. M. Standifer and T. Y. Ramsey, Jr. Happy is that Conference, District or Annual, which has them in that function. The Bishop is put out of the carriage at the gate of that matriarch, Mrs. Theobald, just entered upon her ninetieth year—yet vigorous in mind, though crippled by an accident at Monteagle last summer. Yet they say that Mississippi bottom is unhealthy! The only thing the matter with our mother is Monteagle—she has a bad case of that. I am put at Mrs. A. B. Finlay's. The man who goes there and grumbles had better try home awhile by himself and let his wife take his place as a lay delegate.

But the Conference meets 9 A. M., April 28. The Bishop opens with great deliberation and announces his plan. Then he goes to work unearthing facts. He gets bottom facts and bottom figures—figures of speech as well as numerals. They are all of good quality and greater quantity than heretofore. The presiding elder, the Rev. J. W. Honnoll, announces an advance all along the line. The assessments for the ministry and general collections are all coming up in full. This means that—bottom figures are soon to be top figures. Another fact that is almost startling is that the preachers have no trouble on the dancing question. The young ladies of the church don't want to dance. The church in the bottom pays over $20 per capita for its preaching; yet some of our pious saints in the hills think "them swampers is mighty sinful." Well, the swamper is "mighty sinful" in spots; but, as a rule, you can't find his stingy spot. If you allow me to divide that word "sting-y," I found it on Dr. Orville Blanton's place. He has bees, and he promised a negro twenty-five cents for every swarm he hived. The negro tried it, and said the doctor had the sting-iest bees he ever saw. Yet those bees make fifty barrels of honey yearly. It takes a sharp eye to see the stingy point in those bees. But the negro is an "intelligent contraband."

Another fact brought out is that the negroes hear our preachers gladly. Behold, Mr. Editor, I send you the name of a colored subscriber from Greenville! This scribe made a talk for the ADVOCATE. He sends you a list of eighteen subscribers—seventeen new ones. The Bishop is to be credited largely with this result.

This writer made also a short talk in the interest of Centenary. The Bishop followed with a forty minutes' sermon and a call for endowment notes—result $1,300, "and more to follow!" It is needless to say that the Bishop "won golden opinions."

Your correspondent left before the election of delegates to the Annual Conference. The secretary will doubtless give a more systematic statement of the doings of the three days. This writer feels that he is called upon to write this more to express his thanks for substantial courtesies and the heartiest hospitality shown him. Fifteen years ago he was pastor there. The changes occurring since that time have been wonderful. When I left there was not a bar of railroad iron in "the swamp." Now Greenville has five railways. The town of two thousand has grown to the proportions of a young city, with gas-lighted streets and street cars. There is more cotton shipped here than from any other place of its size in the State. The lands contiguous are unsurpassed for fertility by any on the globe. Towns are growing up all along the railways, and the cane brakes and forests are giving way. The openings widen and now one looks out from the car window over stretches of the finest lands on which a crow ever lost his shadow. Fifty years hence and it is not wild to imagine a half million of people rich and happy in this wonderful delta.

T. A. S. ADAMS.

Rev. J. B. McFerrin, D. D.

The telegraph announces the death at Nashville, on Monday last, of this eminent saint of God and illustrious servant of the church. The history of the grand man is in many respects the history of Southern Methodism, beginning his ministry sixty-two years ago and taking a prominent part in all the great movements of his church. The editor will doubtless on his return write in appropriate terms of Dr. McFerrin as a man, Christian and preacher. Multitudes of souls have been thrilled by his eloquence, and in his palmy days he held his audiences captive and swayed them at his will. Another of the old-time, incomparable pulpit orators that abounded in our earlier Methodism has passed on and up to his eternal reward.

Dr. McFerrin was born in Rutherford county, Tenn., June 15, 1807. Converted in his thirteenth year, he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, September 3, 1820. Licensed to preach, October 8, 1825, he was admitted into the Tennessee Conference, November 10, 1825. He has never been in any other Conference. He was ordained deacon in 1827 by Bishop Soule, and elder in 1829 by Bishop Roberts. His ministerial life may be summed up thus: Traveled three circuits; two years missionary to the Cherokee Indians; filled town and city stations, six years; college agent, one year; presiding elder, three years; editor of Nashville Christian Advocate, eighteen years; book agent (first term) eight years, including missionary work in the Confederate Army; secretary of Board of Missions, twelve years; book agent (second term) eight years, and holding that position at his death, having been re-elected by the last General Conference.

First elected in 1836, he has been a delegate also to every General Conference since that time. He was a delegate to the Louisville Convention in 1845; delegate to the Ecumenical Conference in London, in 1881; and delegate to the Centennial Conference in Baltimore, in 1884. He was the author of "History of Methodism in Tennessee;" chairman of the committee that compiled the "History of the Organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," and one of the committee that prepared the "History of the Ecumenical Conference." He received the degree of D. D. from LaGrange, and Randolph-Macon Colleges. He was the chairman of his delegation at the last General Conference, and was the central figure of that august body.

There is not one John B. McFerrin left in the church; but his life, character and achievements remain as the heritage, riches and peculiar glory of Southern Methodism. Ripe for heaven, and with arms full of precious sheaves, he has gone home. Leaving his own work behind him—the impress of his grand individuality—and, in the church, the perfume of a Christly life, he sleeps well after his busy day, folded to rest on the bosom of God. S.

Notes.

The representation has been made in this paper, that while we are increasing in church members we are decreasing in missionary offerings. We are glad to state that this is a mistake. The error arose from the fact that the figures have to be counted in two ways instead of one. The fiscal year of the Mission Board begins and ends with the first of April, while the Conference fiscal year begins and ends with the meeting of the Conference. In some Conferences this makes a difference in time of six months, and in others of four and three months. This difference in time makes quite a difference in the annual figures of the Conference Boards and the General Board. The real fact of the case is, that the missionary spirit is growing among our people, and the collections so far this year are in excess of those last year. The treasurer stated to the Board, that there are now ten charges overpaying their assessment to one simply paying in full five years ago. That is certainly growth in the right direction.

This passage from Secretary John's "Address to the Church," published in the annual report of the Board of Missions, we ask our readers to ponder with great care: "Single, corporations in towns with only a few thousand inhabitants can control more capital than the Southern Methodist Church, under the appeals of its ministry, contributes to the support of missions. Money forces itself into investments where there is only a probability of a dividend. Yet the fact that one thousand millions of heathens are without the knowledge of Christ fails to arouse the church, and the proposal to advance the assessments for missions beyond twenty-five cents per member staggers the faith of the Board and depresses the energies of the preachers."

From a letter of Bishop Hendrix, in the Nashville Christian Advocate, we gather interesting items. The gain in the six Conferences held by the Bishop was 14,000. There are 747 effective preachers in those Conferences. There were 5,977 infant and 15,393 adult baptisms. There were admitted on trial 61 preachers. The Bishop ordained 59 deacons and elders. Of 800 preachers appointed to different works only eight expressed any dissatisfaction with their appointments.

Dr. Daniel Wilson, of the University College, Toronto, said, in a paper read before the Royal Society of Canada, that he had concluded, after a long research and discussion, that left-handedness is due to an exceptional development of the right hemisphere of the brain. Being left-handed himself, he hopes that when he is dead his brain may be examined for help it may give in settling the question.

Mr. John Murray, of the Challenger Expedition, recently said, in the Royal Society of Edinburgh, that he questioned whether any country in the world, taking its size into consideration, could show a better record of scientific work or a greater mass of scientific literature than Scotland during the past ten or twenty years.

The congregation of Felicity Street Church are erecting a tabernacle at the corner of St. Andrew and Camp streets for their accommodation and convenience until they rebuild their church. They expect to occupy it on the fifteenth.

The following is from the Nashville Christian Advocate:

Our Sunday-school publications show a steady improvement in quality and a constant growth in circulation. The Magazine has a circulation of 26,000; The Visitor, 27,000; Senior Quarterly, 185,000; Intermediate Quarterly, 150,000; Little People, 150,000, and Lesson Paper, 101,000.

A new and complete edition of the works of Galileo is to be published, in twenty quarto volumes of five hundred pages each, at the expense of the Italian government.

The meeting being held in Louisiana Avenue Church has resulted so far in seven conversions. Dr. Walker reports congregations increasing.

Thanks to Dr. A. B. Jones, president of Huntsville Female College, for an invitation to attend the commencement of 1887. The exercises will begin Sunday, May 29. Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of the North Mississippi Conference, will preach the commencement sermon, and Rev. J. O. Andrews, of the Alabama Conference, will address the graduates.

Foreign Missions.

Noticing that much is being written about the wonderful increase in the membership of the Southern Methodist Church, and the very significant decrease in the amount contributed for missions, I have looked over the minutes of the Louisiana Conference for the last five years to learn what about the matter here at home. I find the following to be the case with us:

In 1882, 14,937 members raised $4,744 43, as the total for missions, or 31.6+ cents per capita; in 1883, 15,030 members raised $6,461 05, or 42.9+ cents per capita; in 1884, 15,364 members raised $4,803 10, or 31.2+ cents per capita; in 1885, 14,568 members raised $5,136 67, or 35.2+ cents per capita; in 1886, 15,871 members raised $5,901 67, or 37.1+ cents per capita.

It is gratifying to learn that, though we are still some hundreds below the amount raised in 1883, yet that there has been some increase during the last two years. However, thirty-seven cents per member is nothing of which to boast. We have in the bounds of Louisiana Methodism a few wealthy laymen who could easily give $500 or $1,000 yearly to missions if they could only get their religion into fine working trim, and there are scarcely any so poor as to be unable to give the fifty cents or dollar God requires at their hands for this cause. Fifteen thousand eight hundred and seventy-one members ought, at the very lowest calculation, to give fifteen thousand eight hundred and seventy-one dollars cheerfully for the saving of the world.

In the Advocate of Missions we find this statement: "'Ye are not your own.' 'Whose am I, then?' You belong to Christ; so does your money. His title is written in blood. He made you his steward. The question is not, How much shall you give to Christ? But, How much can you spend on yourself and family?"

Is not Dr. John exactly right? The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with her present membership can not come in sight of her duty unless she raises for foreign missions $500,000—and to raise a round million of dollars would be only one dollar per member. By all means let us have the week of self-denial (and it may be that the Mission Board now in session has so ordered), and, not to speak of other things to be denied, one week's Southern Methodist tobacco and snuff will roll up a very considerable sum for the Lord. This self-denial for God and giving of our substance out of the pocket beats suppers, fairs and entertainments and has the advantage of being the Bible plan, and hence is always peculiarly blessed and owned of God.

How pleasantly it would affect us, brethren of the Conference, if when we meet in Shreveport, next January, the results of self-denial for God should discover an increase of thousands in our total for missions.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

New Orleans, May 5, 1887.

Mr. Editor: Owing to the fact that the Ames' Church, Calliope and St. Charles streets, has officially changed its name to St. Charles Avenue Church, it was deemed advisable to change the name of our church, which will hereafter be known as the Rayne Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, South, instead of, as formerly, St. Charles Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Rev. F. M. Featherstun, D. D., of Brandon, Miss., will preach the commencement sermon at Kavanaugh College, on Sunday, June 12.

Temperance Notes.

The vote against the Prohibition Amendment, in Michigan, was about 5,800. Of the counties, forty-four gave majority for prohibition, and thirty-four against.

The following statistics from the Northern Christian Advocate, with regard to the use of whisky, wines and beer in the last year as compared with 1840, are said to be as nearly correct as possible:

The consumption of domestic and imported distilled spirits in this country has increased from 43,000,000 gallons in 1840 to 72,000,000 in 1886; of wines, from 4,800,000 to 22,000,000, and of malt liquors, from 23,000,000 to 642,000,000. The consumption of distilled liquors and wines per capita has dropped about one-half, and of malt liquors, it is nearly ten times as great. The average expenditure in 1886 per capita of the drinking population of 14,325,417 persons was $45 00.

Wherever England has pushed her conquests she has introduced the liquor traffic. Already a brewery is being erected in Mandalay, the capital of Burmah, so recently captured by the British troops.

A Plain Statement.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased, until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the most effectual remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the object of pleasing the palate than of expelling the disease, have been manufactured almost in this country; but their short leave of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continue to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and as soon as these troublesome vermin are removed, and the system is thus relieved from the irritation caused by them, they are restored to perfect health. Some times worms feed and nestle themselves in the lungs, causing a bad cough that is frequently mistaken for consumption, and, resisting all the usual remedies for that disease, they cause the death of the patient. Should these symptoms be indications of worms,

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been ignorantly misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from various causes, and there are parents, probably, in every neighborhood, who are more or less familiar with their existence, and who have given to their children the first complement of vermifuge that was simply necessary to relieve the system of worms. But there are many cases of worms that require more than the first complement of vermifuge to be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant. Any child may be relieved by this valuable remedy.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it, and use it in their practice and many of them are numbered among the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, certifying to its efficacy. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a cathartic, and supposing the case to be that of worms, some of the worst description have been discharged, and it seems to give relief at once. Most worms cause the most distressing symptoms, and it is the duty of every parent to be his own judge in such cases, and administer the remedy at once. Be simple in your treatment, but be sure that it is not sufficient. Be sure to look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Our Young People.

AS YOU WILL.

BY JOHN W. EDDY.

As you'd do it, if you knew
That, with this day's setting sun,
All your life's work would be done.

Do it bravely, do it well,
So that future years may tell
Of the blessings which accrue,
From the good deeds you shall do.

Do not sit and lily wait
Some propitious turn of fate;
Fate is blind, and can not know
What direction you shall go.

Opportunities you'll find
Always suited to your mind;
If you only wish to play,
You will idle life away.

—Our Young People.

MR. EDITOR: I have written once before and saw it was not thrown in the waste-basket, and I thought that I would write again. I will tell you about our Sunday-school. It has begun for the summer, and I hope it will last like it has begun. My teacher is Miss Ticia Doyle, and I love her so much. Mr. Doyle is our Sunday-school superintendent. We have organized a Woman's Missionary Society, and my mother and my eldest sister and myself belong to it. My mother takes your excellent paper, and I love to read the pieces that the little people write. I will close by answering Annie Walts' question: The shortest verse in the Bible is, "Jesus wept." I will also ask one: Where is the lingest verse in the Bible?

Your little friend,

DODIE PINCKARD.

DOYLINE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As my first little letter to your dear ADVOCATE did not reach the waste-basket, I thought that I would write another short letter to my little cousins. Our preacher is Bro. J. L. Williams, and I think so much of him; he is so good. He stays with us one night in each month. I am going to Sunday-school, and, if the good Lord is willing, I will continue going. Our superintendent is Bro. T. W. Pipes; my teacher is Mrs. McGier. Oh! I think so much of them; they are so kind and good. I will try to answer Cora Ooza's question: It was King Herod that was eaten by the worms and gave up the ghost. I will close with best wishes to your paper.

Your little friend,

DEBBIE RINEHART.

RUSTON, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old. I go to school at home. My teacher's name is Miss Ida Henderson. I love her very much. My papa is a farmer. We live two or three miles from town. My Sunday-school teacher's name is Miss Moore. She says I always have perfect lessons. Papa takes the dear ADVOCATE, and I read the nice little letters. I have two pets—a cat and a rooster. I will answer Nettie Manning's question: "Immanuel" is found in Isaiah vii, 14; and also in Matthew i, 23. I will ask, Where in the Bible is this passage found: "And he will take your daughters to be confectionaries, and to be cooks, and to be bakers"?

Your little cousin,

K. EUDOVA GRAMLING.

MAYERSVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I thought I would write you a letter as I have not seen any letters from Holmesville. I go to Kavanaugh College. Rev. H. Walter Featherstun is the president, and we all love him very much. I have nine studies. Miss Julia Seggett is my teacher. We all love her very much. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where is the name "Screech-owl" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

EDNA V. FERGUSON.

HOLMESVILLE, Mississippi.

P. S.—I saw in your paper an advertisement that the one who tells the longest verse in the Bible would receive a prize. It may be found in the eighth chapter and ninth verse of Esther.

E. V. F.

MR. EDITOR: Seeing so many nice letters in the ADVOCATE, and none from this part of the State, I thought I would write one. We have a Sunday-school. My pa is the superintendent; Miss Bettie Nash is my teacher; Mr. T. C. Galloway is our preacher. I will answer Labell Gurry and Wilmer Brothers' question. Joseph was sold by his brothers to a company of Ishmaelites. I will close by asking a question: Who led the people after Moses died? I remain, Your little friend.

TAMAR A. HILTON.

LAGAN'S FORD, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been some time since I wrote, I thought I would write to you. We organized a Sunday-school not long ago. Grandma asks the question: Who was Melchisedec? So I will ask you and all the little cousins to tell me all about him. I have just returned from Sunday-school and had a perfect lesson in the intermediate and Bible classes. My little brother has been sick this year and liked to died with the croup; but he is well now, and is getting fat, and I am so glad. So good-by this time to all the little cousins. I remain,

Your little friend.

BERTIE C. FELPS.

BLUFF CREEK, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy, and want to join the little folks' column. My mamma takes your ADVOCATE, and I like to read the little folks' letters. I go to school to Miss Mattie Barrington. I study geography, arithmetic, reading and spelling. I will answer Lutie L. Hood's question: "Bridegroom" is found in Psalms xix, 5. I will ask two questions: Where in the Bible, and how many times, is "Meroz" found? Where in the Bible is "yoke of oxen" found? With many good wishes to the ADVOCATE, I am, Your little friend,

GEORGE W. SISTRUNK.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, Mississippi.

Mild, soothing, and healing is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little orphan girl twelve years of age. I have one brother who is older than myself. We are living with our uncle and aunt. They are so good to us, and we love them like father and mother. My father and mother have been dead four years; both died near the same time. I am going to Sunday-school every Sunday. As this is my first, I will close by answering cousin Debbie Rincharts' question: King Ahithophel was buried in his fathers' sepulchre. With many good wishes, I remain,

Your little friend,

MINNIE GREEN.

RUSTON, Louisiana.

INDIGESTION results from a partial paralysis of the stomach and is the primary cause of a very large majority of the ills that humanity is heir to. The most agreeable and effective remedy is Dr. J. H. McLean's Little Liver and Kidney Pillets. 25 cents a vial.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eight years of age. I live at Augusta, Perry county, Miss. Bro. Boone is our pastor and Bro. West our elder. I love the ADVOCATE, and desire a place in the little people's department. I have six brothers and three sisters. For fear of the waste-basket, I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Who wrote the Epistles.

Your little friend,

PEARL STEVENS.

HAPPINESS depends very much on the condition of the liver and kidneys. The ills of life make but little impression on those whose digestion is good. You can regulate your liver and kidneys with Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm. $1.00 per bottle.

A WORD TO BOYS.—You are made to be kind, boys, generous, magnanimous. If there is a boy in school who has a club foot, don't let him know you ever saw it. If there is a poor boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags in his hearing. If there is a lame boy, assign him some part in the game that doesn't require running. If there is a hungry one, give him part of your dinner. If there is a dull one, help him to get his lesson. If there is a bright one, be not envious of him; for if one boy is proud of his talents, and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs, and no more talent than before. If a larger or stronger boy has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him. All the school will show by their countenances how much better it is than to have a great fuss.—Horace Mann.

THE SCOLDING WIND.—The Browns' cook had gone just because she was so cross. The slightest thing would set her angry tongue in motion. Even if she was alone, the little Browns could hear her voice running like a machine.

Esther, the three-year-old, never paused in the kitchen when the cross cook was there, but ran through as fast as her short legs and mites of feet could carry her, casting fearful glances behind.

"She was a lovely cook," sighed mamma, "but I couldn't keep such a scold."

"No," chimed in Esther, "us don't like stohling peoples."

Last night the wind blew loud and in angry tones. Esther left her crib, and scrumbled into mamma's bed, whispering, "Who's dat stolding out o' doors?"—Congregationalist.

Farm and Home.

Table Etiquette.

Why is it that so many mothers neglect this important element in the training of their children? How often is it that one's whole meal is made unpleasant by some unruly or misbehaved child; and yet, can we blame the children? Certainly not! While we know how keenly the mother must feel at her child's misdemeanor, still upon her alone rests the responsibility of its behavior. Had she taught it to behave as politely in the dinning-room as in the parlor, all would have been well; but no. If Harry or Willie wished to make an entire meal of one particular dish on the table, he must have it, even though the older ones have a much smaller amount in consequence. As a little boy remarked, "Mamma says I always have the lion's share." Does not this tend to foster sellishness in children?

Ought not children to be taught to sit quietly until older ones are helped? More often, however, they begin to ask for this or that before the rest have been waited upon. Then, too, the maxim of our good old grandparents, "Children should be seen and not heard," seems to be lost sight of in this enlightened age. In many homes children monopolize almost the entire conversation, or if not, continually interrupt while older ones are talking. Mamma does not hesitate to limit the little one in its eating, why not in its talking?

One other thing is very essential. Let us see that the children have clean hands and faces, also nicely brushed hair before coming to the table. We older ones know by experience how much more we enjoy a meal, however plain, if our toilet is faultless; therefore, let us educate the children to feel the same. Perhaps some burdened mother says she can not always take time to see to all these little matters; but she can teach even very little ones to do it for themselves, and it will soon become second nature. Neither let us forget the "Please" and "Thank you" that go so far toward making the children attractive. Let the mothers of the nineteenth century so educate their children in this, as well as other elements of true politeness, that the next generation will rise up and call them blessed.—Christian at Work.

HOME HAPPINESS.—Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever have you will get at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over, and he feels that he has run in out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family, is something real. It does not make much difference whether you own your house or have one little room in that house, you can make that one little room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and it will be to you the very perfection of a home.

THE FARMER'S FRIEND.—As a rule, it may be observed that the truest friend of the farmer is the man whose main financial interests are in the farm; who studies the social and political questions from the standpoint of the farm; who can suggest the means of advancing the agricultural interest, and who does this without any ulterior object of gaining their votes. About the last man to trust is the fellow who has left the farm years ago, has lost his habits, tastes, and instincts, and has no visible interest in it, and who is always putting himself forward as the friend of the farmer.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof read these reliable testimonials:

G. C. Brack, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene L. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

Spring and Family Medicine

in use. "It heals all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "the McLAUREN—MRS. MARY DUDLEY McLAUREN departed this life, March 15, 1887, at her residence at Bolton, Miss. By the death of this most estimable lady, our social circle has lost one of its brightest ornaments, the church a most zealous worker, and our Woman's Foreign Missionary and Ladies' Aid Societies, a most loyal member. Though debarred by long illness from meeting with us, her interest in and devotion to our work never ceased. She thought and planned for it through sickness and suffering as in health; and long shall we miss her wise suggestions and judicious counsel. Of her, while living, it was justly said, "Her intentions are righteous altogether;" and beside the dead was added the touching testimonial, "She was everybody's friend." Especially was this true of those sick or in want within reach of her gentle ministrations; and many such hold her in precious memory. While sensible of our great loss, we yet bow submissively to the Divine will, feeling that for her absent from the body is present with the Lord. Comfort yourselves, ye afflicted ones, with the thought that for her death was a blessed transition from pain—from sleepless nights and weary days of suffering—to that beautiful "home" of the soul," where there shall be "no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."

MRS. M. A. BALDWIN,
For Committee.

EVANS—With deep sorrow we chronicle the death of MRS. SUSAN EVANS, consort of Rev. W. G. Evans, which sad event occurred April 16, 1887.

Sister Evans was well matured in years, being seventy years of age at the time of her death. She was also fully matured in the religion of her Lord and Master, in whom she had trusted and served, and in whose service she had spent a life of usefulness, as she gave herself entirely to God and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and embraced religion in her girlhood days, and ever adorned her profession of godliness by an upright walk and a godly conversation. Her Christian experience was one of the richest I ever heard. It was a feast to the soul to meet with her in the class-room, love-feasts and experience meetings and hear her tell of God's dealings with her soul. I have known the religious part of the congregation to respond by hallelujahs, while the irreligious part were moved to tears. But these time are past; her sainted spirit has winged its way to God who gave it. May God send his comforting Spirit into the hearts of the bereaved loved ones, and may they follow her as she followed Christ! J. L. JORDAN.

CURRIE—HOWARD C. CURRIE was born in Carroll parish, La., June 12, 1851, and died, near the place of his birth, in same parish, April 20, 1887. On March 20, 1874, he was happily united in marriage to Miss Lucy Lynch; and husband and wife were converted under the ministry of Rev. H. O. White, in 1881.

Bro. Currie was a good man, and for years had been an officer in the church; and, in conformity to his father's request on his dying-bed, honored God by a holy and upright life. He died suddenly, of congestion of the brain, and, being insensible from the time he was regarded dangerous, left no dying testimony; but we are confident that he is at rest. He leaves a devoted wife and five sprightly and good children, an aged mother and several sisters to mourn his early death; but they expect to meet him in heaven. May the Lord comfort their hearts!

THOS. J. UPTON.

McINNIS—MRS. MARTHA A. McINNIS was born August 15, 1826, and died in Bienville parish, La., January 17, 1887. Sister McInnis moved from Hinds county, Miss., and settled near Black Lake, where she lived to see her children all grown and settled in life. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church early in life, and taught her children to do the same. She was left a widow with a large family of little children to raise; and she did her work well. She lived to see her children all on their way to heaven, and members of the church. She was a friend to the suffering and needy. She died happy and resigned to the will of the good Lord, and left a bright evidence that she was ready and willing to depart and be with her Savior and loved ones forever.

ROBERT PARVIN.

Misery is the one word to describe the feelings when Malaria is in the system. There may not be positive chills, but there will be cold hands and feet, headache, indifference to food as well as to everything else, so that life itself is often a burden. If you are in this condition, one dose of Shallenberger's Pills taken at bedtime will almost restore you to health—a few more will certainly do it.

RELIGION AT HOME.—If parents really have not religious life and energy enough to bless their own homes, and then also be blessings to a little bit of the outside world at the same time, they should look first to their own homes, faithfully performing all their duties there, and making their influence on the lives of their own household positive and intense, though they take no active part in the work of the church at large. It will be a sad summing up of the results of their Christian living if many souls of strangers and neighbors, and of children in the mission school, have been brought to Christ through their earnest work, and their own children are lost. Really, however, none who pay primal heed to their own household need ever fail to be useful also to others outside. The brighter the lamp that burns in the parlor the more light pours out into the dark street. The holier and more Christ-like one is at home, the more good one will do, in the end, to those who are without. On the whole, the best service most people can do for Christ in this world is to make their own home a little spiritual garden, full of holy beauty and fragrant with the odors of love. A truly godly home is a wonderfully leavening influence in a community.—Presbyterian.

The time of ingathering is usually a time of spiritual fervor and white-heat earnestness. Special services or special effort in the regular services mark the hours of regeneration. Souls are born in numbers, ranging from dozens to thousands. Joy and thanksgiving flood all hearts when, after travail and prayer, the cry of the newly begotten is heard. Hallelujahs abound. But a new-born babe needs something beside joy over his advent. Good nursing largely determines whether the joy shall be perennial or transient. Of many a newly born soul it may be said, "Ruined by neglect while the church was recovering from the effects of too much congratulation." It is right in this connection that the church must begin her functions as the nursing mother of spiritual children.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Ladies' Favorite.

The newest fashion in ladies' hats will doubtless cause a flutter of pleasurable excitement among the fair sex. Ladies are always susceptible to the changes of a fashion plate; and the more startling the departure, the more earnest the gossip over the new mode. Dr. Pierre's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for the ills which afflict females and make their lives miserable. This sovereign panacea can be relied on in cases of displacements and all functional derangements. It builds up the poor, haggard and dragged-out victim, and gives her renewed hope and a fresh lease of life. It is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments; sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. Read printed guarantee on bottle wrapper.

The best characters have a mixture of infirmities, and the worse have some redeeming virtues.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

Dyspepsia Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

Rheumatism Is undoubtedly a blood disease caused by an excess of the lactic acid in the blood. Where there is perfect filtration of the blood there can be no rheumatism. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA will remove the poison, supply the acids and relieve the pains.

Scrofula Is caused directly by impurities in the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, by purifying the blood, forces the impurities from the system.

Kidneys Through the Kidneys flow the waste fluid containing poisonous matter. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing pain in the small of the back and loins, flushes of heat, chills. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to resume their natural functions.

The Liver By irregularity in its action or suspension of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

MANUFACTURED BY

J. H. ZEILIN & CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

I was afflicted for several years with disordered liver, which resulted in a severe attack of jaundice. I had as good medical attendance as our section affords, who failed utterly to restore me to the enjoyment of my former good health. I then tried the favorite prescription of one of the most renowned physicians of Louisville, Ky., but to no purpose; whereupon I was indulged to try Simmons Liver Regulator. I found immediate benefit from its use, and it ultimately restored me to the full enjoyment of health.

THE OPINION OF

Sir Robert Christison,

Baronet, M. D.,

Physician to Her Majesty the Queen, President Royal Association, Professor at the University of Edinburgh, &c.,

Liebig Co.'s Coca Beef Tonic

Is a remarkable preparation. It contains the nutritive elements of the muscular fibre, blood, bone and brain of carefully selected healthy bullocks dissolved in rare old sherry wine. To be precise, each tablespoonful contains the nutritive elements of one ounce of choice beef, one grain and a half of pure quinine, and two grains of iron. It also embodies a concentrated extract of coca, a South American tonic of which Sir Robert Christison, M. D., F. R. S., physician to Her Majesty the Queen, says: "The properties of this wonderful plant are the most remarkable of any known in the medical world. From repeated personal trials I am convinced that its use is highly beneficial and tonic."

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.
It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.
It restores the functions of the tear passages.
It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.
It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.
Mr. W. BOURNE, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE—THIRTY-THIRD ANNUAL SESSION

The fall term will begin on Wednesday, September 15, 1886, with a full corps of excellent teachers and increased facilities for instruction. Rates of board and tuition without music, one hundred and seventy-five dollars; with music, two hundred and thirty-five dollars. Payments, one-half in advance, balance at the end of session; or in similar proportion. If the entire bills for the year be paid in advance, ten per cent. will be deducted. Two or more pupils from one family will receive a discount of ten per cent.

Four pupils engaging a room together by the year will be allowed a discount of fifteen per cent.

Members of the Louisiana Conference shall receive board at the regular rates, and tuition in both literary and music department free of charge.

Special vocal training is not included in the regular lessons for music, but will be charged as an additional course in music.

In making engagements for the year, a club of four young ladies who wish to pay all in advance will receive board, tuition and one course in music for $176 25—a discount of twenty-five per cent. from the catalogue price; or by paying one-half in advance, they will be entitled to the same for $200.

Mr. Charles Edward Lewis, on behalf of the Irish leaders, demands the arraignment of the editor at the bar of the House.——It is reported that the troops of the Ameer of Afghanistan were recently routed near Jellalabad; that Khelat-i-Ghilzni has been captured; that Ghuzni was surrounded, and that the insurgents are threatening Candahar.——The Hounslow gunpowder mills, at Hounslow, Eng., to-day destroyed by an explosion which occurred in the milling-room.——The Manchester Exposition was opened by the Prince of Wales.——Les Temps, of Paris, says that the New Hebrides question has been settled and that the island will remain independent under the mutual surveillance of England and France.——The Queen of Hawaii arrived at Washington to-day, and took quarters at the Arlington.——The Glasgow steamer "John Knox" struck the reefs near Channel Harbor, N. F., and sank in half an hour. Every soul on board perished.

MAY 4.

The government declines to consider the charges made by The Times against Mr. Dillon as a breach of privilege, and refuses to appoint a committee of investigation, saying that the courts are open to such cases. The opinion is that, owing to the government's action, the Times will escape prosecution.——The Czar, Czarina and all the principal members of the imperial family depart on the fifteenth for Nova Tcherkask, the capital of the Don Cossack country.——By an explosion in the Victoria Coal Company's mine, near Victoria, B. C., 150 men were imprisoned.——During the earthquake, May 3, an active volcano was developed near Tuxson, Arizona; towering peaks engulfed and swept out of sight.——This morning a fire broke out on Magazine near Julia, and destroyed buildings and property to the amount of $125,000.

MAY 5.

Anti-German demonstrations continue to be made in various sections of Paris. The mob marched through the streets with banners inscribed "To Berlin." The German Embassy's quarters are guarded by the police.——Mr. Mulock has introduced a bill in the Dominion Parliament embodying some of the provisions of the United States Interstate Commerce Bill. The most important part is the "long and short-haul" clause. It further provides for the redemption of unused railroad tickets at any office of the road between the including points covered by the ticket.——W. U. DePawe, of New Albany, Ind., who was stricken with apoplexy on the third died in Chicago this evening.——The College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met at Nashville and promulgated the plan of Episcopal visitation for the next Conference year.

MAY 6.

The House of Commons refuses the Parnellites a Committee of Inquiry on the Times' charges.——The Czar has commuted the death sentence of all but two of the seven conspirators to life imprisonment.——Queen Kapiolani and suite, with a number of invited guests, visited Mount Vernon to-day. The President to-night gave a State dinner in honor of the Queen.——The dead-lock in the Florida Legislature continues.——The Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Nashville to-day.

MAY 7.

Prime Minister Goblet opened the Maritime Exhibition at Havre to-day.——The prisoners connected with the disturbances on the occasion of the production of "Lohengrin," in Paris, have been sentenced to short terms of imprisonment.——Russia has increased the duty on iron and steel.——Gen. McElory has signed the pardon of Dr. Deelius.——The proprietors of all the leading hotels of New York to-night decided not to attempt to sell liquors to guests or others to-morrow on account of the strict enforcement of the Sunday excise law.

MAY 8.

Several towns in ruins and nearly two hundred lives lost are the results of the earthquake in Mexico on the third.——The sale of the Mexican National railway takes place on the twenty-third of May.——At the opening of the American Exhibition to-morrow the Grenadier Band will play the American and British National airs, after which Archdeacon Jarrol will offer prayer. Lord Ronald Rowe will deliver the welcoming address, and Sir. Charles Russell will reply.——The fire at Nagy Karoly, Austria, destroyed 600 houses and left 5,000 people homeless.——Fifteen persons were drowned by a break of the wharf at a baptizing in the Third District, this city, to-day.

MAY 9.

Mr. Parnell is reported to be seriously ill.——The American Exhibition was formally opened to-day in the presence of about 7,000 persons.——Stanley has arrived at Banza Manteka, Congo. All of the party are well.——Herr Sigl, the largest locomotive manufacturer in Austria, is dead.——Italy is arranging for a summer campaign against Abyssinia.——Rev. J. B. McFerrin died in Nashville, to-day, aged eighty years.——The Supreme Court of Louisiana has declared constitutional the city ordinance prohibiting under pain and penalties the adulteration of milk.

THEATERS.—Were the testimony taken of the 70,000 evangelical ministers in this land as to the moral influence of the pulpit, that testimony would be unanimous and emphatic that such influence is good, and only good, and that continually. But the testimony of great numbers of actors and managers of the theater is that the moral influence is the reverse of good. McCready wished the ladies of his family to avoid the theater. Fanny Kemble said that her profession was unworthy of a woman. Olive Logan said that she would not advise any woman to go on the stage, for the demoralizing influences there prevalent are daily increasing. M. Dumas fils said, "You would not take your daughter to see my play? You are right. Let me say, once for all, that you must not take your daughter to the theater! It is not merely the work that is immoral, it is the place!" Every dollar paid at the door of a theater is a contribution to spread immorality.—Evangelist.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. Our merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Two significant facts in the Kansas elections were noted in reference to the women, which have been in the past the chief arguments against feminine voting: First, that the better classes, the women of higher station, feared to go to the polls, whereas those of doubtful virtue threw themselves into politics with wild enthusiasm; and secondly, that the negro women registered and voted much more extensively than the whites; the natural result of which facts would indicate that the extension of the ballot to women does not have the elevating influence on politics and elections that so many expect from it.—N. O. Times Democrat.

Those who have once known the meaning and experienced the blessing of true spiritual worship, can never forget it. To be conscious of the Divine presence and favor, that God hears and accepts our offering of praise and ourselves, begets a sense of peace and hope that only the Spirit can bestow. They who know the joy of worship long for the courts of God's house, and seek them with happy hearts. There is no other such bond of union and fellowship among his children as that of worship; it is the confession that we are one in Christ Jesus.—Central Christian Advocate.

Ditson & Co.'s Sunday School Music

ranks with the very best, and no Sunday School management should adopt a new Singing Book without carefully examining one of their "tried and true" Sunday School Song Books.

Voices of Praise ($40 cts., $4.20 per doz.) Rev. C. L. Hutchins. Music and poetry dignified and classical, but not dull; in fact, bright and enthusiastic. Very large collection for the money.

Singing on the Way ($35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) by Mrs. Jewett, ably assisted by Dr. Hoffman, whose noble compositions are known and loved in all the churches. This, like the book above mentioned, does excellently well for a Vestry Singing Book for prayer and praise meetings.

Songs of Promise ($35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) H. Tenney and Rev. J. A. Hoffman.—The first highly gifted, musically, and the second the author of many hymns of refined and beautiful quality. One of the newest books.

Song Worship ($35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) L. O. Emerson and W. F. Sherwin, both celebrated compilers, composers and leaders, and for later well-known as having had charge of the music at many Chautauqua meetings.

For other good books, please send for lists and catalogues.

For a lovely little book for the young children of a Sunday School, look no further than FAIR FLOWERS (25 cts., $2.40 per doz.) Edition Pinafore. Sweet Hymns, Sweet Music, Pretty Pictures.

SLEEPLESS.

BY JOHN WENTWORTH.

O God of mercy, give me sleep,
And let this weary brain have rest;
Send down thy white-winged doves of peace,
With comfort for this troubled breast.

O throbbing brow! O beating heart!
O pulsing veins, be calm and still!
O tensing nerves, relax thy strain,
And fight no more this struggling will!

O floods of thought that fill my brain—
That threaten to engulf my soul;
O waves of words that swell and flow,
On ebb-tides ride and backward roll!

O restful slumber, now, I pray,
Come where sad vigils long I keep;
These lifted eyelids, let them droop—
O God of mercy, give me sleep!

Memories of Travel.

FIRST GLIMPSE OF PALESTINE.

BY CHARLES EDWARD LOCKE.

Late in the afternoon we found ourselves in comfortable quarters on a French vessel, steaming away from the shores of Egypt. Our little party was on the qui vive and full of anticipation, for on the morrow, if no storms were encountered, we would set foot on the sacred soil of the Holy Land. The regrets that we could no longer tarry among the curious antiquities of the pyramids and the Nile, were more than made up by the delightful prospects of Olivet and the Kedron.

At daybreak the next morning we were awakened from soundest slumber by a "cessation of hostilities" in the engine-room. The continuous throbbing of the vast machinery of an ocean vessel, though at first a disturber of rest, comes after awhile to be soothing and soporific. Peering out of the port-hole of the state-room, and seeing land, we hastened on deck to find that we were, indeed, in sight of Palestine, and the vessel was preparing to cast anchor at Joppa.

Oh, the ecstasy of that moment! There, indeed, lay the Holy Land—the goal of our fondest hopes, nestling peacefully in the lap of the morning. The sun, in dazzling splendor, was driving his fiery steeds up the eastern slopes of the distant mountains. One fringe after another of golden light burst through the irregular profile of the hills; the generous rays lavishly broke their alabaster vials upon a hundred mountain tops, and soon hill-sides and valleys were resplendent with the glory of the glad morning. The palpitating waves far out into the sea were kissed with varied tints of yellow and purple and crimson. It was a scene of transcendent loveliness, and beggars description. It was as if the God of heaven were placing his approval upon the deeds once enacted in this now much-deteriorated country.

Joppa, from the ship's deck, is weird and striking. It is a mass of masonry rising many stories from the water's edge, like the side of a pyramid. The yellow and white stories of the houses blend quite artistically into the brown and purple of the mountainous landscape. The landing is difficult; in stormy weather, impossible. Acres of flat rock are hidden just beneath the surface of the water, necessitating the anchoring of vessels at least a half mile from the shore.

Natives in gaudy costumes came out in yawls to transport passengers and luggage. After passing through the empty formalities of the custom-house, we make our way to an hotel, through narrow, crooked, hilly streets, running with pollution and crowded with half-naked natives, dogs, donkeys, camels and sickening odors.

Joppa, now called Yaffa, has about fifteen thousand inhabitants. It is emphatically oriental in houses, dress and customs. It is familiar to the Bible student as the place to which Hiram, King of Tyre, floated the famous cedars which were used in the construction of Solomon's Temple. They were thence carried overland to Jerusalem, thirty miles distant. It was from Joppa that Jonah began his unsuccessful voyage to Tarshish. It proved, after all, however, to be the nearest way to Nineveh. A good many people have to go through a whale's belly to duty.

It is not pleasant to the visitor at Joppa to remember that the bloodiest page in the sanguinary career of Napoleon Bonaparte was written there. All the claims of the heartless general to philanthropy and benevolence were submerged forever in the crimson tide of four thousand massacred prisoners. Though it was specified in the surrender that the lives of the garrison should be saved, they were barbarously driven to the beach and shot down in cold blood. Their bones were piled up in a pyramid to be bleached by the sunlight and the storm. The waves chanted the only requiem, the winds moaned in sorrow, while the sea splashed its tears of foam.

Houses purporting to be the homes of Simon, the Tanner, and Tabitha, the founder of Dorcas societies, are shown to the incredulous tourist.

We made interesting visits to the American and Scotch missions. Faithful men and women are gathering together the little outcasts with which this land abounds, and are instructing them in spiritual matters and giving them a practical education. The kindergarten system is much used. We were greatly entertained with the performances of the pupils.

Less than half a day sufficed to make the round of Joppa's attractions. The reader will not have forgotten, perhaps, that there are no carriage roads in Palestine, except between Joppa and Jerusalem on the south, and Damascus and Beyrout on the north. The journey through the Holy Land must, therefore, be made on horseback, under the direction of a dragoman. At Joppa the arrangements for the tour are made with the dragoman, who takes charge of all matters in detail. The tents in which we are to sleep, our luggage, our provisions, etc., are all carried on the backs of strong mules, and put under the surveillance of a half dozen unscrupulous natives.

When all things are in readiness, seated in English saddles upon excerable riding horses, we pass out from the limits of the city through groves of large, luscious oranges. High cactus hedges stand as invincible guards over the tempting fruit, which in some places is piled up in heaps under the trees. Home oranges always disappoint us since we ate of the delicious product of the Levant.

Soon we emerge into the historic plains of Sharon. The fellahin are busy plowing with an implement which has improved none over those engraved upon obelisks of three thousand years ago. The exquisite Rose of Sharon blooms here and there with all its pristine loveliness, and shrinking in virgin modesty drops its petals when disturbed by the traveler.

Monteagle, Tenn.

BY PROF. A. L. D. HINDS.

Four sessions of the Monteagle Assembly and Summer Schools have been held, and the fifth will open Wednesday, July 6, and close Wednesday, September 7, 1887. This has become a fixed institution, and is destined to be a very important factor in the mental, moral, and æsthetic culture and elevation of our people. The institution is characterized by the purest Christian disinterestedness. No financial benefit can accrue to any individual concerned in its management. Those who have shouldered its responsibilities and borne its burdens have for their reward, not gold nor silver, but the consciousness of having done a great and noble work for their race and country.

The ends aimed at in the Monteagle enterprise are the broadest imaginable. Among them I will mention:

1. The general Sunday-school interest. The Sunday-school normal work, the children's meetings, the model teachers' meetings, and the Bible classes, all look in this direction.

2. Christian culture. The daily prayer meetings, the lectures on Bible study, the conferences on church work, missions, temperance, etc., broaden the conception of Christian duty, and cultivate the Christian graces.

3. Mental culture. In the schools, during the coming season, there will be nineteen different departments, including about forty different subjects, and these will be taught by some thirty-five instructors. The work is in the hands of specialists, and is deep and thorough. It is not the intention to give the pupil a superficial smattering of the subject, and then impress him with the idea that he knows it all, as is the habit of many of our so-called normal schools. The object is rather to give him a just conception of the extent of human knowledge. While the instruction means to be practical in the highest degree, it does not lose sight of that prime object of education—culture. Culture is to the man what the whetstone is to the knife. In whatever sphere he may act, it manifolds his power.

4. Cultivation of art. The schools of music and painting receive special attention. Their place, not only as special branches of study, but also as necessary elements of general culture, is fully realized and they are fostered accordingly.

5. Diffusion of general intelligence. This end is reached through the popular lecture program.

6. Social culture. Those who assemble at Monteagle are, almost without exception, people of intelligence and good breeding. Gentility pervades everything, and selfishness is rarely seen. Thus there is a peculiar congeniality which favors the most harmonious intercourse and affords the most delightful social enjoyment. In this regard I think that Monteagle stands without a peer.

7. To furnish a summer home for Christian people. This is one of its prime objects. The Southern people are compelled to leave their homes during the heated term. At Monteagle they can find nearly everything that is calculated to make a summer home pleasant, and a place almost absolutely free from all temptation to dissipation and vice. There one can roam over the mountain at will, take ease, quiet and strengthening rest in the cottage, find light in the platform exercises, do serious work in the schools, or pursue special lines of study. And all this is free from the bustle, turmoil, care and worry of every-day life. Already the grounds are being dotted over with handsome private cottages. In a few years Monteagle will become a great summer city, without trade, without labor, without vice, without temptation—a city where naught is found but that which makes one strong and noble and good.

LEBANON, Tennessee.

Giving to the Cause of Christ.

All-glorious cause! God himself placed the first gift on its altar. Love was the propelling force. He "so loved the world" that he made a gift to redeem it. The gift was dear. He sent his only Son from his own great throbbing heart—away from the courts of heaven—to dwell with sinful men. This was his means, and he gave it freely.

Jesus Christ placed the second gift on its altar. Love led him on his mission. In Gethsemane it inspired him to say: "Thy will be done." From the Roman cross its divine accents mingled with the words: "It is finished." His gift, also, was dear. It cost him agony and blood. He gave his life freely, a ransom for all.

The third gift falls to the part of humanity. Unenlightened by Divine truth, the human race bestows its gifts erroneously. All who have received the oracles of God have this stumbling-block removed. The first knock at our door says: "Give me thine heart"—that is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." God demands the supreme homage of the heart for his own glory. This every individual has the means of giving. The second knock says: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." He likewise demands that through the heart his grace shall flow forth from man to fellow-man, as a means that "whosoever will" may "take the water of life freely." This is the gospel dispensation, and embraces our chief work—our labor of love—in maintaining and carrying onward this glorious cause, that it may prosper wherenuto it has been sent. Instead of the opposition and persecution that Christianity had to undergo sixteen hundred years ago, from far and from near are borne to us the inviting tidings: "Come over and help us." How much for which to be thankful!

All along the line of redemption's plan gifts are the means. Then, whether it be in our power to preach as a Paul, or to give as did the poor widow; whether we have an "alabaster box" to pour on this altar or not, let us go forth, our hearts inspired with the boundless love of Christ, and "sow beside all waters," doing unto others as we would have them do unto us, that they may come out of the darkness into the light.

"God's love hath to me wealth unbounded;
Only by giving is it retained.
The body withers, and the mind,
If pent in by selfish rind.
Give strength, give thought, give deeds; give pelf,
Give love, give tears, and give thyself."

Gone Home.

Rev. J. J. Blanz, pastor of Soraparu Street German Church, of this city, died May 11. Intestine disorder resuscitated an old kidney's complaint, soon causing "the silver cord to be loosed, the golden bowl to be broken, the pitcher broken at the fountain, the wheel broken at the cistern." His end was peace. Shortly before his demise he assured me that Jesus was precious to his soul.

Bro. Blanz was a native of Wurtemberg, a stronghold of Pietism—a country from which Methodism has secured more recruits than from any other part of Germany. Pietism, planted there by Ph. J. Spener, that eminent divine and reformer, is a half-sister of Methodism, and lacks but the aggressiveness of the latter to be identical with the same. A quarter of a century ago Bro. Blanz came to our Crescent City, and soon connected himself with Craps Street Church, holding the office of Sunday-school superintendent for a number of years. Backslidden, in 1878 he came near dying with yellow fever. Having prayed with him at his bedside, he assured me that if the Lord would restore him to health he would certainly comply with the call to the ministry, which, as had been known only to himself, he had resisted for a number of years. He recovered; found a renewed baptism of the Holy Ghost; was licensed to preach, and in November, 1882, joined the German Mission Conference. For three years he was pastor of our German Church in Lake Charles. He was now serving the second year in Soraparu Street German Church. By the action of our General Conference he became a member of the Louisiana Conference during its session at Ruston. The departed attained to the goodly age of sixty-five years, and leaves an aged widow, and eight children, all of whom are married, to mourn his loss. Soraparu Street Church is disconsolate. The members were enthusiastically attached to him.

Our presiding elder, Rev. J. T. Sawyer, and the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Dr. Carter, assisted me in the solemn obsequies.

Our Best Every Day.

Our best every day. Is this too much to demand of ourselves? Do we feel that it is too much of a strain to be always at concert pitch, that while we are willing now and then to do something tremendous, to put forth a spurt and make a spring forward, yet such an impulse can not be expected of us every day?

In a very suggestive little essay bearing the significant title, "Blessed Be Drudgery," W. C. Gannett says: "Drudgery," by which he means simply doing one's best, one's level best—pardon the slang—every time, "is the gray angel of success. Look at the leaders in the professions, the solid men in business, the master workmen who begin as poor boys and end by building a town to house their factory hands, they are drudges of the single aim 'One thing I do.' Mr. Maydole, the hammer maker of Central New York, was an artist. 'Yes,' said he, 'I have made hammers for twenty-eight years.' 'Well, then, you ought to be able to make a pretty good hammer by this time.' 'No, sir,' was the answer, 'I never made a pretty good hammer—I make the best hammer made in the United States.'"

If we have anything to do it is worth while to do it in the best way. The editor is always on the qui vive that the number on which he is now at work may surpass any number that he ever sent out in his life. The minister forgets the sermons of last week in his endeavor to preach straight into the souls of his people to-day. The pedestrian's anxiety is to beat his past record. The housekeeper is not content with having cleaned house last year. She is doing it over again now, and more thoroughly than ever.

If we are serving the Master, doing our best for him every day, he will not say to us, sadly: "I have somewhat against you. You have left your first love." They do not leave their first love who every day do their best for Christ and humanity. Their words and ways and actions tell—tell for eternity.—Christian at Work.

Men in middle age, in the thick of the battle of life, need religious principle and character to enable them to bear the strain of busy life and to consecrate the energy of their manhood to Christ's service. In business there are temptations to selfish departures from strict honesty. In politics there are temptations to time-serving and recreancy to principle. In the pressure and strife of life's activities, there is danger of forgetting God's claims upon the allegiance of the heart, unless men have a religious faith that yields peace and power. In this strife with difficulties there are disappointments and annoyances, in which men require the balm of divine consolation to soothe their perturbed spirits.—Christian Guardian.

(Archbishop Trench.)

In the common things of our daily experience, a sheep which could wander away from, could also wander back to, the fold. But it is not so with the sheep of God's pasture: this could lose, but it could not find itself again; there is in such a centrifugal tendency, and of necessity the wanderings of this sheep could only be further and further away. Therefore, if it shall be found at all, it shall only be by its Shepherd going to seek it; without this, being once lost, it must be lost forever.

(Dr. Howard Crosby.)

The liquor seller is a vampire feeding on the blood of the manual worker. He has neither conscience nor heart. He grows rich by drawing the earnings of the poor to his till, and then calls himself the friend of the poor! He sees families ruined by his diabolical trade, and when they are ruined he drives them from his door. He gathers to his den all the elements of disorder—the thief, the prostitute, the obscene talker, the profane swearer, the murderer, and the anarchist. His bar is their favorite haunt, and thither the police always go first, when they wish to arrest a criminal. This accursed pest of our city must go. And when we give up our foolish party politics, fellow-citizens, in our municipal affairs, it will go. Nothing else but these absurd divisions among honest citizens gives the saloon a day's grace.

(Rev. W. M. Johnston.)

To the traveler who makes for Jerusalem by the northern road, which was consecrated not once nor twice by the sacred feet of the Holy One, Jerusalem lies, or appears to lie, at indefinite distance. One hill is climbed after another, and the hills are rolled and tossed, as it were, so as to conceal the prospect and outweary the impatient pilgrim. This is a true picture of the promises to most, and of Christian life to all. There is no Pisgah sight. Gifts and trials rise and fall like these common hills, and we have now and then felt that it is somewhat commonplace and very dreary. But each hill that hides the future is like God's general dealing with us. He sends troubles, sorrows, and joys, not in couples, but singly. They may run close, but they never run together. One is the preparation for the next. Each trial gives us new strength; each blessing new humility and gratitude.

(Dr. Charles Hodge.)

Eternal life is said to consist in the knowledge of God, and of Jesus Christ whom he has sent. To impart this knowledge, is the work of the Spirit. He enables us to see the glory of God as it shines in the face of Jesus Christ. It is this discovery which produces holiness. "By beholding" his glory, we are transformed into his image from glory to glory. When Christ was thus revealed to Paul, he was instantly converted from a persecutor into a worshiper of the Lord Jesus. And this is the history of every conversion from that day to this. It matters not to the blind that the heavens are flooded with glory, or that the earth is clad with beauty; and it matters not to the spiritually blind that God has clothed himself in flesh and dwelt among us. But when the Spirit opens our eyes, then the beatific vision breaks in upon the soul with all its transforming power; then we become new creatures in Christ Jesus.

(Dr. A. G. Haygood.)

Somebody writes: "We do wrong to teach our children that they have souls; we should teach them that they have bodies." This is the true statement. We begin wrong. To teach a child that he has a soul is to teach him that his body is he; we make the soul a something that he owns. It would be as wise to say of a man's coat. This coat has a body. No, it is the body that has the coat. The body may wear out and lose and bury or burn its coat, and itself live on. So the soul uses, wears out and lays aside its body, and itself lives on—imperishable, immortal.

No wonder, with such teaching as we give our children, that they are mortally afraid of death. We make it black to their thoughts with needless horrors. We mourn our departed ones as if they were really gone out of existence, as if they were non-existant. It is the pagan-ism that lingers in our thinking that makes death a horror. Not one word of Christ's justifies such thinking, or the customs that grow out of it.

(Archdeacon Farrar.)

Consider how, even in this unheroic age, missions have kindled new stars, large and lustrous, in the galaxy of sainthood. Consider how, while missionaries were spreading the truth abroad, they were also flashing love and zeal into dead hearts at home. Think how much poorer the church of God would be without the inspiration of their heroic examples! Think what it means, that there should have been additions to the glorious army of martyrs in the noise and emptiness of such days as these. High and heroic was the example which they left, an example which pleads, trumpet-tongued, to us against the seductions of a sleek and slothful life. It is worth much more to the church as an inspiring force than a million pompous ceremonies. It is the true apostolic succession of inspired personalities, of men who have felt upon their heads the hands of invisible consecration. It is an immortal incentive to inspire the faint with courage, the cold with love.

THE CALLEY OF SILENCE.

BY FATHER RYAN.

In the hush of the valley of silence
I dream all the songs that I sing;
And the music floats down the dim valley,
Till each finds a word for a wing,
That to hearts, like the dove of the deluge,
A message of peace they may bring.

But far on the deep there are billows
That never shall break on the beach;
And I have heard songs in the silence
That never shall float into speech;
And I have had dreams in the valley
Too lofty for language to reach.

And I have seen thoughts in the valley—
Ah me! how my spirit was stirred!
And they wear holy veils on their faces—
Their footsteps can scarcely be heard;
They pass through the valley like virgins,
Too pure for the touch of a word.

Do you ask me the place of the valley,
Ye hearts that are harrowed by care?
It lieth afar between mountains,
And God and his angels are there;
One is the dark mountain of sorrow,
And one the bright mountain of prayer.

The Sunday-School Lesson for May 29, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, O. D.

THE RED SEA.

Exodus xiv, 19-31.

GOLDEN TEXT: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee."—Isaiah xliii, 2.

CONNECTIVE AND EXPLANATORY.

The Sunday-school lesson for May 22 left the Israelites in a state of thorough readiness, and in momentary expectation of marching orders. Their loins were girded about, their shoes were on their feet, their staves were in their hands. The last terrible visitation of Jehovah was held over the Egyptians. It was to overwhelm them with the conviction that God's people must go, and that the gods of the heathen could not stand against the one living and true God. At midnight "the angel of death spread his wings on the blast," and there was not a house where there was not one dead, "from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne to the first-born of the captive that was in the dungeon." This utterance in blood of outraged justice and long-suffering divinity effectually secured the result intended. Pharaoh rose up in the night and called for Moses and Aaron, and said: "Get you forth from among my people" with your people and flocks and herds, and serve the Lord as ye said. "Be gone; and bless me also." The old spirit of hatred and tyranny, ready to break out if it dare, is plainly seen in this declaration. There is also expressed a mortal dread of other and more terrible visitations, and, still further, a reverent recognition of the supremacy and goodness of the God of Moses: "Bless me also."

"The children of Israel went out with a high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians." It was the most imposing pageant, in many respects, which earth ever witnessed; over three millions of people slowly and solemnly moving forward in a regularly prescribed order, with their flocks and herds—all led forward by the mysterious proportions of the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night. The mysterious procession was invested with even more suggestive solemnity because the sarcophagus containing the embalmed body of Joseph was borne along. Where the guiding pillar stopped, the host encamped. The first day's journeying was to Succoth, simply a camping ground or place of "booths," as the name signifies. The second day brought them to Etham, in the edge of the wilderness, and the third to Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the sea.

Scarcely had sufficient time elapsed for the sepulture of the first-born, and the public mourning of the dead, before Pharaoh's abject humility gave place to a desire for revenge, and he gathered together "all the horses and chariots and horsemen and army," and pursued the children of Israel and overtook them as they were encamping by the sea at the close of their third days' march. The Israelites, forgetting all the displays of Divine power in their behalf, and the signal victory achieved by Jehovah over their oppressors, and mindful only of the host with banners and spears pursuing them, and of the deep and wide sea in front of them, betrayed their craven spirit by crying out: "It is better that we should serve the Egyptians than that we should die in the wilderness." Moses stilled their murmurings by saying to them: "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord."

THE CLOUD.

Verses 19, 20. "The Angel of God." None other than the Angel of the covenant, the second person in the blessed Trinity who guided the children of Israel through all their pilgrimage. Here he made the pillar of cloud to remove from their front and go to the rear, that it might screen them from their enemies. It was a guiding light to the one and a bewildering darkness to the other. God can make the same thing a blessing and a curse. Paul says of the gospel: "To the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life." The Holy Spirit takes the place of the fiery and the cloudy pillar, and engages to guide the Christian in the way of all truth, and to take the things of God and show them unto him.

THE RED SEA.

Verse 21. "Moses stretched out his hand over the sea." The place on the Red Sea where the children of Israel crossed was near the northern end, within a few miles of modern Suez. Bruce and other travelers in the East say that the place of crossing was about twelve miles over, and that the water was about eighty feet deep. "The potent rod of Amram's valiant son" was simply the instrument through which the Almighty appointed unto the sea its decreed place, and said to its proud waves, Thus far shalt thou come, but no further. The "strong east wind" dried up the bottom of the sea so that the children of Israel could walk over upon the dry ground.

22. "The waters were a wall unto them on their right hand, and on their left." In Exodus xv, 8, it is said: "The floods stood upright as an heap, and the depths were congealed in the heart of the sea." The strong east wind may have frozen the water, or Almighty power may simply have upheld it. Both methods would have been miraculous, and one as easy as the other. Infidels may say that the whole account of passing the Red Sea is false, and thus subject themselves to the charge of purblind unbelief; but when they undertake to account for it simply upon natural principles, then they are obnoxious to the charge of stupidity also. Nought but that Power which made the sea and the dry land could have so long suspended the law of gravitation which causes water to seek its level, and to have made it pile itself up as a mountainous heap.

THE EGYPTIANS DESTROYED.

Verse 23. "The Egyptians pursued, and went in after them." "From the darkness caused by the intercepting cloud, it is probable that they were not aware on what ground they were driving. They heard the sound of the fugitives before them, and they pushed on with the fury of the avengers of blood, without dreaming that they were on the bared bed of the sea."

24, 25. "The morning watch." Calmet says that this was four o'clock in the morning, or very nearly daylight, as the exodus began at the vernal equinox. "The Lord looked * * * through the cloud * * * and troubled them." If this means no more than the cloud suddenly became luminous and disclosed to the astonished gaze of the Egyptians that they were actually underneath the bed of the sea, and the waters were standing up around them to the perpendicular height of eighty feet, this would be cause of trouble, indeed, even to the quakings of despair. The frightened horses, the frenzied drivers rushed hither and thither until the removal of their chariot wheels and the heavy dragging ominously proclaimed their doom. "Let us flee from the face of Israel; the Lord fighteth for them." The Lord had been fighting for them with dreadful execution, but it had all been lost upon them; and now, alas! it was too late to flee. The blindness of these Egyptians seems incredible; yet sinners who heed not the repeated warnings of their Creator are just as inexcusable. "He that being often reproved and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be cut off, and that without remedy."

26. "The Lord said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand, that the waters may come again upon the Egyptians." The same implement, the same agent, the same power made the same medium to be a salvation to his chosen people and a destruction to his enemies.

30. "The Lord saved Israel; and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the shore."

"Round the head Ombrel over Egypt's dark sea;
Jehovah hath triumphed, His people are free."

31. "The people feared the Lord, and believed the Lord, and his servant Moses." Perhaps there was more fear than faith. They were overawed by the terrible demonstration; they could not help believe what they had seen and heard. But when we think how soon that faith absolutely failed, and gave place to murmuring against Jehovah and threatenings against his servant; how soon they forgot their strong Deliverer and bowed down to a golden calf, we are convinced that faith extorted by fear can not stand against tribulation. "Because thou hast seen me thou hast believed. Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."

"Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples; and they are written for our admonition." Israel's God is ours. Their fallings may warn us, and their triumphs encourage us. We have a guide as unerring and as ever-present as was the cloud by day and the fire by night.

"Thus present still, though now unseen,
When brightly shines the prosperous day,
Be thoughts of thee a cloudy screen,
To temper the deceitful ray:

"And, oh! when gathers on our path,
In shade and storm, the frequent night,
Be thou long-suffering, slow to wrath,
A burning and a shining light!"

The Sardis District Conference.

The seventeenth session of the Sardis District Conference, of the North Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, convened at the Methodist Episcopal Church, Batesville, Miss., at 8:30 o'clock A. M., Friday, May 6, 1887, Rev. S. M. Thames, presiding elder, in the chair. Conference opened with religious services conducted by the presiding elder. T. P. Hill, secretary of the last session, being absent, Rev. K. A. Jones was appointed temporary secretary. The roll of the charges being called, all of the pastors and one or more delegates, with one exception, from each charge were found to be present.

The business of the Conference consumed two entire days, with intervals for religious worship at 11 o'clock A. M. and 8:30 o'clock P. M. The reports from the different charges, taken together, contain much to encourage all those who are working for the Master. They show the spiritual condition in the church in the district to be good and on the increase. Prayer meetings are kept up at most of the appointments, and a great deal of interest manifested. Sunday-schools of long standing are flourishing, and some new schools have been organized. All of the charges, with about two exceptions, reported in good financial condition. One fact gleaned from the reports is very noticeable. Where the fewest church papers are taken, and the least money spent for church literature, there do we find less interest in prayer meetings, Sunday-schools and the general work of the church, spirituality at its lowest ebb, and the greatest financial depression, or lack of earnest support towards the great enterprises of the church.

On motion of Rev. J. H. Hunter, Rev. K. A. Jones, Rev. T. C. Wier and Dr. A. S. Yarbrough were appointed a committee to formulate a plan for the more efficient and systematic management of the missionary work.

The committee reported the following resolution:

Resolved, That, as a District Conference, that we memorialize the Annual Conference to require by resolution, or otherwise, that each pastor in the bounds of the Conference make quarterly reports to the treasurer of the Board of Missions concerning the missionary status in the respective works.

The report of the Committee on Education, having been presented and adopted by the Conference, able and stirring addressess relating thereto were delivered by Rev. T. J. Newell, president of Grenada Female Institute, and Rev. G. H. Hodge, both of the Grenada district. Reports of the other committees were duly made, presented and adopted by the Conference, but are too lengthy for insertion here.

I will give special mention to the report of the Committee on Temperance. The pastors of the different charges were requested by the chairman of the Temperance Committee to give him in writing the status of the cause of temperance in their respective works. The report of the committee, supplemented and supported by these pastoral reports, shows that intemperance and crime are on the decrease; and that the Sardis district is, in fact, a temperance district. The reports touched the hearts of the Conference and filled them with praise and thanksgiving. After reading the reports a brother arose and struck the first word and note of our long-meter doxology. The Conference and the audience at once arose and sang with a gushing spontaniety and unction I never before witnessed.

After the reading and adoption of the reports of committees, the Conference went into the election of delegates to the Annual Conference, which resulted in the election of the following: Hon. G. D. Shands, P. T. Callicut, W. W. Perkins and J. B. Boothe; alternates—Rev. P. B. Jones and Dr. J. W. Sharp.

Coldwater, on the M. and T. railroad, was selected as the next place of meeting.

A resolution was adopted that the secretary furnish a synopsis of the proceedings to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

On Saturday night addresses on the cause of missions were delivered by Rev. T. C. Wier and Mrs. C. N. Terry, and a collection was taken up.

Resolutions of thanks were tendered the citizens of Batesville for their Christian hospitality, and to the authorities of the Baptist Church for the use of their house of worship, which was to be and was occupied by one of our preachers the next day, Sunday; when there were morning and evening services in both the churches, and in the Methodist church the usual Conference worship and services were also held. Rev. K. A. Jones preached the last sermon of the Conference on Sunday night, and Conference adjourned with the benediction.

J. B. BOOTHE, Sec.

Woodville District Conference.

MR. EDITOR: The Woodville District Conference met at Centreville, April 14. There was an unusually large attendance. The handsome new church was on the verge of completion and afforded ample room for the Conference. On Sunday, after a masterly and appropriate sermon by the Bishop and a collection of over six hundred dollars—enough to finish it—the house was solemnly set apart to the worship of God. This was very gratifying to all concerned, and especially so to the ladies who had been struggling so manfully to get it ready. The responses to the call for money were prompt and generous. The reward came in a gracious outpouring of the Spirit, and an accession of about twenty-five members to the various churches.

Bishop Duncan commended himself to all by an amiable firmness in conducting business, by his practical discriminating instructions, and by his godly advice in church affairs. In a truly ecclesiastical body there is no gavel like a word of love. It is "an apple of gold in a picture of silver." Rev. J. A. B. Jones, presiding elder, was present, aiding the Bishop: seems to have his work well in hand and thoroughly upon his heart. The reports generally give promise of a successful year. On the borders there is an overflow of missionary enterprise into "regions beyond." Since the Conference, Dr. Hoyt, evangelist, has held a meeting at Gloster, ten miles above Centerville, resulting in about forty-seven accessions to the churches, mostly Baptist. Was it ever on this wise before?

The good people of Centerville deserve praise for the hospitable and Christian entertainment of the brethren. Centerville is both plucky and liberal. There was a word of complaint, however, from one friend. He said they had promised him some preachers, but they had sent him only some Malays. Whew!

I see you remonstrate against praising the sermons of preachers; else I would exhort after some of the good sermons we had on the occasion from J. W. Brown, J. V. Penn, C. W. Carter, D. D., T. C. Bradford, etc., and the good speeches from the visitors and the laymen. Just let me say, however, that your sermon on "He that thinketh himself to be something when he is nothing," was somewhat of a disappointment to at least one person heard from, in that it was just a plain, simple gospel sermon. What can you do about it? Did you not think yourself to be "something"? This writer once remonstrated with a colored brother, after an intensely perspirational effort—a regular "nothing-to-nobody"—on the score that he was not understood at all. He replied "Why, dat's de way to do it. You must confound 'em, and den make 'em alive." A word to the wise is sufficient.

The delegates elect to the Annual Conference are: Hon. H. C. Newsom, Joseph Millican, Jno. F. Cassells, R. S. Austin; alternates—W. F. Roberts, M. D., and Rev. Archie White.

There were fifty-two new subscribers to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and sixteen renewals. These speak golden words for our paper. The Conference was a spiritual feast, a delightful reunion, a practical benefit, and left a fine impression.

The next session will be at Clinton, La. T. W. BROWN.

(The editor regrets that the above communication came in his absence, and his sub. had so much on his hands that he neglected to publish it.—ED.)

Consecrated Poverty.

After reading an article in the Nashville Advocate, on "Per Capita," in which the writer is commenting on the disposition of both preachers and people to laud large gifts and minify small ones, I thought I would say thus: that Southern Methodism has very few men who are able to give large gifts; and if we expect to bring out the resources of our people, we must pay more attention and accept with better grace their small gifts.

During my ministry in '85 a lady of education and refinement gave me for foreign missions the most precious money I remember to have received for any object from any person since I became a preacher. It was a two-dollar-and-a-half gold piece. The lady said to me as she gave it, while the tears gathered in her eyes and her voice grew tender: "This money belonged to my little boy who is now dead. I don't know of a more fitting cause to devote this to than to missions; besides we are poor, and find it hard to pay our assessments as promptly as we like. Take this, Bro. B., and give to the missions you think it best to give to." Our prayers and her tears enhanced the value of this gift in the sight of God, I believe, more than the thousands of a rich, but careless giver. Who knows but that money wielded by the Spirit may accomplish more in the conversion of Mexico than untold wealth from the hands of another. (The money was given to the Mexican Mission, I think.)

Another instance occurred on board the train coming down from our last District Conference at Centreville. Dr. Adams had just made a speech for Centenary College, calling on the brethren for substantial help, in the shape of notes, bearing interest, to endow the college. Others had already given their obligations for hundreds; but this man had just enough money left when he reached Wilson to buy his dinner. Some one asked him if he intended to get his dinner. "No," says he; and, rising, he passed over to Dr. Adams and handed him the price of his dinner, remarking as he did so that he could do without his dinner for the cause of education. I conscientiously believe this money was all the cash he had in the world. Acts of self-denial like this become heroic, and when they become general will accomplish great things for the advancement of religion. Let us insist on each member of the church giving something, and these small gifts in the aggregate will amount to more than the large gifts; besides, they will develop the grace of giving in the hearts of our people.

An English nobleman, addressing Dr. Jabez Bunting, said: "What is Methodism, Mr. Bunting?" "Methodism, my lord, is justification by faith, and a penny a week," said the Doctor. And that is what we need—a "penny a week" from each member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The financial burden of the few who are willing to pay is getting too heavy for them, and something must be done to equalize the burden. While one pays, ten are thanking God for a free gospel. SYSTEM ATTIX.

From the Work.

FULTON AND SMITHVILLE.

MR. EDITOR: We have raised our entire assessment for foreign missions ($75) on Fulton and Smithville charge, North Mississippi Conference, and will forward to Dr. Kelley in a few days. I never had an easier time collecting for foreign missions. God be praised!

Yours truly,

G. W. CORDON.

MAY 6, 1887.

WEST END, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have something of interest, I think, to place in the ADVOCATE under the head of "From the Work." When I came to my work here in January, I found that the church had not been plastered, but it was being ceiled overhead and painted. A short time after that we had it plastered, and in six weeks from that time I organized with nine members. We have been moving on "slowly, but surely." I began a meeting the fourth Sabbath in April, and it continued till last Thursday, May 5, which resulted in six accessions, and the membership greatly revived—some of them talking in experience meetings, and the ladies, who are a class always ready to work for the cause of Christ, working at the altar with those seeking to know the way of life.

Bro. Norsworthy, my beloved presiding elder, was with me part of the time; also Bro. McVoy preached for me one night, and Dr. Black one, who gave to the congregation the "wonderful words of life" with power. I will not leave out the name of Bro. R. A. Cody, of the C. P. Church, who aided us greatly by preaching and working at the altar. He, in his labors, will be honored of God. The principal help I received was from that deeply pious and consecrated man of God, Bro. Peebles, of Newton. One who hears him "preach the Word" will be constrained to say, Surely he is sent of God. He was instrumental in doing great good in West End which eternity alone will reveal. Preaching with the Spirit of God attending his sermons, he greatly edified the Christians, and sinners were convicted while he was delivering to us in plain-spoken language of the gospel. I have done but very little for the ADVOCATE as yet; hope to have it circulated at large before Conference. Collections small, though I have over one-fourth of my foreign mission assessment collected. I have on the church record now twenty-eight members. The other part of the work is moving on slowly. Sunday-schools very well attended. Hoping to give you a better report next time, I will close.

Yours fraternally,

ROBT. SELBY, P. C.

CONSHATTA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: On Friday, the fifteenth of April, we commenced a protracted meeting at Conshatta, which continued until Wednesday, April 29. Bro. George Mandeville opened the service Friday night with an excellent and very impressive sermon (and also preached several other times). Bro. J. M. Beard reached us on Tuesday, the nineteenth, and preached every night except Saturday night until he left us the following Wednesday week. He preached with great power and held his audiences almost spellbound to the last sermon, which we think was the best. The sermon on Sunday night produced quite an interest in the missionary cause, for we raised (in cash and subscriptions) seventy-five dollars for missions, and eighty-six dollars and seventy-five cents for the other Conference collections. The collections and subscriptions were not all. There were four adults received into the church, four children baptized, the church very much revived and the community profoundly and, we trust, favorably impressed towards an interest in religion. To God be all the praise.

Yours in Christ,

R. A. DAVIS.

DOWNSVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: There are some encouraging features in the Downsville charge. Some improvement in prayer and class meetings. A large increase in Sabbath-schools. Three have united with the church—two by letter and one by profession. We have had a large number of penitents at our regular services, and the general interest seems to be deepening. I have preached on missions, and although the treasurer of the parent Board called for our collections by the first or middle of April, I have two churches yet to see. I have gotten so far, by cash and subscription, without the Woman's Missionary Society, $66 50. I am hoping and working for larger results. Two subscribers and several renewals to the ADVOCATE.

Death of Charles Wesley.

Rev. John Telford, in the Quiver, writes this of the death of this sweet singer of our Israel:

On March 29, 1788, the sweet psalmist of Israel died in Chesterfield street, at the age of eighty. For some months he seemed loosened from earth. He spoke very little, and wished to hear nothing read but the Scriptures. The February previous he had been reduced to a state of great weakness, but was still able to go out occasionally. His brother, who had bidden him good-bye, set out for Bath. They were to meet no more on earth. Mr. Wesley wrote, suggesting that he should get out every day, and urged him to spare no expense. But nature was utterly exhausted. Mr. Wesley also wrote to his niece about his brother: "I wish he would see Dr. Whitehead. I am persuaded there is not such another physician in England." Dr. Whitehead was called, and has left this interesting record: "I visited him several times in his last sickness, and his body was indeed reduced to the most extreme state of weakness. He possessed that state of mind which he had always been pleased to see in others: unaffected humility, and holy resignation to the will of God. He had no transports of joy, but solid hope, and unshaken confidence in Christ, which kept his mind in perfect peace."

Every lover of Charles Wesley's poetry has been touched by the dying effort of his muse. For some time he had been lying quietly on his bed. At last he called for Mrs. Wesley, and asked her to write the following lines at his dictation:

"In age and feebleness extreme,
Who shall a sinful worm redeem?
Jesus, my only hope thou art,
Strength of my failing flesh and heart;
O could I catch a smile from thee,
And drop into eternity!"

On Saturday, March 29, his happy spirit fled. Through the whole week the restlessness of death had been upon him. He slept much without refreshment. On Tuesday and Wednesday he was not entirely sensible. His end was what he particularly wished it might be—peace. "No fiend," he said to his wife, "was permitted to approach him." Some one observed that the valley of the shadow of death was hard to be passed. "Not with Christ," was his answer. He spoke to all his children with affection and hope of their salvation. Samuel Bradburn sat up with him the night but one before his death. His mind was calm as a summer evening. On the Saturday, all the family stood around his bed. The last words which they could catch from his lips were, "Lord, my heart, my God!" With his hand lying in his daughter's, the old saint passed home so gently that the watchers did not know when the spirit fled. It was afterwards ascertained that John Wesley was in Shropshire, and at the moment of his brother's death he and his congregation were singing Charles Wesley's hymn:

"One army of the living God,
To his command we bow;
Part of his host have crossed the flood,
And part are crossing now."

He Would Not Pay a Cent for It.

A gentleman in Birmingham, Ala., seventy-five years of age, who had suffered with gout for thirty years, was recommended by a friend to try the Compound Oxygen, but he had so little faith in it that he "would not pay a cent for it." This friend then sent for a Treatment and he consented to try it. At that time he was suffering with intense pain in knees and feet: the latter much swollen. Was greatly emaciated and had been prostrated for weeks at a time. A few weeks since this friend visited him, and then wrote as follows:

COLUMBUS, ALA., June 15, 1886.

"I have just returned from visiting Mr. Ward, and was highly pleased to find him greatly improved. He and his wife are in high spirits. He has had a terrible time for months. Feet, hands, ankles, and knees had been terribly swollen. For months and months he had not been able to have even a part of a night's sound sleep. After commencing the Home Treatment he had one of his worse spells for two or three days, and had given up all hope even of the Compound Oxygen. But he stuck to it. The first of last week he got one night's good refreshing sleep. When he awoke the next morning he said to his wife, 'I have had a good night's sleep for the first time in months. But this is only temporary. I fear I shall not be able to sleep any to-night.' But he did, and every night since he has slept well. He told me, on Sunday, that his hands were in their natural shape now, for the first time in many months, and that he believed the swelling in the knees and ankles would now subside, as they were itching a great deal."

In the Treatise on Compound Oxygen can be found a full history of the remedy, and a large list of many more such interesting cases, which will be sent free by addressing Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Pure in Heart.

Almost every one appreciates the duty of governing the tongue, although few people dwell upon the necessity of controlling the thoughts. Right speaking is a recognized duty, but right thinking is too often classed among the impossibilities of life.

"It may be wicked to feel so, but I can't help my thoughts," apologetically says some detractor.

The excuse is a generally accepted one, but it has not sufficient foundation in fact.

Isolated thoughts can not always be controlled. They flash into the mind like obstinate sprites, and the more one fixes the attention upon them in disapproval, the more impossible does it become to expel them.

It is, however, within the limits of human effort to control the tendency of the thoughts. When a malicious or frivolous member of the tribe starts into being, they can be best combated, not by out and out fighting, but by turning instantly to another class of valuable and interesting reflection.

The mind may be so thoroughly disciplined that its thoughts shall be drilled battalions of soldiers. They will doubtless be always raw troops, not marching according to strict military rule, and not in all cases sure to obey upon the moment, but they will steadily improve with practice, conforming themselves more and more to the true and the good.

Physiologists have a great deal to say about the force of habit. Dispose the brain toward a certain line of thought, and it will keep it with increasing steadiness for purely physical reasons. It has its automatic action, as the fingers have theirs, when they so accustom themselves to seeking the keys of the piano that they find them without the aid of the eyes.

The discipline of the thoughts contributes to the intellectual as well as moral development. There are in all lives unoccupied intervals of time—when one is riding to and from his place of business, or taking his "constitutional," for example. He can not read or study to advantage at such moments, but instead of letting the mind drift whither it will, he can fix it upon the last poem he has read, or upon some truth from an author of value.

But, after all, intellectual development is of small value as compared with that of the moral nature. The study to which every one should lend the greatest energy is that of uprooting all evil from the heart and mind, denying shelter to whatsoever is not absolutely pure and true.—Youth's Companion.

The Sweetest Girl in School.

"She's the sweetest girl in school!" enthusiastically exclaimed one young miss to another as they passed down the street together. "Edith is so kind and gentle and unselfish, every one likes her. And she has lovely golden hair and pretty eyes. Isn't it a pity her complexion is so bad; it spoils her looks. And then she has such dreadful headaches!" The girls skipped along, but it happened Edith's mother had heard what they said. It set her thinking. What could be done for those headaches and the rough, muddy complexion, that was such a trial to her gentle daughter. She recalled what she had read of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and on the spur of the moment she slipped into a drug store and bought a supply. Edith took it faithfully, with the result that it cleared her disordered blood, relieved the headaches, made her skin soft, fair and rosy, and now she is not only the "sweetest girl in school," but the most beautiful.

Never Too Soon.

Why do young people so frequently put off thoughts of religion till a future day? Do they imagine that they are too young: too young to be delivered from the guilt or sin, too young to be made happy in the love of God? Do they consider that the present time is too soon? Too soon to be doing right, and serving one's Creator and Benefactor? Would any young man exclaim, "It is too soon for me to be honest and truthful; too soon to be loving to my parents, and kind to my friends?" How, then, can it be too soon to be true to God and grateful to our Maker? Few ever think it too soon to gain the favor of men, much less of men who can do them great service; how is it that they talk of its being too soon to be in favor with God? The hand of the enemy of young men's souls is in all this.

If a fortune were to come into a young man's way to-morrow, we do not believe he would refuse it on the plea that it was too early for him to be rich. If he could be promoted to an honorable situation in Her Majesty's service, we do not believe that our young friend would decline it because it came to him too early in life. We have heard complaints of the slowness of promotion in the civil service, but we never yet heard any man say he had risen too rapidly. Truly good things ran hardly be obtained too soon: for the earlier they come the longer time remains in which to enjoy them. In spiritual things we may fitly use the world's old proverb, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." True godliness is best with the dew upon it. Those who begin with God betimes shall see cause for gratitude in this matter as they exist.

We advise those who have been long hoping, to decide at once for Christ and holiness. You have halted too long between two opinions. Decide! Decide! It is ill to stand by the hour together looking at a feast; why not sit down and enjoy it? Who wishes to postpone happiness, and put off peace? They do this who delay the seeking of pardon, and tarry long before accepting the blessings of free grace. "It is better late than never," says one: say rather that, "It is better in such matters never to be late."—Spurgeon.

Methodism has won its victory, whatever form or organization it has adopted, by seeking men in their homes by day and by night, on week-days and Sundays, and presenting to them the few fundamental doctrines of the gospel of Christ. The zeal of its ministers has been that singleness of purpose and sense of responsibility which the Holy Spirit has impressed on their hearts. They have not made the ministry a profession, a respectable means of providing a livelihood. Did they not believe that they held a commission from Christ as well as the church, they would have chosen other fields of usefulness. For they have said to every temptation, Woe is me if I preach not the gospel. And men have believed that they had a message from God, and have listened, and thousands have been saved. The conditions have not changed in any respect that calls for a change in our methods. It is still our duty to seek out the lost and bring them to Christ.—Central Christian Advocate.

I Owe My Life.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

"Could not move!

"I shrunk!

"From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters.

"Directly my appetite returned, no pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles, I was not only as sound as a dollar, but well I quote more than I did before. 'To Hop Bitters I owe my life.'"

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1886. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headache."

Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure, until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle
Nearly cured me;"

"The second made me as well and strong as when a child.

"And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious

"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint.

"Pronounced by Boston's best physicians "incurable!"

Seven bottles of your Bitters cured him and I am well.

Hardened Liver.

"Five years ago I broke down with kidney and liver complaint and rheumatism.

"Since then I have been unable to be about at all. My liver became hard like wood; my limbs were puffed up and filled with water.

"All the best physicians agreed that nothing could cure me. I resolved to try Hop Bitters; I have used seven bottles; the hardness has all gone from my liver, the swelling from my limbs, and it has worked a miracle in my case; otherwise I would have been now in my grave.

Briefs.

Mr. Spurgeon's Home Sunday-school has 108 teachers, all members of the church, and 1,428 scholars.

According to the third quarterly report of the Woman's Department of Church Extension, there have been organized 92 parsonage societies. The total number of members reported is 1,595; but as 16 societies did not report the number of members, the total number must be near 2,000. Miss Helm, the secretary of this Woman's Department, is doing good work for the church and deserves the co-operation of all the sisters. The church needs a parsonage on every circuit and in every station. The workman and his family are worthy of a comfortable residence, and "these women," having taken the matter in hand, will work together until that desirable end is attained. "Help those women!"

The Louisiana State Sunday-school Association, on Friday and Saturday last, held its annual meeting, in this city, at Carondelet Street Church. Only a feeble delegation from the country parishes, but quite a good attendance from laity and ministry of this city. The president's annual report showed a fine work for the past year. There are two missionaries employed: one by Dr. Palmer's congregation, in this city, and one by Dr. T. L. Cuyler's, in Brooklyn, N. Y. A third missionary is to be employed, and we hope this time a Methodist will be appointed. The report made to the National Association in 1884 showed that this State had only four per cent. of its population in the Sunday-school, which was less than any other State.

The following appropriations for our mission work were made by the Board at its last session in Nashville: Brazil, $28,876; ver. $7,865; German Mission, Central Mexico, $32,768; China, $26,007; Columbia, $5,275; Den- $5,000; Florida, $3,375; Indian Mission, $10,975; Japan, $9,930; Los Angeles, $4,250; Mexican Border, $27,943; Montana, $1,740; Pacific, $4,150; Northwest Texas, $1,750; West Texas, $1,750; Western, $2,300; schools in Mexico, $3,200; printing for missions, $3,000. This makes about $180,000 to be raised by our people for sustaining the missions that we already have. This is such an insignificant sum to be raised by a million of Christians, that the Board resolved to assess the church the sum of $300,000 in order to pay off the present indebtedness of the church in this matter, and be in a condition to enter any new fields that may open. Let the universal desire and effort of everybody be to raise this year of grace, not $300,000, but $500,000 for our mission work. We can do it.

There is food for reflection in the statement, recently made in a New York daily, that about one-half of the insane people in the United States are of foreign birth. The annual cost for the maintenance of each unfortunate is $110, which foots up a sum exceeding $5,000,000 yearly. Add to this the prison, almshouse and hospital bills for our alien population, and the aggregate becomes stupendous. Add to this the enormous exodus which has just set in hitherward—greater than the capacity of the regular lines of steamers—and our economists will wonder whether the country can long stand such a strain upon its resources.—Zion's Herald.

Editorial Correspondence.

When Dr. McFerrin took charge of our Publishing House, as agent, in 1878, the concern seemed to be hopelessly in debt. Indeed, very few persons had any faith in its recovery from the losses of former years, and everybody looked with anxiety upon the effort to restore its business to the confidence of the church and country. But those in charge of its affairs went resolutely to work, and by wise measures and prudent conduct of the business it began to grow again in favor and to enlarge its operations and to pay off its indebtedness. The progress in these directions has been so sure and so steady that to-day the House stands upon the firmest foundation and enjoys the confidence of the commercial world. The last showing of the authorities is to the effect that the House is able to meet all its outstanding liabilities, and yet retain to its credit between $50,000 and $75,000 in cash. This has certainly been a great work, and the church should pass a rising vote of thanks to the men who have conducted this matter to such a successful issue, and stand up and sing the Doxology to Him whose gracious providence has been so manifestly helpful in this effort of the church to rid herself of the incubus of debt.

The Board of Missions met last Friday. This Board is composed of representative men from every section of the church, and they were nearly all present at roll-call. The reports of the secretary and treasurer show that the cause of missions is growing in importance. New fields are opening, and the old cry is heard from many quarters, "Come over and help us." But while doors are opening and millions of human beings are asking for the gospel, the Board finds itself unable to enter new fields for lack of funds. With a heavy debt pressing upon it, and the wants of the missionaries already at work demanding all that has been collected, the Board could not conscientiously make appropriations for the establishment of new missions. This is a sad case: the heathen world opening everywhere for the entrance of the gospel, and yet the church authorities unable to enter for lack of means! When will it be pressed into the conscience of the individual Christian that he owes as much to support the gospel abroad as to support the gospel at home? In view of the present state of affairs the Board determined to open no new missions, and yet it was compelled also to refuse to allow anything for the growing wants of our present operations. How we can hold our own without growing is not clear to me. If we do, it will simply be an evidence of deadness.

Saturday night last, I took it in my head to attend a meeting of the "Salvation Army." My host and his wife accompanied me. We were early in the hall and took seats well up to the front, that we might see what manner of persons attend these meetings. There were several mottoes painted on the walls, among which we read: "Salvation for the drunkard;" "Delay may be too late;" "Heaven is real, and so is hell;" "Heaven for the righteous, hell for the wicked." When the hall was about half full, "the Army" marched in, preceded by the standard bearer with flag, the band carrying half dozen tambourines and a cornet. When they reached the platform all knelt in silent prayer, after which a stirring song, with chorus, was sung. The tambourines and clapping hands kept the time, and the cornet rang out in the chorus. Suddenly everyone fell to his knees and a prayer was offered, and while upon their knees another spirited song was sung. I confess that this opening of service thrilled me through and through. By the time this was over the hall was crowded with people. The major then read a Psalm and commented on it. The point of comment was, the willingness of God to save now, and the duty and privilege of accepting salvation now. At this point the captain—a young-looking woman—took charge of the proceedings. She gave a good talk and called upon her comrades for testimonies; and several spoke. Here I was impressed with the similarity to our love-feasts. Those who spoke did so in simple words, telling again the old story how Jesus found them in their sins and delivered their souls. During this part of the services there were interspersed little snatches of song. After this was concluded the captain remarked that there could be no religious meeting without a collection—to which I very readily agreed—and she proceeded to take it up herself. Then a song of invitation, and penitents were invited to the altar. I did not see any go up. I looked at the people in the hall and concluded that the most of them were not church-going people, and that this "Salvation Army" is reaching people here and telling them, in their way, the story of Jesus and his love; and if they did not hear it from this "Army," they would never hear it. And so I remembered what Paul said: "Whether in pretence or in truth, Christ is preached: and therein do I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice." If these people are saving souls, though their methods offend the taste of the cultivated, who will have the temerity to forbid them? One thing seems to be conceded by everybody, and that is, this "Salvation Army" is reaching and affecting a class of the communities which is beyond the reach of the present methods of the churches. They are rescuing the perishing; and who shall say their nay? Not I. If their tambourines and cornets can attract the attention of a sinner long enough to get the gospel story into his ears, then the Holy Spirit will have a starting point for his gracious work; and I say, let them beat the one and blow the other.

Sunday I had the pleasure of hearing a fine sermon from Bishop Wilson at McKendree. The Bishop's health is entirely restored, and he looks better than I have ever seen him. His subject was: "One Probation, and the Gospel Provisions to Meet Its Needs." The statement of points was clear, the argument was forcible, the illustrations were pertinent, and the conclusion was climactic. The new theology was brought to the test of the Divine Word, and signally failed. I came away with faith much strengthened in the teachings of our holy religion, and fully persuaded if a man does not use this probation to secure his salvation, he is doomed world without end. God's righteousness demands that the believer be saved and the sinner lost, and that is the end of the 'whole matter!

At Elm Street Church, at night, I heard a sermon from Bishop Key on, "Mary's Anointing of the Lord." The discourse was delivered very earnestly to a most attentive congregation, and was well received. This makes the second Sunday spent in Nashville, and they have been days of real religious enjoyment.

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 8, 1887.

The third commencement of Kavanaugh College begins with a sermon by Dr. F. M. Featherstun, of Brandon, Miss., on Sunday, June 12. Monday and Tuesday following will be occupied with class essays and orations, meeting of the curators, and commencement exercises. The programme is full and inviting, and you are invited to attend.

Pearlington, Miss.

A short ride on the Louisville and Nashville road to English Lookout station, and then a forty-five minutes trip on a little boat up the placid waters of the Pearl, late in the afternoon of last Saturday, brought us to Pearlington to spend "Children's Day" with Bro. Dominick and his flock. If the railroads do not annihilate space after awhile, it will not be the fault of enterprising engineers. We are such a pushing people, that the wonderful rapidity of to-day's transit becomes intolerably slow tomorrow, and, like the French Emperor, in his flight from the disaster of Moscow, we are continually crying, "Faster, faster." A few years ago this trip of two hours would have consumed several days. "Whereunto this thing will grow" no one can tell; but some now living may see the day when Mark Twain's prediction about New Orleans and St. Louis coming together will be fulfilled. As short as the ride was, it was a pleasant and refreshing close to a weary week of toil. The breeze, created by the little tug panting its way through the clear waters, fanned care from the brow and sent the cooled life-current with slackened pace back into the heart chambers, and thence carried to the whole nature a physical serenity of most positive enjoyment. It was as delicious a ride of three-quarters of an hour as we have had in a long time.

Pearlington nestles prettily among the live-oaks on the east bank of the Pearl river, about eight miles from its mouth. It is a town of about 1,000 inhabitants, and is sustained by the lumber business, in which a large trade is carried on. We had anticipated a fine day for the children's service; but the Sabbath morning was full of rain, of which there was great need, so the service was postponed until evening. The exercises of the evening were pleasant and profitable, the children and grown people enjoying themselves and contributing to the fund for needy Sunday-schools throughout the land. At the night service the house was well filled with attentive hearers, and the gospel was preached in its simplicity. Bro. Dominick's charge has been much revived, he having received some fifty or more new members lately. The Sunday-school is doing good work. The young men's prayer meeting and the weekly prayer meeting are well attended, and the financial outlook is hopeful. We had the pleasure of enjoying the hospitality of J. A. Favre and family, and came back home with pleasant memories of a Sabbath spent in Pearlington.

Observations on Education in Boston.

I visited Boston University. Dr. W. F. Allen, the president, was in Europe furnishing pabulum to the fleas of Rome. Dean Dunnington (?) received me kindly. They have an elegant building. The seats, blackboards, teachers' platforms and desks are of the best style and quality. The recitations which I heard were very poor.

First I went into a room where the professor was instructing (?) the Freshman class in elocution. The first part of the performance consisted in an attempt on the part of this professor to induce certain pupils to make extempore speeches. This duty had been assigned to the pupils about a week ago, as I learned from the professor's comments. Two young men made attempts; one of them spoke very haltingly on the value of mathematics as a means of mental training. His sentences ended in r-er; but he hung on a long time, and said what he proposed to say with many r's in addition. He praised the value of committing mathematics. The professor's comments had something in them; but they were not, by any means, examples of clear thinking or elegant diction; and, most remarkable of all, his manner of delivery was awkward. This seemed to me a capital fault in a professor of elocution. The next young man broke down and took his seat after uttering a few sentences of his extempore. The professor showed some disposition to rasp him, but did it timidly, and made the impression on me that he was rather afraid to exercise authority. After this all the young men and young ladies whom he called on declined to speak. Then the professor called on them to read short extracts from a reader they had brought to the class-room. This exercise was as crude as the other. This is a co-education institution. I do not know any Southern college or university, except Vanderbilt, that has as nice rooms and furniture as this Boston University, and yet I felt proud by comparison of those Southern institutions in which I have heard Freshman recitations. There was in the exercise throughout a conspicuous absence of vigor, of mental tension, of intellectual awakening.

Afterwards I visited the Boys' Latin School. This is a large school sustained by the city, and is preparatory to Harvard College. The English High School and the Boys' Latin School occupy different parts of the same building. I am not writing too strongly when I say the structure is magnificent; the appointments, complete and elegant. The libraries for the different departments are ample and in separate rooms, the scientific apparatus far better and more extensive than that possessed by any Southern college with which I am acquainted. It was declamation and military drill day for the English Department. I witnessed a part of the drill. There were probably three or four hundred in the battalion, elegantly uniformed, many of them decked out with badges of honor, like those conferred by Her Majesty on the brave veterans of the wars with India. The military evolutions were all performed in grand style and with beautiful precision. There was one drawback: it reminded me.

I went to hear the first year's students in Greek. They were reading Xenophon's Anabasis. I knew when I had heard a few lines that the teacher is a master in reality. I have rarely heard, if ever, clearer definitions, more exact rendering, nicer distinctions by a class of boys at that stage of advancement. These boys have two years more in Greek at this school before they apply for admission to Harvard. The preparatory course in Latin is five years. By the time they enter Harvard they have given us many years to Latin and Greek as the graduates in our Southern colleges generally.

Now, let me say a word, by way of comparison, about a school kept by Southern gentlemen in Tennessee. I refer to the school of the Messrs. Webb. I heard some classes in Latin and some in English. These gentlemen throw more vigor into their work and call forth more rapid and active mental response than any teachers I have heard on this trip. There is a warmth, life, power and mental tension that are in the highest degree favorable to intellectual development of pupils, and that constitutes the highest evidence of tact and learning on the part of the teachers in the Webb's School. The Messrs. Webb evidently exercise more authority than any teachers I have seen. Their methods of dealing with boys are bold and sometimes seem rather rough, and yet I would not say that they were unwise. In the other schools I have visited I saw great carefulness—not to say, timidity—when it came to holding boys up to the proper performance of duty. It may have been due to the feeling on the part of the teacher that his conduct is subject to revision by a higher authority. The stimulus to the boys of the Boston Latin School is evidently the Harvard entrance examinations.

Maybe more hereafter.

Church Schools.

MR. EDITOR: You know that one paragraph in my recent article on church education ought to have read thus: "How would it do for the Conferences to have in each parish, or county, or presiding elder's district a preparatory school," etc.

I hope that the great importance of the subject, and the deep interest I feel in godly education as the only sure foundation for the future hopes of both Church and State, will be sufficient apology for again asking a place in your columns to further outline the plan I suggested, hoping that some good system may be matured and inaugurated to supply the great desideratum.

With district preparatory schools, under the management of Boards elected by their respective District Conferences; and State Colleges, under the management of Boards elected by their respective Annual Conferences; and one central university, under the management of a Board elected by the General Conference, could we not have a grand system of education, which our church might work harmoniously and successfully for the rapid and glorious advancement of both Church and State? The university could supply the colleges with presidents and professors, and the colleges could supply the preparatory schools with teachers, etc.; and in return, the district schools could furnish scholars to the colleges, and the colleges send up graduates to the university for still more thorough education—such as might be able, and desire to prosecute their studies further. What a power our church might thus become for good in the promotion of the kingdom of God on earth, conducing to the good government of State and the general prosperity and happiness of mankind!

Some godly system of education brought within reach of far more youths of the land, and then far more of the masses reached by practical and Holy Ghost preaching, is the sine qua non of the stability of civil liberty and good government, as well as the achievement of the high mission of the church. And what a large and grand opening for usefulness our church could thus make for really pious and efficient young men, by inaugurating all these schools! And what an inestimable benefit and blessing to the whole country at large to build up and run successfully good schools within the reach of all the youth in the land! "What the harvest would be" only the "recording angel" would be able to tell at the last day.

Open Air Gospel Meetings.

There will be held during the summer interesting gospel meetings in the various portions of the city, under the direction of the City Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. A meeting is now in progress at Gouldsboro; and the Christian people of the city are invited to come over and lend their assistance to its success.

Through Eyrich, 130 Canal street, we have received T. B. Peterson's reprint of Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate." Having never seen the original, we can not say whether this is a correct copy; but we can say that it is a beautiful picture and well worth the price. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal street.

Notes.

We call your especial attention to this sentence from the report of the Hardis District Conference, on the second page of this paper. Read it, brother preacher, and ponder its significance. "One fact gleaned from the reports is very noticeable. Where the purest church papers are taken and the most money spent for church literature, there do we find less interest in prayer meetings, Sunday-schools and the general work of the church, spirituality at its lowest ebb, and the greatest financial depression or lack of earnest support towards the great enterprises of the church." This fact being made known in open Conference, brother, what is your duty in the premises? And yet a brother, in this same paper, after six months of the Conference year are gone, writes: "I have done but little for the ADVOCATE as yet." Of the above sentence from the report of the District Conference, is a true statement, then when the brother writes "I have done but little for the ADVOCATE as yet," he says that he has done but little to foster "prayer meetings, Sunday-schools and the general work of the church." We urge our brethren to quit using the phrase, "Work for the ADVOCATE." When they are endeavoring to procure subscribers for the paper, they are doing work for every enterprise of the church. If they could get that idea into their heads—oh! if they just could get that idea into their heads!

Read the following from the Methodist Times, of London:

The circulation of The War Cry now exceeds a quarter of a million, and that of The Little Soldier is 70,000. The Salvation Army authorities stated some time ago, that this magnificent result is due entirely to the ceaseless efforts of their soldiers to push the sale. If left like other newspapers to take their chance on the bookstalls, the circulation would be insignificant. Some day other Christians will have as much sense as the Salvationists, and will realize that there is no way in which they can help their churches more effectually than by ceaselessly pushing the sale of newspapers which represent them. There is nothing which Methodists need to realize so much. The circulation both of this journal and of The Methodist Recorder are simply ridiculous when we remember that there are two millions of Wesleyan Methodists in this country. Every Methodist above twenty-one years of age ought to buy one or other of the Methodist journals, and if he has an income of thirty shillings a week, he ought to buy both. How can anyone take an intelligent interest in the work of God unless he knows what is going on, and reads both sides? Too many of our people take no interest whatever in anything beyond the four walls of their own chapel. John Wesley did his utmost to interest every Methodist in the whole Methodist Connexion. Nothing will do more to emancipate us from narrow ideas and defective methods than to compel ourselves to take a healthy interest in everything that our brethren are doing everywhere.

The saloonists of Michigan did not gain much of a victory after all, or, at least, the victory is a barren one. They spent a great deal of money to defeat the prohibitionists, and now the said prohibitionists are about to turn the tide. The Legislature has passed and given immediate effect to a bill providing for the appointment of a State marshal, with power to appoint a force of deputy State marshals throughout the State, whose duty it shall be to enforce the liquor law. The design is to rigidly enforce the liquor laws in Detroit and other large cities. The cry is everywhere rising in unmistakable tones, "Down with the saloon." It is the cry of patriotism and humanity, and it is getting to be a terrible cry in the ears of the liquor dealers.

Our brethren of the Wesleyan Connexion in England have started out to "solve the insoluble problem of the great cities" on this platform: Let all the stations in each city lay aside rivalry and selfishness and combine together to establish and support new chapels and missions in growing suburbs and neglected districts. This idea is being carried out in the London Mission lately inaugurated by the Wesleyans in London. In this great and wicked city of New Orleans our Methodism is endeavoring to work upon the same plan, and some success has been already achieved. One great hindrance to success is the rivalry existing between the churches. If churches could all combine to fight the devil, what might we not expect!

Delicate Children, Nursing Mothers, Overworked Men, and for all diseases where the tissues are wasting away from the inability to digest ordinary food, or from overwork of the brain or body, all such should take Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. "I used the Emulsion on a lady who was delicate, and threatened with Bronchitis. It put her in such good health and flesh, that I must say it is the best Emulsion I ever used."—L. P. WADDELL, M. Personals.

Dr. Potter, of the Wesleyan, seems to question our statement that the "majority of those who are graduated from our schools are not Christians," and has called upon Georgia educators for statistics. We will be more than glad if he proves our statement incorrect; but he ought to have had his statistics in hand when he declared that we had made a "random deliverance"!

It pains us to record the death of Rev. Malachi DuBose, a local preacher at Lake Providence, La. In his early life he was an itinerant preacher in the Louisiana Conference. In 1852 he settled in Lake Providence, and began the practice of law, which he continued until a few years ago. He was seventy-six years old. He was highly respected by all who knew him. We trust some of our brethren will prepare a suitable memoir for the ADVOCATE.

In regard to the visit of Rev. Mark Guy Pearse to this country, the Methodist Times (London) says this: "The main object of Mr. Pearse's visit is to awaken intelligent and prayerful sympathy with the London Mission. It is our settled policy to give money a subordinate place. We appeal first to the heart and conscience of universal Methodism. When they are reached, the purse will be opened, when so far as God may indicate."

Dr. Walker, of Louisiana Avenue, has been holding special services during the past fortnight; and there have been seven additions to his church.

Rev. C. H. Rowell, of the South Carolina Conference, died May 2. He was an "earnest and impressive preacher, and a devoted and unusually successful pastor."

Prof. Drummond's book, "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," has reached, in England, the enormous sale of 50,000.

Bro. Bowen writes to our publisher that his wife's health does not improve at Holly Springs, and he intends to return to the coast. He expects to be in attendance at Seashore Camp Meeting.

Senator Vance, of North Carolina, has a volume of poems going through the press.

Prof. Barbour, of Yale, has accepted the presidency of the Congregational College of British North America.

Samuel C. Bartlett, Jr., son of President Bartlett, of Dartmouth College, has accepted the position of assistant instructor in English at the American Missionary Board's Training-school at Kioto, Japan. He will sail from San Francisco, September 1.

The types made us say last week that there were twenty-two students in Wesley Hall, Vanderbilt University, studying for the ministry. It should have been seventy-two.

Dr. Joseph Parker has postponed his visit to this country until autumn.

D. L. Moody proposes to erect a training-school in Chicago for women city missionaries.

W. C. DePauw, the founder of DePauw University, Indiana, died, of apoplexy, in Chicago a few days ago. It is said that in the past eighteen years he has given to charitable objects about $2,225,000.

We have grace enough to acknowledge our errors when we see them. The Southwestern Methodist has kindly pointed out our error in the matter of the number of church members it took last year to convert one soul. We said 16,000, when we should have said sixteen. But we fail to see any error in the statement "that it took 2,800,000 members and 25,000 preachers and an enormous amount of church machinery one whole year to convert 175,000 people."

Rev. J. W. McLaurin, of the Mississippi Conference, has been appointed agent of the American Society for Mississippi and Louisiana, with headquarters in this city. He arrived here last Monday morning, and entered upon the duties of his office. Address: Bible House, Camp street, New Orleans.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for post-office orders or registered letters.

Items of Interest.

It was stated in the Baptist Convention, at Louisville, that Southern Baptists contribute eight cents per capita for foreign missions.

A brother made this statement in the Baptist Convention at Louisville: "The French-speaking people of Louisiana are growing tired of the yoke of Catholicism, and stand ready to throw off the demands of the priesthood." A little too optimistic!

Memphis is stated, by a newspaper correspondent, to be the second cotton market in the country. In a year or two more she will push New Orleans for the first place.

Philadelphia has a lady lawyer, a lady on the Board of Education, and two ladies on its School Board.

Bradstreet's publishes a lengthy article, in which it is shown, by reports from 1,500 shippers, manufacturers and merchants from different sections of the country, that thus far the long and short-haul clause of the Interstate Commerce Bill does not merit the denunciation it has received.

Eight young men (colored) of Fisk University, Nashville, have given their names as ready to go to Africa as missionaries.

The Emperor William has survived seventy-two neighboring sovereigns who were his contemporaries in Europe, and twenty-one presidents of the United States.

Mr. Powderly, the head of the Knights of Labor, has made the statement that the true interests of American labor demands a restriction of foreign immigration.

The town of Baldispe, in Mexico, was entirely destroyed and one hundred and fifty persons killed by the recent earthquake.

From the various colleges of the United States, 187 candidates are reported as offering themselves for the mission fields.

The Illinois House has passed a bill prohibiting the playing of base ball "on the first day of the week, commonly called 'Sunday,'" making disobedience to the enactment a misdemeanor with from $10 to $200 fine, and also fining the owner or lessee of the grounds permitting the game to be played.

The earnings of seventy railroads, per mile, during March of this year were $412 against $397 in 1886.

The Texas Anti-Prohibitionists have opened fire upon the "Protestant priesthood" by accusing the preachers of the gospel of all sorts of villainies. That is the sure road to secure the success of prohibition.

Our House, at Nashville, has sold 50,000 Disciplines in a year. That's a good straw.

The women of England are preparing a memorial to the Queen in favor of Sunday closing. Sheets have been sent out for obtaining three million names; and the work everywhere is being taken up with energy.

The tallest man in the world is an Austrian named Winkelmeier, aged twenty-two, and eight feet, three inches in height; and on exhibition in London.

Temperance Notes.

There are 9,197 licensed liquor saloons in New York, against 8,557 one year ago.

Of the 53,409 arrests made by the Police Department of Philadelphia, last year, 23,302 had direct whisky relations.

Since prohibition went into effect in Raleigh, N. C., the largest saloon in that city has been turned into a shoe factory, which will employ more persons than all the dram shops in the city.

Bills have been passed by the Legislature of Delaware raising the age of protection to fifteen years; prohibiting the sale of impure literature, and making scientific temperance instruction compulsory in all public schools.

It is reported that the United States Brewers' Association have pledged to contribute $1,000,000 to the Texas campaign, if the liquor dealers of the State will raise $500,000.

The United States liquor traders have agreed to raise, by a trade tax, $1,500,000 for political purposes in 1888.

The New York Liquor League spent $32,000 to have the $1,000, or High License Bill pass the Legislature.

A correspondent to the Omaha Bee says: "Omaha, with a $1,000 license, uses more whisky than any city of its size in the world."

Open air services have been held during the past week in Greena with some success. Several of the city pastors preached to crowds of people who are unaccustomed to hear the gospel. The attendance at these meetings has been good indeed, and good has undoubtedly been done. The mission opened yesterday in Gouldsboro, and will continue for a week. The purpose is to hold these open air meetings in all parts of the city during the summer.

Mississippi Notes.

Gov. Lowry has appointed John Purnell, of the firm of Robbins & Purnell, chief health officer of Warren county, and has sent on his commission.

The first shipment of tomatoes from Summit was made on Saturday last. They were shipped direct to Kansas City.

Whitworth is to have twenty-four graduates this year.

Wesson is to have a public library.

The Water Valley railroad shops have recently received orders for 250 cars.

The jail at Raymond is to be repaired at a cost of $1,750.

A Building and Loan Association was organized at Greenville, last week, with a number of the best business men at the head of it.

It is estimated that about $35,000 have been received in Crystal Springs during the last two months from the fruit and vegetable industry; and the business has just commenced.

A collision on the Mobile & Ohio railroad, near Shubuta, between an engine and a passenger train, wrecked the engines and killed the fireman; no injury to passengers.

Yalobusha county is suffering for want of rain, and it is feared that the cotton crop will be a failure.

Judge Sylvanus Evans, who was appointed chancellor by Gov. Lowry to fill the unexpired term of Chancellor Geo. Wood, whose death caused a vacancy in that office, has been reappointed by Gov. Lowry for the full term of four years.

The change of schedule on the Mississippi Valley road has produced a great deal of dissatisfaction throughout the State.

Mr. J. R. Ryan, superintendent of the Patton Mines, has bought the Columbus Gas Works, paying $23,500 in cash.

The first ripe apples and tomatoes of the season were shipped from Crystal Springs on May 16.

Louisiana Notes.

Monroe shipped by railway the past season over 22,000 bales of cotton, and by steamboat over 17,000 bales.

The contract for grading the railroad from Gibbsland to Homer has been let; and the road, it is said, will be ready to haul the next crop.

The Teachers' Institutes were held in Lafayette and Ruston, last week.

The Police Jury of Acadia have resolved to give the people of the new parish a $10,000 court-house.

The contract for the building of the railroad from Shreveport to the Arkansas State line by Col. Fordyce was signed at that city, on the fourteenth, by a committee of citizens, and forwarded to St. Louis. According to contract, the road will be completed March 1, 1888.

The Acadia Parish and Homestead and Loan Association was organized at Crowley on the sixteenth.

The Teachers' Institute was formally opened at Lake Charles on the eighteenth, and will hold daily session during the week.

All trains on the Mississippi Valley road leave New Orleans in the evening, according to the new schedule.

Notice.

To the Woman's Missionary Societies in the Brookhaven District:

As the time for holding the annual meeting of our Conference society draws near, we would urge each auxiliary to send a delegate. I trust everyone in the bounds of the Brookhaven district will be represented at Enterprise. Our meeting promises to be one of unusual interest, as we hope to meet not only the beloved president of the Mississippi Conference Society, but our general president, Mrs. Hayes, and our young missionary, Miss Bettie Hughes. Please send the names of delegates to our corresponding secretary, Miss Annie Linfield, at Wesson, without delay.

S. G. WEEMS,
Secretary Brookhaven District.

Opelousas District, Louisiana Conference.

The Opelousas District Conference will convene in Franklin, commencing Thursday afternoon, June 16, 1887. Bishop Keener will preside. The preachers are expected to have the Bishop's and educational collection in full.

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

The Patent Crowned Pulley Covering, as applied by Mr. R. W. Ellis, sole agent, 666 Magazine street, is designed to prevent the slipping of a belt. It has just been applied to the ADVOCATE'S machinery, and seems to work well.

Notice.

Will the superintendents of all the Sabbath-schools of all denominations in the State of Mississippi please forward to my address statistics of their several schools? As statistical-secretary of the State Sunday-school Convention, I desire to report to the National Sunday-school Conventions; and in order to do this, must have the statistics by the twenty-fifth of this month. Will the pastors of the various churches please call attention to this matter, and oblige,

W. J. GALLAWAY,
Statistical Secretary.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.—Cottage No. 75 for sale. W. B. Thomson, 61 to 70 South Rampart St., New Orleans.

A fashion journal says there is a knack in putting on gloves. Come to think of it, that is so. You have to get your hand in, as it were.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.—Elsewhere may be seen the advertisement of the great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street. Certainly he has every reason to feel proud over the great popularity of the celebrated Mathushek Pianos. Some sixteen years ago he introduced here these celebrated instruments, and they have been tested and are pronounced superior in every respect. The prices and terms of this popular piano dealer are such as to attract all buyers. Mr. Werlein has also a number of cheap pianos and organs at such low prices that you would be surprised after seeing them. Write or apply to this great Piano House, and you will see what a bargain you can get.

"A woman is a good deal like an accordion," says Lawrence O'Reilly. "You can draw her out all right, but the music begins when you try to shut her up."

In another column will be seen the advertisement of W. R. Sloan, offering a special inducement on choice strains of Plymouth Rock chickens and settings.

Ditson & Co.'s Sunday School Music

ranks with the very best, and no Sunday School manager need should adopt a new Singing Book without carefully examining one of their "tried and true" Sunday School Song Books.

Voices of Praise (40 cts., $4.20 per doz.) Rev. T. L. Harbins. Music and poetry dignified and classical, but not dull; in fact, bright and enthusiastic. Very large collection for the money.

Singing on the Way (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) by Mrs. Jewett, ably assisted by Dr. Hollibaugh, whose noble compositions are known and loved in all the churches. This, like the book above mentioned, does excellently well for a Vestry Singing Book for prayer and praise meetings.

Songs of Promise (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) H. Tenney and Rev. E. A. Hoffman—the first highly gifted, musically, and the second the author of many hymns of refined and beautiful quality. One of the newest books.

Song Worship (35 cts., $3.60 per doz.) L. O. Emerson and W. F. Sherwin, both celebrated compilers, composers and leaders, and the latter well-known as having had charge of the music at many Chautauqua meetings.

For other good books, please send for lists and catalogues.

For a lovely little book for the young children of a Sunday School, look no further than FRESH FLOWERS (25 cts., $2.40 per doz.) Emma Pitt. Sweet Hymns, Sweet Music, Pretty Pictures.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

Dyspepsia Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

Rheumatism Is undoubtedly a blood disease caused by an excess of the lactic acid in the blood. Where there is perfect filtration of the blood there can be no rheumatism. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA will remove the poison, supply the acids and relieve the pains.

Scrofula Is caused directly by impurities in the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, by purifying the blood, forces the impurities from the system.

Kidneys Through the Kidneys flow the waste fluid containing poisonous matter. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing pain in the small of the back and loins, flushes of heat, chills. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to resume their natural functions.

The Liver By irregularity in its action or suspension of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, e languid, weary feeling. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy Worm Confections, made since for the purpose of pursuing the public than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short lease of life is speedily exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sicken from no other cause than worms, and parents are most frequently the result of these hidden suppressed abusers. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing all or anything but, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indicative of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, but as surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge. Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be sure he gets the genuine, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is insufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. F. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. V. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

"Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

Our Young People.

MY DAUGHTERS!

BY S. T. WALKER.

I have two little daughters,
One is standing by my side,
And I look upon her beauty
With all a mother's pride.

Blue eyes, full of love's pleading,
Ringlets of sunny gold,
Lips like an opening rosebud;
Then half her charms untold.

I have another daughter,
But know not how she seems,
For she comes to me more to greet me,
Save in my happy dreams.

One morn the Savior took her
In his loving arms away;
But she is still my daughter,
And we shall meet some day.

So on this peaceful Sabbath,
One child's fair face I see;
But one is safe with Jesus,
And it is well with me.

Letter from Japan.

My Dear Young Friends of Felicity Street Church Sunday-school:

It has been a long time since I have heard from you, and it may be you do not know that I am now in Japan. I am glad to tell you the Lord is with us, and is blessing us in our work here among these interesting people. We commenced work in Hiroshima, two hundred miles from Kobe, about six months since, and now we have forty-eight on probation and many others almost ready to give us their names. We have a school there for women and girls, and now we have about thirty pupils; and each one pays fifty cents a month for their tuition. We have a Christian young lady, Miss Sugiye, as teacher, whose father is a physician. Mrs. Dukes has been there for some weeks teaching. We are wanting an organ very much for the school, which school we hope will be self-supporting. The numbers are increasing every day. Some of these ladies who come to our school are wives and daughters of some of the first families in the city, and we hope they will become Christians and wield an influence for good. Can you not pray for us and for them? If you could send us money enough, you do not know how much good it may accomplish. We have many little children there who are learning about the love of Jesus. I sent them some little cards a few days since, and the little prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," etc. I go down in a few days, and will write you again about the school.
